Carter asks 'clean-sweep' welfare plan

$39-billion price tag for jobs, cash program

PLAINS, Ga. (AP) — President Carter Saturday asked Congress to junk the welfare system and replace it with a $34 billion plan that moves able-bodied recipients into jobs and provides cash for those who can't work.

But Carter told a nationally broadcast news conference that neither he nor his Cabinet experts could say when the new system would achieve its ultimate goal of actually reducing the total amount of money the American people pay for welfare.

He expressed confidence that Congress would enact his program by next spring to become fully effective in the fiscal year beginning Oct. 1, 1980. He minimized his differences with key congressional committee chairmen and praised House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill for agreeing to set up a special welfare committee to handle the legislation.

Carter noted that another special panel in the House had helped him win passage of most of his complex energy program there Friday.

The president told the news conference the current system "is anti-work and anti-family, unfair to the poor and wasteful of taxpayers' dollars... There is no perfect solution for these difficult problems, but it is time to begin.

"We must make a complete and clean break with the past," Carter said.

He said that his system "stresses the fundamental American commitment to work, strengthens the family, respects the less advantaged in our society and makes a far more efficient and effective use of our hard-earned tax dollars."

The key to Carter's goal of encouraging the family to stay together is the abolition of the present "man-in-the-house" rule that disqualifies a family from welfare benefits if both parents are in the home.

Carter's plan would provide income support to families that need it even if there is a man in the house.

Key congressional leaders praised the goals of the president's proposals but indicated they had different ideas about how some of the specifics should work.

Sen. Russell B. Long, D-La., chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, commended the "laudable objectives" of Carter's plan. Rep. Al Ullman, D-Ore., chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, said he would work to enact Carter's general program but would try to change the formula for income supplements to the working poor.

Carter's proposal makes several major concessions to mayors, civil rights groups and other groups which had been consulted by the administration during the drafting of the plan.

The most surprising of these was his decision to discard his stated goal of keeping his proposed new system from being more expensive initially than the old one.

He said the new system would increase the spending by $2.8 billion over the $27.9 billion cost he attributed to the old system. However, this spending increase did not include an additional $3.3 billion

Leslie mistrial— jury deadlocked

By Linda Deutsch
Associated Press

A judge declared a mistrial Saturday in Leslie Van Houten's retrial on murder charges, when the jury reported it was hopelessly deadlocked in the case of the former Charles Manson disciple.

Jury foreman Bill Albee reported that the jury, in its last vote, was split 7-5 with seven favoring a first-degree murder conviction and five voting for conviction on manslaughter charges.

The 27-year-old Miss Van Houten, who could have won parole if convicted of manslaughter, appeared dejected when the mistrial was announced by Superior Court Judge Edward Hinz.

She seemed shaken earlier in the day when she came to court clad in a bright pink skirt and floral blouse, her hair in a topknot.

Her attorney, Maxwell Keith, had said earlier he would be pleased with a hung jury. "Worse things could happen," he said.

The jury had deliberated 25 days over a four-week period. The trial itself lasted 15 weeks, and it now appeared that Miss Van Houten could face a third trial.

The judge set Sept. 12 for a hearing to set a new trial date.

Both Keith and Miss Van Houten appeared stunned when they heard that five of the jurors had voted for manslaughter, the lowest degree of conviction they could have chosen.

"I was pleasantly surprised," Keith told reporters. "I didn't expect that so many would vote for manslaughter."

Asked how his client had reacted, he said, "She gasped."

Keith said he was not hesitant to defend her again in a new trial. "I'll be better; I've had practice," he said.

Asked what the strongest point of his defense was, Keith said, "I hope it was Leslie. It appeared that way."

Miss Van Houten, who once obeyed all orders given by cult leader Charles Manson, was convicted with him and two other women in a 1971 trial which attracted worldwide publicity. At that trial, the defendants presented no defense for their actions.

Only Miss Van Houten received a new trial because her attorney, Ronald Hughes, died on a camping trip during the first trial.

Keith, the gray-haired attorney who later took over her defense, mounted a strong argument at the second trial. He claimed that Miss Van Houten was not in her right mind when she went along on a mission of murder led by Manson.

Phone workers settle, strike off

WASHINGTON (AP) — A nationwide telephone strike by 700,000 employees of the Bell System was averted Saturday night by a series of contract agreements shortly before the midnight strike deadline.

The tentative settlements, subject to rank-and-file ratification, would provide a 31 percent increase in wages and benefits, union officials said.

President Glenn E. Watts of the Communications Workers of America, the largest of the unions with 500,000 Bell System employees, said the settlement was "in line with recent agreements in the steel and auto industries."

Other similar agreements covered 120,000 members of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers and 70,000 members of the Telecommunications International Union.

The final group to settle represented 50,000 IBEW-represented employees of Western Electric, the manufacturing unit of the Bell System. That agreement was announced only two minutes before the strike deadline.

The agreement with the CWA was reached after federal media-

Train, auto collide, 4 die

A woman and three children were killed Saturday when an Amtrak passenger train collided with a Volkswagen, authorities said. A man who survived the crash was undergoing surgery, but was in stable condition late Saturday, an Anaheim Memorial Hospital spokeswoman reported.

Police said the crash occurred at 8:10 p.m. at the intersection of Sycamore Street and the Santa Fe railroad tracks near Pauline Street.

An Amtrak spokesman said the 11-car train, known as "The San Diegan," was carrying about 300 passengers from San Diego to Los Angeles. Speed of the train was not determined.

The spokesman said the train, due to arrive in Los Angeles at 10:05 p.m. would be delayed until after midnight until coroner's deputies could examine the victims.

Thousands of acres ablaze across the West

Associated Press

A 70,000-acre fire dubbed Scarface roared toward two smaller blazes Saturday, threatening to produce an inferno covering 100,000 acres in California's timberland.

Hundreds more fires burned between the Rockies and the Pacific, and in Alaska more than 1.5 million acres were ablaze.

Alaska's forest and tundra fires were on a scale far larger than those in the lower 48 states. One fire alone engulfed 335,000 acres.

But about 95 percent of the land was tundra rather than forest, and the vastness of Alaska's wilderness softened the impact on people.

In California, where nearly 200,000 acres were ablaze by Saturday, fires were threatening timberland and the watersheds on which cities, industry and agriculture rely.

Water is already scarce. Most of the fires were started by lightning strikes in tinder-dry woods earlier in the week.

The National Fire Information Service in Boise, Idaho, said Saturday that blazes were burning in California, Colorado, Nevada, Oregon, Washington, Arizona, Idaho and Utah. That includes every state west of the Rocky Mountains except New Mexico, Wyoming and Montana, which have only small chunks of territory west of the Continental Divide.

The Continental Divide, which generally follows the Rocky Mountains, is a line separating streams and rivers that flow toward the Pacific from those that flow toward the Atlantic and Gulf of Mexico.

The huge Scarface fire in Northern California's Modoc County was ravaging sparsely populated timberland in the mountainous northeastern corner of the state near Oregon.

One nearby fire already covered 15,000 acres, the other 2,500 acres. It was estimated that if the three fires merged over the area now separating them, nearly 100,000 acres would be involved.

And, said Brian Barrette of the California Department of Forestry, "We don't know when it's going to stop."

"The winds picked up and all the fires came together," said Nancy Gardner of the U.S. Forest Service. "This thing's really taking

Q and A

She'll '86' you, but always with a smile

Jackie Krieg has been a bartender for eight months. Before that, she had been an airline hostess, an accountant, a bookkeeper and a cocktail waitress. She's sold life insurance, worked as a service cashier for an auto dealer, and, as she puts it, "I've done a little of this, a little of that, a little of everything."

She likes her current trade, but says she may get a real estate license. Whatever she does, she says, will have to be in the "people business" because she loves people and considers it among the highest honors to be able to serve people.

She's been behind the bar at Harold's Club, 958 Long Beach Blvd., for about three months and has tended bar at The Palace down the street. Like the typical bartender, she's known for her sympathetic ear. Unlike most, however, she's known for her plunging necklines. She was interviewed this week by Independent, Press-Telegram reporter Helen Guthrie Smith.

Q. What made you decide to become a bartender?

A. Oh, I don't know. It was just a job where I could be around people. I love people and I love serving them.

Mrs. Gandhi starts political comeback

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — Less than five months after her election defeat, Indira Gandhi has re-emerged into the political limelight. Newspapers and political sources say they see this as her first, tentative move toward a political comeback.

In recent weeks, the 59-year-old former prime minister has paid a well-publicized visit to one of India's aged spiritual leaders, made a few public statements critical of the new Janata party government and had a television interview with David Frost.

Last week, she visited areas of Delhi hard hit by monsoon flooding, paid a courtesy call on Prime Minister Morarji Desai, another on India's new president, Neelam Sanjiva Reddy, and listened to pleas from around the country that she again take active command of the defeated Congress party.

Her supporters in the party also staged a "comeback dinner" for Mrs.Gandhi last Thursday.

But party's president, Brahmananda Reddy, and its leader in Parliament, Y. B. Chavan, stayed away, prompting swift calls for Reddy's resignation in deference to what Mrs. Gandhi's supporters called the "wide popular support" for her.

On Friday, anti-Gandhi Congress party members regrouped at a dinner of their own to map strategy against what they perceived to be a danger to their ambitions within the party, which until the March election had governed India for 30 uninterrupted years.

Mrs. Gandhi's moves also sent shock waves through the Janata party and the Indian press.

"It's the same old show," one Janata leader complained. "During the emergency it was the poor who suffered, the industrialists who thrived. The villages now suffering floods were created by her government's scheme to beautify Delhi.

"But Indira Gandhi's still portraying herself as the champion of socialism, the poor and the downtrodden."

"The odds are still very much against Mrs. Gandhi," the Indian Express said in an editorial page analysis entitled, "Mrs. Gandhi's Comeback Trail."

"But if there is one thing Mrs. Gandhi has proved time and again in her political career, it is that she will not be daunted by the enormity of the task."

The Statesman, one of the most sharpest critics of Mrs. Gandhi's 11-year reign, maintained that one of her objectives is to protect her son Sanjay "from retribution" arising from investigations into his political and financial dealings during her 21 months of "national emergency" government that began in June 1975.

Sections of the Indian press have continued to reveal alleged cases of torture of political prisoners, forced sterilization of the poor and governmental corruption during the emergency.

Last week the government released a White Paper that accused Mrs. Gandhi's government of using censorship, suspension of government advertising and jail for 257 journalists in an attempt to turn the traditionally independent Indian press into a government mouthpiece.

The new Parliament has passed a resolution deploring what it called Mrs. Gandhi's "vile, authoritarian regime" with its "cynical subversion of democratic norms, the steep erosion of ethical standards and spiritual values, engineered by the then prime minister, Mrs. Indira Gandhi, and her gang."

Despite all this, Mrs. Gandhi's closest supporters claim "it's just Indian politics."

Sources close to Mrs. Gandhi say she has no intention of bowing to demands that she renounce her son Sanjay or take a more repentant posture.

"How can a mother renounce her son in public," one family source said. "As for public apologies, we've been surrounded by whining politicians for years. Who needs one more?"

ASPCA head man of rare wit, sensitivity

By JULES LOH
AP Special Correspondent

NEW YORK — The baby 'possum climbing up the back of Duncan Wright's chair and onto his shoulder was only mildly distracting, at least compared to the mynah bird screeching obscenities downstairs.

In this concrete jungle, Duncan Wright is the head of the American Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals.

Duncan, who contributed to the delinquency of that mynah?

"Somebody who thought teaching it filth was cute. It wasn't. It's another form of abuse. That bird can never have a home. It would get bounced from place to place as the novelty wears off. That's why it was brought here. I'll just keep it here."

And the 'possum. Will it find a home?

"No. A lot of people would want to make a pet of her but she's a wild animal. Her mother was killed right here in midtown Manhattan, can you imagine? There were 10 in the litter. Our problem is to see that we don't domesticate them. When they are old enough I'll take them south, probably Virginia, and turn them loose in the woods."

The irony of an urban 'possum, or even a trashy-mouth mynah, does not escape Duncan Wright. He is a man of rare wit himself, but of rare sensitivity, too, so the sadness doesn't escape him either.

Take Harvey. Harvey was brought to him because Harvey was mean. Harvey bit people. Harvey is a rabbit.

Duncan Wright, with a chuckle, designated Harvey as his personal Attack Rabbit and uses the beast to help raise money for the ASPCA. (At a fund raiser the other night at Madison Square Garden, Harvey bit three people, including basketball star Willis Reed.) But where others see only the humor, Duncan Wright sees reason for distress.

"Rabbits aren't born to bite. Somebody teased that rabbit and made him the way he is. The problem is not with the rabbit but with the person who would do that. The real problem is social."

That gets close to what motivates Duncan Wright, which is not just animals but all creatures great and small, especially people.

As a boy growing up in California, Duncan Wright never owned a pet. He graduated from Loyola University of Los Angeles as a physicist and worked at that profession for 20 years. At Loyola, though, he got something more than a degree.

"The Jesuits gave me two things. One was a sense of commitment to fundamental morality, the other a sensitivity to the obligation to commit myself to something. While I like animals, my commitment is to humanity in all its forms."

So Duncan Wright gave up physics seven years ago and last year moved to New York to head its ASPCA. Is that his idea of serving humanity?

"The ASPCA is criticized, I know. Some say all that time and effort would be better spent preventing cruelty to children, to people, rather than animals. You can't separate humanitarianism. It's all of a piece.

"A society that encourages abuse of animals, as ours does, will never solve its human problems. Turn your head when a kid throws an animal off the roof of a building, just for fun, and you can damn well bet that when he's 16 or 17 he'll be mugging people in the subway."

Duncan Wright's passion is understandable, but "encourages" does seem too strong a word.

"Not in the least. We kill 14 million dogs and cats a year because there's nothing else to do with them. Just bring them to the shelter, let somebody else do it for you, absolve yourself of the responsibility.

"Let the cat have kittens. Let the children see the miracle of life, I say, let them also learn about death.

"Parents get a dog for the kids to take to the beach on vacation, then leave it there when they come home. It happens all the time. It's the live-toy syndrome. Take a look at this."

He tossed a plastic ball the size of a cantaloupe into the air and caught it.

"You unscrew the top, like this, put a kitten inside, or a gerbel. Put the ball on the floor. Watch the frantic animal make it roll. If it doesn't roll, kick it. Amusing, no? Every child should have one."

Duncan Wright's voice lowered.

"It seems like a small thing. But a society unwilling to confront this will be unwilling to confront other social problems. We all want to uplift mankind, but without uplifting all creatures, how can we?"

It's hard to argue such a point with Duncan Wright. Also, unsafe. He might sic Harvey on you.

U.S. must hike role, says Vance

Combined News Services

AMMAN, Jordan — Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance said today that the United States will have to intensify its mediating efforts if a peace conference on the Middle East is to be held before the end of the year.

Vance said after talks with Jordan's King Hussein that there is "some narrowing of differences" between the Arabs and Israel.

But he said he agreed with the Arab view that the more that can be resolved in advance of a formal conference in Geneva "the better off we will be and the less likelihood that we will run into snags and obstacles."

Vance said at this midway point in his 12-day mission that he could see "some narrowing of differences on the issue of the nature of peace" but acknowledged he has made little if any headway on a Palestinian homeland.

Rhodesian blast kills 11

SALISBURY, Rhodesia — A bomb exploded in a crowded Woolworth store in Salisbury just before closing time Saturday, killing 11 persons and injuring 76 in Rhodesia's worst urban terrorist act. No one claimed responsibility immediately for the blast, but Rhodesian security sources attributed the bombing to black nationalist guerrillas. Police offered a $16,200 reward for information leading to the arrest of persons responsible. The dead included eight blacks and three whites. One of the dead was a black child. Two blacks remained on the critical list.

Churches OK rights fight

GENEVA, Switzerland — The World Council of Churches (WCC) Saturday wound up a 10-day meeting by approving a new program to "combat violations of human rights" throughout the world. The program specifically proposes intensifying "information networks" among member churches. In some cases, states a WCC report, there is "clear evidence" that the networks have "saved individuals and groups from torture or assassination by focusing interational attention on them at an early stage."

Red bloc hit on civil rights

WASHINGTON — The Soviet Union and Eastern Bloc nations have generally failed to live up to human rights commitments they made by signing the 1975 Helsinki agreement, says a congressional panel that monitors East-West relations. The official Soviet news agency Tass called the report "a collection of lies and slander." "The Soviet Union has shown a systematic disregard for civil and political rights, nowhere more evident than in the organized, punitive campaign of 1976 and 1977 against the very individuals who sought to promote respect for the Helsinki accord in the U.S.S.R.," the report concluded.

New aid credits OKd

PARIS — The world's rich nations agreed Saturday to offer $9.6 billion in new credit to poorer countries in balance-of-payments trouble. The extra credit facilities will be financed jointly by such industrialized nations as the United States and such wealthy oil countries as Saudi Arabia. "I hope we will have some increases in these amounts so we will have sufficient funds to meet the needs over the next few years," said H. Johannes Witteveen, managing director of the International Monetary Fund.

Panama backed on canal

BOGOTA, Colombia — Leaders of six Caribbean countries ended a day-long summit meeting Saturday by issuing a statement giving their support to Panama in its claim to the U.S.-built Panama Canal. The United States and Panama are scheduled to resume negotiations Monday in Panama on a new treaty that would give the Panamanians eventual sovereignty over the waterway. Under the current pact, signed in 1903, the United States has perpetual control.

Bomb hoaxes hit Belfast

BELFAST, Northern Ireland — Bomb disposal teams dealt with a series of hoaxes Saturday and 500 more British soldiers arrived to strengthen security for a visit to Northern Ireland next week by Queen Elizabeth II. Ten bomb alerts caused various parts of the capital to be sealed off for several hours as explosives experts checked out the hoax calls. Security officials said they thought the hoaxes were part of a campaign by the Irish Republican Army against the queen' planned visit to Ulster next Wednesday and Thursday. She will not visit Belfast.

Mt. Etna spewing lava

CATANIA, Sicily — Hot lava poured out of Mt. Etna Saturday in the year's most intense eruption of Europe's tallest volcano. Two new flows of lava, each about one mile long, were preceded by strong explosions.

Hobo king

In Britt, Iowa, Floyd "Sparky" Smith, 67, was chosen king of the hoboes at national hobo day Saturday, a week after former Hobo King John "Hardrock Kid" Mislen was buried.

Longlooker Mic Denfeld, a sociologist from Rockwell City, Iowa, was chosen queen of the hobos for the sixth time.

Smith, of Harcourt, Iowa, was choked with emotion at the crowning attended by about 300 spectators.

"I felt wonderful, " said Smith who has been trying for the title since 1970. "It's a wonderful feeling. I knew I had tears in my eyes."

He said he became a knight of the road about 17 years ago.

"I was in the Navy and just got itchy feet and I couldn't sit still in the place," he said.

Action Line

P.O. Box 230 Long Beach, Calif. 90844

Decoded

I recently bought a zip code directory for $3 being sold door to door by a young person who simply identified himself as a student. When I went to use it, however, I found it to be incomplete. For Long Beach, for instance, it gives the first three digits, 908, then gives a toll-free telephone number to call for the rest of the zip. That number is always busy.

The post office says they do not endorse this book. I called Long Beach State University and they are not sponsoring its sale. Just who are these students? The receipt does not identify them or their school. Where can one buy a complete zip code directory? M.A.Y., Long Beach.

The "National Directory of Post Offices," which you bought, is being sold by a commercial organization called Jobs for Students, which is not connected with any school or college. The national director of the group, Rick O'Polka, is located in Franklin Park, Ill., a Chicago suburb. He says the group is "run for students by students," and each geographical area has its own district coordinator. Coordinator for the South Bay area, including Long Beach, is Tony Rotundo, 1619F 242nd Place, Harbor City.

The group recruits student workers through newspaper ads and notices on local college and high schoom bulletin boards. Rotundo told Action Line that when hiring workers, they do not verify that they are, in fact, students. The salespersons are paid 50 to 75 cents for each directory sold. The rest of the $3 goes to the supervisors and the directory printers. Jobs for Students has no license in Long Beach or Lakewood to do business in these communities.

The only zip code directory authorized by the U.S. Postal Service is the "National Zip Code Directory," available for $7.50 from the U.S. Government Printing Office Bookstore, 300 N. Los Angeles St., Los Angeles, Calif. 90012. Once you have bought one, you can exchange it annually at no cost for an updated version at the main post office.

Take your pick

Although we have been pleased, since our arrival from the Midwest, with the abundance of fruits and vegetables in the larger supermarkets, we would like to know if there is a specialty market in the Long Beach area where we could obtain raspberries, gooseberries, boysenberries and blackberries. L.A.S., Long Beach.

Plowboys Market, 11869 E. Carson St., Hawaiian Gardens, carries boysenberries, blackberries and raspberries off and on as they are able to obtain them from the wholesalers. A produce department spokesman said that blackberries are just about out of season now, and boysenberries were very scarce this year since production was low. He said raspberries are in season now, but are being shipped here from out of state, so are not always available. Gooseberries, he said, will not be in season until next month.

El Rancho Market, 2727 Newport Blvd., Newport Beach, and Newport Produce, 1601 Newport Blvd., Costa Mesa, also carry the berries you are seeking as they are able to obtain them. All the markets suggested you give them a call ahead of time to make sure they have the berries you want to buy.

Orgone energy

Can Action Line tell me what orgone energy is? Mrs. A.F., Long Beach.

It was a theory proposed in the 1930s by the late Wilhelm Reich, a physician and psychoanalyst who was viewed as a genius by his followers and an insane quack by his detractors. Reich, who was born in 1897 in Austria and trained under Sigmund Freud, believed there was a cosmic energy that permeated all matter in the universe and that all physical, psychological and even political ills could be cured if individuals absorbed large doses of this force that he called orgone energy.

He moved to the United States in 1939 and began treating patients with what he called Orgone Energy Accumulators, which were telephone booth-sized boxes made of wood on the outside and lined with sheet metal on the inside. The boxes, which became a fad item in the 1950s, were supposed to attract orgone energy from the atmosphere and transmit it to individuals sitting inside. According to Reich, the boxes could cure everything from sexual impotence to cancer.

The U.S. Food and Drug Administration began investigating him in 1947, and seven years later a complaint charging him with selling an unproven medical treatment device across state lines was issued against him. He did not respond to the complaint, and a default injunction was issued prohibiting the distribution of the orgone boxes. But the devices continued to be marketed, and Reich was convicted of contempt of court and sentenced to two years in prison. After serving eight months, he died of a heart attack in 1957 at the age of 60.

SOUND OFF!

Why can't part of the parking lot at the Queen Mary be used to accommodate self-contained recreation vehicles? I have proposed this idea to various officials in the city and Harbor Department to no avail. There is a dire need for a facility to serve the 800,000 recreation vehicles in the area. It would generate family groups (bodies) to visit the Queen Mary, and maybe a tram service could be set up to bring them to the downtown shops and beaches. L.S., Long Beach.

Hundreds in protest at San Onofre

Rally commemorates Hiroshima bombing

By Mark Gladstone
Staff Writer

Hundreds of demonstrators gathered Saturday at the gates of the San Onofre Nuclear Generating Station to peacefully protest construction of nuclear plants and commemorate the 32nd anniversary of the dropping of the atomic bomb on Hiroshima.

Authorities said it was the first major demonstration at the plant owned by Southern California Edison Co. and San Diego Gas & Electric Co. south of San Clemente in its nearly 10 years of operation.

The featured speaker was Dr. Barry Commoner, environmentalist and director of the Center for the Biology of Natural Systems at Washington University in St. Louis. He said nuclear power generating plants like San Onofre are not safe and that solar power is a safer and more economical source of power.

"The power of the atom to deal death did not end in Hiroshima," Commoner told the crowd.

Other nuclear protests around the country. See Page A6

Before Commoner spoke there were several minutes of silence for Hiroshima Day, which commemorates the dropping of U.S. atomic bombs on Hiroshima and Nagasaki, Japan, in early August 1945 during World War II.

The protest was organized by a coalition of more than 40 groups, including some connected to the Clamshell Alliance, which earlier this year staged massive protests at a Seabrook, N.H., nuclear plant site.

Another protest is planned today at the Diablo Canyon nuclear plant near San Luis Obispo. The plant is finished but has yet to be approved for operation by the U.S. Nuclear Regulatory Commission.

Edison closed its nuclear information center at the plant Saturday. It also issued a statement recognizing the right of the groups to demonstrate.

DEMONSTRATORS Saturday stage first major protest at San Onofre nuclear power plant near San Clemente, owned by Southern California Edison and San Diego Gas & Electric, in its nearly 10 years of operation. Staff Photo by TOM SHAW

The utility said it hoped "a confrontation with the demonstrators (could) be avoided." Edison, which supplies electricity to Long Beach, owns 80 percent of the plant, while SDG&E has a 20-percent share.

The San Diego County Sheriff's Department estimated the crowd at 800, while protest leaders said there were 2,000 demonstrators.

Although it was peaceful and there were no arrests, authorities were prepared for any problems. More than 300 sheriff's deputies, U.S. marshals, California Highway Patrol officers and state park rangers were in the area.

According to Jim McCain, assistant to the San Diego County sheriff, the protest provided his department with an opportunity to test its procedures for handling large crowds. There hadn't been such a large protest in the county for five or six years, he said.

Commoner said the demonstration was the beginning of a nationwide protest against further construction of nuclear plants. Local leaders said two new 1,100-megawatt units under construction violate federal safety features and current regulations on the proximity of plants to populated areas.

A smaller 450-megawatt reactor has been operating since Jan. 1, 1968. Environmentalists unsuccessfully tried to halt construction of the new units because of alleged damage to nearby bluffs facing the ocean. The newer units, capable of supplying power to more than a million people, are scheduled to be completed in 1980 and 1981.

Mandatory shifts out in integration plan

SAN DIEGO (AP) — A Superior Court judge has issued a brief school desegregation plan which does not require mandatory student reassignments for the coming school year.

Judge Louis M. Welsh issued his directive Friday to allow the city school district time to apply for $6 million in federal funds to implement the plan. Welsh is expected to issue a more extensive plan in two or three weeks to cover subsequent years.

The plan calls for two additional "magnet schools" with special educational programs to attract students from all over the city, an intercultural language school, student exchange programs and race relations encounters.

Nixon 3 years later: one of few in scandal still free

By Don McLeod
AP Political Writer

WASHINGTON — Three years after the Nixon administration came to a tearful end, Richard M. Nixon himself is one of the few among its power elite who has remained free.

Three years ago Tuesday, on Aug. 9, Nixon resigned in disgrace after unsuccessfully fighting Watergate scandals stemming from what the White House once called a "third-rate burglary attempt."

NIXON

NOW Nixon works on his memoirs in San Clemente, three of his top lieutenants are serving prison terms of 2½ to 8 years and the mastermind of the Watergate break-in, G. Gordon Liddy, is preparing to get out of prison next month.

H. R. Haldeman, Nixon's chief of staff and considered by many the second most powerful man in the country at the time, entered a federal prison camp at Lompoc in June after two years of legal appeals failed to overturn his Watergate cover-up conviction.

John N. Mitchell, attorney general, Nixon campaign manager and close political adviser, entered another prison camp near Montgomery, Ala., the next day.

John N. Ehrlichman, Nixon's White House domestic adviser, has served 10 months in a federal facility at Safford, Ariz., on a cover-up conviction and a concurrent sentence for a White House "Plumbers" unit break-in.

IN ALL, 25 persons have gone to jail in connection with the various scandals which caused Nixon to announce that he was stepping down for the good of the country. His resignation, the first ever by a U.S. president, followed approval of impeachment articles against him by the House Judiciary Committee.

To this day, Nixon still maintains he was innocent of any illegal wrongdoing.

Thanks to a blanket pardon from his appointed successor, Gerald R. Ford, Nixon was spared prosecution on Watergate-related charges, but his long fight against impeachment, for custody of his White House papers and tapes and defense of various other suits ran up legal bills estimated at $1 million.

PART OF this was defrayed by a fund-raising drive directed by Rabbi Baruch Korff, and Nixon is beginning to bring in money from his television and writing enterprises. But friends say the financial strain remains heavy.

Nixon got $600,000 plus a percentage of the profits from his widely viewed series of television interviews with David Frost. And he is at work on memoirs which are expected to earn him something in the range of $2 million.

Nixon continues to guard his privacy and seldom appears outside his San Clemente compound. Friends and associates say his circumstances and moods are improving from the early days after his resignation.

Former First Lady Pat Nixon suffered a stroke a year ago which temporarily left her left arm and leg paralyzed and gave her a speech impairment, but friends report a "remarkable recovery."

Mrs. Nixon also keeps a low public profile, but friends say she is active and has a special interest in gardening and managing the San Clemente home.

The Nixon daughters, Tricia Cox and Julie Eisenhower, live in New York with husbands Ed Cox and David Eisenhower, both members of New York law firms.

Julie is currently promoting her new book and David is working on one about his grandfather, Dwight D. Eisenhower.

John Dean, the former White House legal counsel who provided some of the most damaging testimony against Nixon, is one of the survivors who is doing rather well.

Dean served four months in prison but quickly made a comeback with a best-seller book. He has a new book in the works, a budding lecture career and writes occasionally for Rolling Stone magazine.

ting next to her husband during his Senate Watergate Committee testimony, also wrote a best-seller and is finishing a screen play. The Deans live in Los Angeles.

Jeb Stuart Magruder, the former White House aide who was deputy director of Nixon's 1972 campaign, served seven months in prison. Now he is living in Colorado and working as an official of the Young Life Foundation, a religious organization.

Liddy, once general counsel of the 1972 Nixon campaign and architect of the Watergate break-in, has spent more time behind bars than any other Watergate figure.

After President Carter reduced Liddy's sentence, a parole board decided to grant him early release. He is scheduled to leave the federal prison camp at Allenwood, Pa., Sept. 7, after 52 months imprisonment.

Another member of Nixon's administration who is doing well for himself is Spiro T. Agnew, Nixon's first vice president, who resigned in 1973 after pleading no contest to a variety of bribery and corruption charges.

Agnew, who still makes his home in a Baltimore suburb, has become a highly successful business agent for interests in the Middle East and Mediterranean. He also has written a novel.

Gerald Ford, the former House minority leader who stepped in as vice president after Agnew, succeeded to the nation's top office when Nixon resigned and served out the remaining 29 months of Nixon's second term.

Defeated last year in a bid for election in his own right, Ford retired to Palm Springs but is an active ex-president with writing, teaching and television commitments.

Henry A. Kissinger, Nixon's secretary of state, remained in the job under Ford but came increasingly under fire from administration critics. Although he says government service drove him into debt, Kissinger has a book contract for a reported $2 million and a deal with NBC for political commentary.

The former Harvard professor also has returned to teaching with a series of seminars at Georgetown University, and his expertise in foreign policy is still sought by congressional committees.

Lance has Carter's confidence

PLAINS, Ga. (AP) — President Carter said Saturday he has full confidence in his budget director and old friend, Bert Lance, but that a full investigation of his banking transactions will be conducted and the details made public.

Federal investigators have been looking into large personal loans Lance received from New York and Chicago banks in which his own Georgia bank had opened non-interest-earning accounts.

The first question at a Carter news conference called here to announce the administration's welfare reform package was about Lance's financial dealings.

The president said he had not talked with Lance privately on the subject.

"I KNOW little of the details of the loan," Carter said, "but I have full confidence in the comptroller and Mr. Lance."

Comptroller of the Currency John Heimann had asked Lance on Friday about a $2.7-million loan he got in April 1975 from the Manufacturers Hanover Trust Co., of New York.

In an internal memo about the loan, the New York bank had said it hoped Lance's Georgia bank would establish a "correspondent relationship" with Manufacturers Trust. And within a month, a $250,000 account which drew no interest was established by the Georgia bank.

Lance said Friday the banking account was not a condition of his personal loan.

CARTER said Saturday he became aware of the comptroller's interest in Lance's loan from Manufacturers Trust a week or 10 days ago.

"My understanding is that the inquiry is proceeding thoroughly and that all information about the loan will be made available to the public," Carter said.

Earlier, it had been disclosed that Lance also had borrowed $3.4 million from the First National Bank of Chicago and his Georgia bank established a correspondent relationship with that bank a month later, while maintaining ties with the New York bank.

She'll '86' you with smile

Q and A

Q. How does the job differ from that of a cocktail waitress, as far as passes from customers are concerned?

A. Well, there's a big bar between you. They can't pinch as much. I like being on this side much more than being a cocktail waitress.

Q. How do people react to a woman bartender?

A. Very well. I think a woman bartender maintains a bar very well in that men don't get out of line as much. I've had to "86" I don't know how many people and they don't seem to give a woman bartender as much trouble as they would a man.

Q. Even when they are being thrown out?

A. No. Not at all. I have never had any problems. You just ask them to leave, very nicely, of course. When you have been in the people business like I have most of my life, you learn how to say things diplomatically. You can throw somebody out and have a smile on your face. And if you keep smiling, sooner or later they have to smile back at you.

Of course, you have a lot of men at a bar who will protect and stand up for a woman bartender more than they will a man.

Now, I will not allow anybody to swear when I'm behind the bar.

Q. How do you handle that?

A. I just ask them to "please, show a little courtesy. There are women in the bar." If you say it softly enough, and kindly enough, and tell them, "please, no bad language," they will respect that. Most of them have been brought up to know that they aren't supposed to swear in front of women.

Q. Do men give you a hard time about your cleavage?

A. No. Oh, they make little remarks, but not out-of-line remarks. It draws men into a bar, but I have never had one get out of line with me. I think it is how you conduct yourself, no matter what you wear. As long as you conduct yourself as a lady, everybody will always treat you as a lady.

Q. Is it true that a bartender has to serve as a psychologist?

A. It's very true. You stand there and listen. So many people are so lonely. That's why they come to a bar in the first place. They have no place else to go. And they want to be around people. And they have problems. If you just give them a little bit of attention and a smile, and some understanding, it really helps them. It really does. They can walk out with a smile on their face. Everybody needs somebody to talk to sometimes.

Q. Do you get tired of hearing their stories?

A. No. Not really. It tears your heart out sometimes. Probably, I shouldn't be a bartender — 'cause I'm too soft at heart. I even loan money to customers.

But I guess that's what they need, too. They need to find someone who will listen to them and who is human enough to care. Just somebody to take enough interest to listen to them, just for a little while. (Fulfilling that need) is a good feeling for me, a very satisfying feeling.

Q. Do you hear stories you can't believe?

A. Oh, of course. When you serve and talk to some people you know they are hurting so bad that they have to make up stories. They're living in fantasy world. We all live in fantasy worlds, but some people never get out of them.

There are people who come in who you know are habitual liars. I don't think they realize they are lying. They have to tell stories to make believe. They want so badly to have a life that is beautiful that they make up stories to make it that way.

I hear so many sad stories. I have a couple of customers who are beautiful people and they are dying.

Q. Literally?

A. Literally — dying. Terminal cases. For me to be able to make those people laugh is probably one of the prettiest feeling I've ever had. It really is.

People are beautiful if you give them half a chance. I don't think there is a bad, bad human being. Circumstances make them that way, but down deep they're still human beings.

Q. Many people believe that the full moon brings out strange behavior in people? Do you believe that?

A. Very definitely. You can see people who are just beautiful, and the minute that full moon comes out, it is unbelievable what they can do. They just completely change. Every time I see a full moon, I don't want to go to work.

Q. What changes do you see in people — regardless of the moon — when they have had a few drinks?

A. I see a lot of hostilities come out. It depends an awful lot on the the mood they are in. If they are in a down mood, it will definitely depress them. If they are in a happy mood, it'll accelerate it. Some people get very, very happy when they drink, but I think those are the once-a-week drinkers — people who don't drink very much.

Q. You were working two jobs for awhile. Was that necessary to make a good living?

A. You can make a very good living at it. I didn't have to work two jobs, but I'll probably go get a second one again. I just like money. I got spoiled rotten (when I was working) out in the Valley, as far as tips go. They are not as good down here in Long Beach. Everybody in Long Beach wants to buy you a drink. I'm just the type that has to be busy all the time. I'm a Gemini, I have excess energy.

'Eye-for-eye' insurance tax banned

Associated Press

California may have to cough up millions of dollars in tax refunds for out-of-state insurance companies it has taxed over the years.

Since the days of the Civil War, the state has levied a so-called "retaliatory tax" on insurance companies from other states which conduct business in California.

Originally, the tax was levied to penalize out-of-state companies doing business here whose own home states taxed California insurance companies doing business there.

However, Superior Court Judge Alexander R. Early III decided the time had come to end the "eye for an eye" taxing policy, and declared the antiquated tax unconstitutional Friday.

The decision ends a 7-year-old lawsuit brought against the state Board of Equalization by Western and Southern Life Insurance Co., of Cincinnati, Ohio.

Judge Early said the tax is "plainly discriminatory against interstate commerce," and that Western and Southern should have been given a credit against its premium taxes for the property taxes it paid in California.

His decision provides for a refund of more than $1 million to Western and Southern.

A-protesters send up balloons

Associated Press

Anti-nuclear demonstrators set loose thousands of multi-colored helium balloons across the Northeast and the South on Saturday, the 32nd anniversary of the atomic bombing of Hiroshima.

Most of the balloons were launched by members of the Clamshell Alliance and the Catfish Alliance, loose coalitions of pro-environment, anti-nuclear groups.

They said the balloons represented the radioactive fallout that could result from a major accident at a nuclear power plant.

Some balloons carried messages which read: "If this message reached you, so can radioactivity."

Others carried postcards which asked the finders to fill in the location where the balloons landed and mail them back to the protesters.

"This balloon, symbolizing radioactive fallout, was released near the proposed Seabrook nuclear facility on Aug. 6. Fallout from a nuclear accident may travel this far. How far did your balloon travel?"

That was the message on balloons released by 75 protesters at Seabrook, N.H., where 1,414 anti-nuclear demonstrators were arrested last spring during a sit-in organized by the Clamshell Alliance.

In the South, the newly formed Catfish Alliance coordinated the balloon launchings in Alabama, Georgia, Mississippi, North Carolina and Tennessee.

Launch sites included Oak Ridge, Tenn., where much of the nation's uranium supply is enriched, and several Tennessee Valley Authority plants.

In Alabama, a lone Catfish Alliance member, Darryl Wiley, launched 100 balloons across the street from the Alabama Power Co.'s Farley nuclear power plant near Dothan.

Members of the plant's beefed-up security force watched through binoculars as Wiley let the brightly colored balloons fly.

In Vermont about 60 anti-nuclear protesters released balloons near the Vermont Yankee Nuclear plant.

In Florida, members of the American Friends Service Committee released 300 helium-inflated balloons near the Florida Power & Light's Turkey Point nuclear generators.

Warren Hoskins, administrative secretary of the Miami Friends committee, said the demonstration was part of a protest coordinated by the Eastern Federation of Nuclear Opponents and Safe Energy Opponents in Washington.

The Friends, a Quaker war-relief and social concern agency, object to nuclear power plants because of their connection with nuclear weapons, said Hoskins.

In New Jersey, balloons sent aloft at nuclear plants in Toms River and Delaware Bay and at the site of a proposed floating nuclear station in the Atlantic Ocean near Atlantic City.

In Oregon, the anti-nuclear protest took a different form.

About 95 demonstrators, carrying backpacks and water jugs, blocked gates to the Trojan nuclear power plant near Rainier, Ore., and vowed to remain until arrested.

Spokesmen for Portland General Electric Co., which owns a majority interest in the 1,100-megawatt plant, said no arrests would be made as long as demonstrators did not try to breach the chain-link fence surrounding the complex.

"It looks like a question of who is going to outwait who," said the utility company's Steve Loy.

9 states, D.C. plan to continue funding abortions

By Richard Carelli
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The political and legal debate over federal funding of abortions for poor women may be decided by how Congress and the courts interpret two phrases: "life-endangering" and "medically necessary."

On Thursday, Health, Education and Welfare Secretary Joseph A. Califano ended funding for the 300,000 Medicaid abortions sought annually by poor women by saying only those women whose lives are endangered by pregnancy or childbirth could receive federally financed abortions.

In the wake of Califano's order, individual states may decide to bear the full cost of Medicaid abortions now that federal funding has ended. So far nine states and the District of Columbia have announced plans to do so, the states being Alaska, Hawaii, Maryland, Massachusetts, Nevada, New York, Oregon, Virginia and Washington.

CALIFANO'S action, a major victory for anti-abortion forces, followed two court rulings: one by the Supreme Court that a woman has no right to expect state governments to pay for an abortion that is medically unnecessary, and a resulting one by a federal judge in Brooklyn.

The Brooklyn judge lifted an injunction against the so-called Hyde Amendment, passed by Congress last October, which bans spending federal Medicaid money for any abortion except where the life of the mother would be endangered if the fetus were carried to term.

Medicaid, a health care program run by individual states but financed mainly by federal money, has paid for an estimated one third of the 1.1 million legal abortions performed each year.

Lawyers favoring federal funding of abortions are still trying to convince the Brooklyn judge, John F. Dooling Jr., that the Hyde Amendment does not jibe with the Supreme Court's ruling on state funding obligations.

They contend that the court has mandated governmental help for "medically necessary" abortions, a definition that apparently is less restrictive than the Hyde amendment's approval of abortions only when the mother's life is endangered.

The pro-abortion lawyers also say the justices in past decisions have defined the phrase "medically necessary" broadly enough to encompass physical, mental, emotional and familial factors.

If the broad definition advocated by pro-abortion forces were applied to governmental purse strings, anti-abortion spokesman say that as many as 90 per cent of the poor women now barred by the Hyde Amendment could receive federal aid for abortions.

Meanwhile, the question is being debated in Congress.

The 1976 amendment, sponsored by Rep. Henry Hyde, R-Ill., and attached to an annual appropriations bill giving HEW and the Labor Department their operating funds, expires Sept. 30.

The House has voted to renew the abortion funding cutoff in the same form as it was enacted last year—that is, that federal abortion funds can be used only in cases where women's lives are endangered.

But the Senate favors the less restrictive wording which would allow the government to pay for all "medically necessary" abortions. The Senate also voted to allow abortion funding for victims of rape and incest.

If the two houses cannot reach an agreement when Congress comes back from vacation next month, federal support for all abortions could resume after Sept. 30.

"It appears now that our best chance is in the Congress," said Karen Mulhauser, an attorney with the National Abortion Rights Action League. "The courts are deferring the decision to Congress, and we are concentrating our efforts there. The book isn't closed; the final chapter isn't written."

Abortion opponents stand ready to defend their recently won momentum, says Anne Higgins of the Ad Hoc Committee in Defense of Life.

"We're talking about taxpayers paying for something a majority of them find repugnant — the taking of the lives of unborn children," she said. "We are prepared to see this through."

Tainted butter is recalled

CHICAGO (AP) — Beatrice Foods Co., announced Saturday night that it was recalling some batches of whipped butter in seven states as a precaution after reports that 26 people in Missouri were sickened from the food.

H. Clifford Mitchell, director of environmental services for St. Louis County in Missouri, said Saturday that 26 people suffered food poisoning from the butter. He said the butter was contaminated by staphylococcus organisms from "someone with an open lesion."

The butter, used in seven restaurants, was confiscated, Mitchell said.

It was not immediately established where the butter may have been contaminated but Beatrice Foods said it was recalling batches of the product manufactured at the Sugar Creek butter plant in Louisville, Ky.

Batches from that plant bearing the first digits of 172 through 216, or bearing the pull date of Sept. 12, 1977, or before, were ordered recalled by the firm.

The market area includes Kentucky, Indiana, Illinois, Missouri, Michigan, Ohio and West Virginia. The brands under which the whipped butter is distributed in eight-ounce cups in retail stores are Sugar Creek, Prairie Farms, A&P, Armour, Chapel, Mayflower, Blue Valley and Meadow Gold, the company said.

Nyerere tours Iowa farm

MOVILLE, Iowa (AP) — President Julius Nyerere of Tanzania toured an Iowa farm Saturday and said he was impressed by what he saw.

"Look at the size of those fields of corn!" Nyerere exclaimed to his escort, Sen. Dick Clark, D-Iowa.

New welfare plan widely accepted, but changes seen

By Edmond Le Breton
Associated Press

WASHINGTON (AP) — There will be strong pressures in and out of Congress to change some aspects of President Carter's proposed new welfare system, although its objectives are widely approved, according to first reactions to the sweeping program.

The plan Carter unveiled in a broadcast news conference in Plains, Ga., was not accepted in full by either of the two chairmen of the congressional committees that will have the most to do with shaping the legislation.

Chairman Al Ullman, D-Ore., of the House Ways and Means Committee, said he has one major difference with Carter, centering on the way in which the income of working families who still need help would be supplemented. Ullman said this should be done outside the welfare system in a way not related to family size.

Less specifically, Sen. Russell B. Long, D-La., chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, said "There will be a great deal of study and a lot of suggestions of ways the president's proposal can be improved." He said, however, Carter had accepted some of his suggestions and the announced plan is an improvement over earlier versions.

The chairmen joined other congressional leaders in promising prompt action to have an improved system in effect next year.

In California, Los Angeles County Supervisor Kenneth Hahn said the welfare revision was "long overdue" and predicted that property owners in his county could get a one-fourth reduction in their taxes if the program becomes law.

State officials in New York said Carter's program could mean a 36 percent reduction in the welfare expenses of state and local governments.

There was mixed reaction to Carter's program from women's groups.

Carol Burris, president of the Women's Lobby, criticized the provision designed to encourage welfare recipients to accept private rather than public service jobs.

"Women, especially minority women, have often been discriminated against in private employment," she said. "Many women are on welfare because of discrimination in private employment."

She also said the welfare payments envisioned by the president's plan were too low, although she applauded the provision for women with children over age 6 to work, saying it would permit them to have job experience and thus be employable.

Ruth C. Clusen, president of the League of Women Voters, called Carter's income assistance plan "a significant improvement over earlier versions." She said her organization would "withhold final judgment until we are able to review all the details of the program."

Black leaders, including NAACP chairman Margaret Bush Wilson and National Urban League executive director Vernon Jordan, said they were encouraged by parts of Carter's program but saw a need for changes.

The NAACP leader said she was pleased by provisions for creating more jobs, including part-time work, and increasing the earned income tax credit as an incentive to the working poor.

But she said "work incentives should not paralyze the poor. They should instead relieve the burden of poverty while providing meaningful jobs for those able to work. The need for readily available day care centers for mothers wanting to work should be adequately met."

She also said the proposal to reduce welfare burdens on local governments does not go far enough — "it should completely relieve local governments of the responsibility for income supplement payments and the states should be made to assume this obligation."

Jordan, who recently criticized Carter as not doing enough for blacks and the urban poor, said the league would cooperate in efforts to improve the president's welfare progam.

"We continue to believe a national full employment policy, separated from welfare, should be instituted and that the basic thrust of income assistance programs should be through the refundable credit income tax," Jordan said. "This would remedy major defects in the reform package."

Rep. James C. Corman, D-Calif., chairman of the Ways and Means subcommitee with immediate responsibility for the legislation, said he expects the basic plan to be approved. He said hearings will begin next month and will continue even after Congress itself adjourns for the year.

Sen. Daniel P. Moynihan, D-N.Y., who heads the corresponding Senate Finance subcommittee, acknowledged there would be many suggestions for change, but said he does not see any one particularly vulnerable element.

Moynihan, who was the principal author of an ill-fated welfare reform during the Nixon administration, said of Carter's plan, "It's a beautifully crafted proposal and it's going to pass."

Sen. Abraham Ribicoff, D-Conn., long active in welfare legislation, suggested some of Carter's ideas "should be piloted out over the next few years."

"Those that work should be part of the national program," he said. "Those that don't should be dropped."

Carter tells welfare program

cost of new tax credits for wage-earners who now pay some income tax.

Furthermore, his $27.9 billion figure included the cost of a number of programs not generally regarded as welfare by the public, such as a $5.5 billion public service job program that he hopes to eliminate.

The president outlined these major proposals:

—No work will be required for the aged, blind, disabled or single parents of children under age 7. They will be eligible for $4,200 a year for a family of four.

—Part-time work which does not interfere with child care will be expected of single parents with children aged 7 to 14. A family of four in this category would have its $4,200 annual payment reduced 50 cents for each dollar earned.

—Full-time work would be expected of two-parent families, single persons, childless couples, and single parents with no child under age 14 if the jobs are available. Whether work is available or not, a family of four in this category would get $2,300 a year. If work is available, they would lose 50 cents from the $2,300 welfare payment for each dollar of earnings above $3,800.

—Up to 1.4 million public service jobs in state and local government would be created at or slightly above the $2.30 an hour minimum wage.

—To encourage employment in private jobs, expanded tax credits would be available to low and modest income workers up to a maximum of well over $600 a year for a family of four. These would apply to persons working in private jobs or in public jobs not subsidized by the federal government.

The minimum payments for those who would work and those not expected to work amount to a modified guaranteed annual income. Part of the tax credit provision amounts to a modified negative income tax, because $1.5 billion in tax credits would take the form of cash payments to persons who earn too little to pay any income taxes.

Under the present system, combined state and federal benefits under Aid for Families with Dependent Children now vary from $720 a year in Mississippi to $5,954 in Hawaii for a family of four.

Under current law all AFDC recipients must register for work unless they have a child under age 7, are sick or live in a remote area. The work incentive program which provides them work now is funded at $370 million a year and is only able to put 250,000 out of one million eligible recipients to work each year. This program would be eliminated and its funds would be diverted to a new system.

Their protests resulted in increased spending which Carter said would allow the federal government to assume more of the welfare costs now borne by state and local governments.

Currently the federal government pays 50 percent of the costs, and state and local governments pay the rest.

He said that his plan would reduce their expenditures by $2 billion in the first year, guaranteeing each state at least a 10 percent reduction in its welfare costs.

Carter noted that the complexity of the current system leads to "waste, fraud, red tape and errors" including government workers illegally receiving benefits. He promised to save $400 million by reducing such abuses.

And he said that his plan would "provide strong incentives to keep families together, rather than tear them apart."

To do so, he would end rules which prohibit assistance when the father of a family remains in the household. His plan also would allow single-parent family heads to earn up to $150 per month extra without losing any welfare payments if the money was used to pay for child care so the parent could go to work.

In his financing of the new program, Carter rejected a suggestion that welfare benefits be reduced for tenants of subsidized housing. This had drawn strong protests from the housing industry and mayors.

He said he planned to use $1.3 billion in revenue from his proposed $10 billion crude oil wellhead tax to help pay for welfare. This tax, designed to bring the price of domestic oil up to the world market price, has already been approved by two House committees in a format that would easily allow it to be used in this manner.

Carter counted $300 million in increased Social Security contributions toward the costs of the $8.8 billion employment component of the new system. Because of the way these funds are accounted for, this amounts to giving welfare recipients $300 million in cash payments and taking that same sum back from them in Social Security taxes. It does not affect the financial soundness of the Social Security trust fund.

Phone strike is called off tors joined the virtual around-the-clock negotiations.

"This $3.3 billion agreement touches on every significant demand that this union's policy-making body said that we must come to grips with in 1977," Watts said.

He said the agreement was reached through a "negotiating breakthrough" achieved after he called a news conference Thursday to say a strike was almost inevitable.

The American Telephone & Telegraph Co., parent firm of the Bell System, said it was "gratified" by the new pact. "We believe it is a good wage and benefit package," AT&T said in a statement.

Announcing the new pact, Watts said, "I believe that we have achieved a remarkable settlement — particularly in view of the recent down-trend in the size of new labor-management contracts and the general sluggishness of the economy."

Under the three-year agreement, which still must be ratified by the CWA members, wage increases will amount to 7.9 percent this year, 7.07 percent next year and 6.68 percent in 1979.

Leslie mistrial called—jury 'quite deadlocked'

Sharon Tate and four others the night before.

The mistrial came almost eight years to the day that the Tate-LaBianca murders took place. The actress and her friends were slain Aug. 9, 1969, and the LaBiancas were killed Aug. 10.

The seven women and five men on the jury had been sent back twice to try to reach a verdict after they first reported a deadlock Thursday. Their deliberations had been disrupted at midpoint when one juror fell ill and an alternate was substituted. Hinz then told them to start their talks all over again.

But the foreman reported finally that there was no hope of agreement. Apparently, at least two jurors had switched votes at the last minute from second-degree murder to manslaughter, but the seven who favored the stiffest conviction remained firm.

"It now appears to this court that the jury is hopelessly deadlocked," Hinz announced after polling all 12 members. "I will now declare a mistrial."

It was the second time that a jury had been asked to judge the tall, slender brunette on charges stemming from the gruesome and notorious "Manson murders."

The first time, in 1971, the jury had no trouble reaching a verdict. In that trial, Miss Van Houten and her three codefendants—Manson and two women followers—presented no defense case. The three women, obeying Manson's orders, confessed to murder and sought to exonerate him.

They called him Christ and swore he had never ordered the multiple murders.

At that trial, Miss Van Houten was remorseless.

"Sorry is a five-letter word," she said. "It can't bring back anybody. What can I feel? It happened and it's just gone."

Asked then if she felt like crying over Mrs. LaBianca's death, she said, "Cry for her death? If I cry for her death, it's for death itself. She's not the only person who has died."

At the second trial, the poised and soft-spoken young woman bowed her head and said, "I feel very ashamed."

Thousands of acres ablaze

off. . . . It's really frightening to see those big trees go up— poof. It's so dry they burn up almost instantly."

Throughout the state, nearly 10,000 fire fighters were on the line — many of them from out of state. The drain on nearby states' resources began to tell, as officials in Arizona had trouble finding enough men to fight a fire on an Indian reservation near the Grand Canyon.

More than 90 percent of the land on fire outside of Alaska was in California. In south-central Oregon, meanwhile, a fire was consuming ponderosa and fir timber, and about 75 small lightning fires had been reported in Oregon and Washington.

California's second largest blaze was in the Marble-Cone area, virtually inaccessible terrain in Los Padres National Forest east of Big Sur on the Central California coast. It continued unchecked, with more than 57,000 acres ravaged and 2,800 fire fighters at work.

Kathy Ross of the State Forestry Department said watershed loss was estimated at $113 million from the Marble-Cone fire alone. If heavy rains should come to that area later this year, the burned-out land could trigger mudslides that would endanger seaside homes.

L.B. man, 21, being sought in slaying, attempted murder

A 21-year-old Long Beach man is being sought in connection with the killing of one man and the attempted murder of a witness in separate sawed-off shotgun shootings.

Police said they believe Dennis Alvin McCornell, 1862 Olive Ave., shot and seriously wounded Robert "Shine" Sheard, 45, of 1784 Lemon Ave. #5, at 8:30 p.m. Thursday in a friend's apartment at 828 E. 20th St., Long Beach.

Sheard told police he had refused McCornell's request for a ride in the early morning hours Thursday after the fatal shooting of Glenoree Nelson, Jr., 20, of 3015 Artesia Blvd. #5.

Nelson was fatally shot in the head at 2285 Lewis Ave. at 3:30 a.m. Thursday, several hours after he and two companions had fought with McCornell and ejected him from the apartment.

Police said McCornell had returned to the apartment and shot Nelson. Witnesses told police that when McCornell returned his face was still bruised and swollen around his mouth and left eye.

According to police, McCornell may be driving a 1965 to 1966 Volkswagen sedan, orange or yellow in color. He stands 5-foot-10 and weighs about 160 pounds.

Anyone with information concerning McCornell's whereabouts should contact Capt. R. L. Wolfe, criminal investigations division.

Crucial test set for space shuttle

By Richard Saltus
AP Science Writer

EDWARDS AIR FORCE BASE — One day 14 years ago a souped-up Pontiac hurtled across the desert here, towing behind it a bathtub-shaped craft that evidently aspired to be a flying machine.

The wingless craft, tethered behind the roaring convertible, rose a few feet in the air and settled back onto the sands.

Inside rode a man who later, of his own free will, was to pilot the 22-foot-long plywood and metal job in a gliding flight after being released from an airplane that had towed it to an altitude of 12,000 feet. Dropping not much less drastically than a stone, the craft swooped to a safe, unpowered landing on a dry lake runway.

This week, its direct descendant will do the same, in the first free-flight and landing test of the space shuttle Enterprise, the reusable spaceplane designed to haul people and equipment into earth orbit.

The M2F1 was the first of a series of strange birds called "lifting bodies." They were so named because their shape provides the aerodynamic lift that wings do on conventional airplanes.

In hundreds of flights in a program that lasted from 1963 to 1975, the "flying flatirons," as they were also known, blazed the trail for a crucial event due to take place this coming Friday.

On that day, the airliner-sized Enterprise will be carried atop a jumbo jetliner to an altitude of about 23,000 feet and launched. In a test of how astronauts will return from space missions, it will glide for about five minutes, making two turns and landing on a dry lake bed — entirely without engines. Two crewmen will be at the controls.

The fat, 122-foot-long shuttle looks something like a lifting body with short, stubby wings, but in no way resembles a glider. Will it fly?

"There's no question in our mind that it will glide satisfactorily," said Milt Thompson, the pilot who made that first lifting body flight. He is now chief engineer at NASA's Dryden Flight Research Center here where the shuttle is being tested.

"The question is how well it will handle."

He and several other test pilots from the lifting-body days will be watching intently as the Boeing 747 takes off Friday with the shuttle riding piggyback.

The shuttle is designed to make orbital missions much cheaper than in the past, when rockets were used only once and astronauts returned in complicated ocean splashdowns.

It will blast into space with the aid of disposable booster rockets and a huge belly tank that will fuel its rocket engines. Able to carry up to seven persons and 65,000 pounds of cargo, the shuttle can perform all kinds of jobs in orbit, from launching and repairing satellites and space labs to constructing orbiting power stations.

Its work done, the shuttle will fire a final rocket blast to set it on a homeward course, then return to earth in a sizzling glide through the atmosphere, landing in California or Florida like a conventional airplane.

Operational flights of the Enterprise, named for a starship in the science fiction series "Star Trek," are to begin in 1980.

In the lifting-body program, craft of various shapes were dropped from bombers over this desert test base and flew, with rocket engines, as high as 80,000 feet and at speeds of more than 1,000 miles an hour. Then, their engines cut, they glided earthward and landed at a hot 200 mph.

Only once was there a serious accident. In 1967, Bruce Peterson was landing the M2F2 when it went out of control, slammed down and flipped several times. Peterson was severely injured but survived.

The accident, recorded on film, can be seen every week as the opening sequence of TV's "Six Million Dollar Man" series.

The 150,000-pound shuttle originally was designed with engines to give it maneuvering ability on landing and give the pilots some room for error, Thompson said, but they were eliminated to save weight.

To prove that it could land without power, planes were modified to cut their ability to glide, making them as poor at staying up in the air as the shuttle, and then landed with their engines cut to idle.

The lifting-body tests have made it likely the shuttle will have a smooth maiden descent, but have not removed every element of risk.

"The one thing that hasn't been demonstrated is separation," Thompson said.

The shuttle is to be launched off the top of the 747, by putting the jet into a dive and releasing the shuttle from its mountings on the 747's roof. It must "pop up" quickly enough to clear the 747's tall vertical tail fin, ensuring that the two craft separate cleanly.

"We're a little concerned about some kind of rolloff, or some slight pitch-down due to turbulence, or a control system hiccup," said Thompson. That could bring the two craft slamming back together.

The shuttle crewmen have ejection seats and the 747 pilots have an escape tunnel through which they could bail out if trouble arose.

Flights of the mated shuttle and 747 earlier this year demonstrated the stability of the piggyback arrangement. With two crewmen in the shuttle, the planes were put through the launching maneuvers, except that at the crucial point of separation the craft remained firmly locked together and returned to base without freeing the shuttle.

Racial wars 'not solution'—Young

KINGSTON, Jamaica (AP) — Ambassador Andrew Young said Saturday that racial confrontations used to keep the South poor but when whites and blacks stopped fighting, "We got a southern white president and a black ambassador."

Young, U.S. ambassador to the United Nations, is on a 12-day, 10-nation trip to the Caribbean and Latin America. He told more than 100 American volunteers here the Peace Corps was "one of the best things about American foreign policy."

In an exchange later with African and Jamaican students, Young denounced as "romantic" the idea that armed struggle was the only way to bring about black majority rule in Rhodesia.

The ambassador said he would rather work toward free elections in white-ruled Rhodesia and other southern Africa trouble spots than have the United States supply arms to liberation movements and "train people to kill."

Cold-water 'drowning' victims may not be dead

—AP Newsfeatures

Each year some 8,000 Americans drown, but in a handful cases, victims who appear clinically dead can be revived because they were lucky enough to be submerged in waters cold enough to trigger two vital defense mechanisms.

By Alton Blakeslee
AP Science Editor

NEW YORK — Brian Cunningham's car broke through the ice, rolled over and lay submerged in a pond for 38 minutes. Cunningham, 18, recalled "struggling, inhaling water and losing consciousness." A companion fell on top of him.

Both appeared dead when lifted from the water. Just as an ambulance was about to take them to a morgue, Brian's body gave an agonal gasp — a kind of involuntary belch — and rescue workers immediately started resuscitation while the ambulance raced to the University of Michigan Hospital.

Four minutes usually is considered the upper limit of time the brain can go without oxygen before being damaged. But Cunningham, submerged for more than half an hour, was revived, left the hospital two weeks later and lives a normal life. In fact, he's an "A" student.

His companion, whose body had made no sounds, was not resuscitated. He became one of 8,000 Americans who drown each year.

MORE PEOPLE such as Cunningham could be saved if rescuers bet upon two natural defenses of the body in cold-water drownings, says Dr. Martin J. Nemiroff of the University of Michigan.

He tells of nine documented cases of healthy survival of persons submerged without oxygen in cold water for four to 38 minutes and says:

Don't give up too soon in rescue efforts.

One key defense is that cold water, below 68 degrees Fahrenheit, lowers body temperature, slowing blood flow, with the brain needing less oxygen. Such cooling of the body frequently is done to permit open-heart surgery without brain injury.

Another defense is the "mammalian diving reflex" that permits air-breathing seals and porpoises to stay under water for 30 minutes or so.

The reflex slows the heartbeat. Less blood is pumped to tissues such as muscle, skin and gut, that can get along with little oxygen; more goes to the brain and tissues needing more oxygen.

Humans experience this reflex, but to a lesser degree, when the face is immersed in water cooler than 68 degrees, Nemiroff says. The face somehow triggers the reactions for the diving reflex.

In immersion the heart slows. There may be no detectable breathing, no pulse at the wrist. The skin gets little blood and turns blue and cold. The eyes can become fixed and dilated.

"TO THE lay person and even to some experts, the patient appears clinically dead," Nemiroff says, but he might be saved with quick and aggressive rescue efforts.

Police, emergency medical technicians and the public "must learn that just because someone looks dead when you pull him from the water, you don't just say, 'Well, that one's gone,' and forget it," says Nemiroff, assistant professor of internal medicine, pulmonary division, at the medical school.

The colder the water, the more profound the diving reflex, with perhaps more protection for the brain, he adds. The reflex is stronger or more active in children and young people, and rescue should be tried particularly with toddlers who "drown" in cold water.

There is much less reflex effect in warmer waters.

Another protective mechanism is the concept of "dry drowning." The first in-rush of cold water may cause spasm of the larynx. This protects th lungs from drawing i water, but the person ma become asphyxiated. taken from the water spo enough, persons who hav n't flooded their lung may have rapid recoveri with standard heart-lu resuscitation. Ten to percent of drownings m be the "dry" kind.

Reporting on 13 "co water drownings, water below 70 degr Nemiroff says nine we resuscitated and suffe no brain damage or ot ill effects. Two suffer brain damage. Two died o lung infections, contracted in the water.

One survivor was a physician submerged for 15 minutes, now back in practice.

Resuscitation mu begin immediately at th water's edge, Nemiro says. It should incl external heart mass and "ventilation" with near 100 percent oxy as you have availa

Senate panel backs tax funds for consumer-lobby expenses

WASHINGTON (AP) — Business consistently spends many times more than consumer groups in trying to influence important federal regulations, a Senate panel reported Saturday.

The airline industry and the telephone company each spend more than $2 million a year while consumer groups interested in airline and telephone issues spend $20,000 or less, according to a report released by the Senate Governmental Affairs Committee, which is conducting a two-year study of federal regulations.

To counter this kind of imbalance, the panel urged Congress and federal agencies to give tax money to consumer groups to pay their legal expenses in regulatory proceedings where "they can reasonably be expected to make a substantial contribution."

The panel's recommendations were adopted by a 14-0 bipartisan vote.

The committee urged creation of a new, federal agency to push consumer views at regulatory proceedings. Legislation that would establish a consumer protection agency is now pending in Congress.

The committee also said Congress should make it easier for consumers to get into the courts to sue agencies over regulatory decisions.

"In every case or agency reviewed, industry spent many times more on regulatory participation than their public interest counterparts," the committee reported. "In some instances industry committed as much as 50 to 100 times the resources budgeted by the public interest participants."

The panel said that last year 11 major airlines spent $2.85 million for outside lawyers to influence the Civil Aeronautics Board, which controls airlines fares. By contrast, Aviation Consumer Action, a passenger-interest group, spent $20,000, half its total budget, to push consumer views at CAB proceedings.

The panel said American Telephone & Telegraph Co. reported spending $2.23 million in 1975 on proceedings at the Federal Communications Commission, including $1.8 million in three cases to fight a proposed increase in competition in the telephone business and to seek two increases in profit rates. In those three cases "there was a total absence of any public interest representation," the panel said.

The panel cited an estimate by an industry lawyer, George Freeman, who said electric utilities must spend $500,000 to $1 million in legal fees to obtain a federal license to build a nuclear power plant. It said this is 10 to 20 times more than public interest groups can afford to spend to oppose such licenses.

The panel said that in more than half the regulatory proceedings it studied there was no public participation at all, and that when consumer witnesses did appear at such proceedings, they were commonly outnumbered by industry witnesses 10 to 1 or more.

It said money was the key to this lopsided pleading.

"The greatest single obstacle to active public participation in regulatory proceedings is the lack of financial resources by potential participants to meet the great costs of formal participation," the panel's report said.

Accord to 'stabilize' milk prices

Critics say it will cost consumers

Associated Press

SACRAMENTO — Gov. Brown's administration and the dairy industry have reached agreement on a proposal to "stabilize" milk production, but consumer spokesmen say it will boost prices as much as 5 cents per half gallon.

The plan was written last week into a 65-page bill, sponsored by Assemblyman Barry Keene, D-Eureka. It will get a hearing Tuesday before the Senate Agriculture Committee.

The proposal resulted from a long series of meetings among legislators, dairy lobbyists and aides to Food and Agriculture Director Richard Rominger.

Consumer spokesmen complain they were excluded.

Lois Salisbury, a lawyer for Public Advocates, said the bill would cost California consumers $30 million to $50 million a year and will insure even greater surpluses that will cost taxpayers another $40 million to keep off the market.

"In essence it will legitimize the present sweetheart relationship between the dairy industry and the Department of Food and Agriculture," she said.

Backers of the bill say there is no basis for Ms. Salisbury's complaints.

"This bill does not change the price of milk," said Jay Goold, lobbyist for the League of California Milk Producers.

A spokesman for the grocers, Merle Goddard, said he had no part in developing the bill and has not seen it. Keene was out of town last week and unavailable for comment on the consumer complaints.

The bill is a total rewrite of the complicated California milk law in effect since 1935.

It changes the way the food and agriculture director sets minimum prices paid to dairymen. Under the old law, he considered the cost of producing milk — both Class A, or drinking milk, and Class B, used in manufactured products.

Over the years the amount of Class B milk produced in California has dropped to a tiny fraction of the total, and drinking milk is being diverted into manufactured products — powder, butter, cheese and the like.

The proposed bill says the prices the director sets "shall be in reasonable and sound economic relationship with the value of milk used for manufacturing purposes."

The bill says the director shall set a minimum price that will assure an adequate supply at "fair and reasonable" prices to consumers, and that the price of milk "may be affected and influenced by the national market for milk and dairy products."

Goold says this is only reasonable, since California is the second largest milk producer in the nation behind Wisconsin. He says the national supply of milk for manufactured products should affect the price California dairymen get.

But Ms. Salisbury says such a system will boost retail prices.

"The director apparently will be able to justify higher producer milk prices on the basis of higher costs incurred by producers in other states, rather than the costs of operation under the more efficient market conditions which have prevailed in California," she said.

The bill also ends the power the director has had since 1937 to set minimum prices for wholesalers and retailers as well as producers.

Chel issues report on 2 money bills

By Bob Houser
Political Editor

Assemblyman Fred Chel, D-Long Beach, Saturday issued a status report on major financial legislation along with a tentative prediction that the end product will be a medley of compromise.

In conference committee and unresolved are two major money bills, one for property tax and renter assistance, the other for school financing. In their present forms the first would provide direct state assistance to the local homeowner and renter; the second would provide state assistance to local school districts.

THE SCHOOL bill seeks to meet the State Supreme Court's mandate to equalize per-pupil expenditure among school districts.

The Legislature instructed Legislative Analyst A. Alan Post to make a feasibility study on having the state finance the entire education system directly, Chel said, thereby meeting the court mandate "and at the same time reducing the crushing local property tax burden."

Alternatives suggested in Post's report, just delivered to the Legislature, are "extremely doubtful" in their chances, according to Chel.

Based on fiscal 1976-77, the state would have to appropriate $5.6 billion to replace school revenues now raised by the local property tax.

From the limited number of other sources Post suggested alternative combinations — a combination of personal income and corporation taxes or a combination of sales tax and corporation taxes.

FULL STATE financing at the $5.6-billion mark would require a personal income surtax (hike) of 49 percent and a doubling of the bank and corporation tax. The other suggested alternative would require a rise of 4 percent in the sales tax to 10 cents on the dollar and a 2 percent increase in the bank and corporation tax to 11 percent.

Chel points out that both those systems apply to the $5.6 billion whereas "it can readily be assumed that will escalate to a higher figure in succeeding fiscal years unless local school districts can hold their expenditures to the present level.

"Needless to say, (these state financing proposals) mean a tax shift rather than a tax reduction."

THE SHIFT, however, would relieve low and middle income homeowners while shifting more of the burden on personal income, a more progressive tax.

"Aside from the obvious lack of state general revenue (in these alternatives) there is the further question of local control," Chel said. 'Historically, local school districts have maintained and financed local school systems through locally elected school board members. State financing would inevitably reduce local control."

Chel said a more likely solution would be for the state to increase its assistance to local school districts and to phase in equalization over a three-year period.

Depending on the size of the property tax and renter assistance bill, as well as the school finance bill, "we should be able to finance substantial state assistance out of anticipated general revenues," Chel said.

"The sentiment of both the administration and the Legislature is against any type of state tax increase and in favor of financing both bills within the existing budget," he said.

NINTH CLEAN-UP

Councilman Russ Rubley reminded North Long Beach residents of the Ninth District that they can dispose of large unwanted items such as stoves, refrigerators, beds, tree branches, etc. during the district's Operation Clean Sweep III, Aug. 13 through 21.

Such items will be picked up by the city's Department of Public Services. Rubley said the items should be placed out the night before the regular trash pick-up day. Since the Clean Sweep program started in 1975, North Long Beach residents have disposed of more than 300 tons of material.

Rubley said that in addition to the open trash days, many volunteers from chapters of the North Long Beach Neighborhood Association and community organizations will be lending a hand to senior and handicapped citizens in cleaning up their property.

Volunteers will be recognized at a party Aug. 14 in Houghton Park and there will be a drawing for prizes donated by merchant members of the North Long Beach Business Association.

Persons wishing more information or who want to join in the clean-up effort may call Rubley's office at 423-7924.

Giants locked in beer battle

Miller blitz rattles staid industry

By Ann Crittenden
New York Times Service

NEW YORK — Beer is the star of the summer season, with almost every commercial break testifying that never before has the public been so avidly courted by the brewing industry.

The advertising sound and fury, along with the emergence of the new "light" beer battle for a share in the beer business, signals what may well be the final stage in the consolidation of the once locally based business into a handful of giant companies.

THIS LATEST struggle began when the still somewhat staid brewing business was shaken to its cellars by the entry of Phillip Morris Inc. into its ranks. The nation's second-largest cigarette manufacturer (behind R. J. Reynolds) brought with it all of the sophisticated marketing techniques and massive advertising muscle used to sell cigarettes and, it is now clear, literally transformed one of the nation's oldest and most traditional consumer products industries.

In a meteoric and unprecedented rise, Phillip Morris's Miller Brewing Company, acquired in 1970, has climbed from eighth to third position in the industry. Last year Miller posted a 43 percent increase in barrelage while the industry as a whole grew less than 2 percent, and analysts believe Miller will probably oust the Jos. Schlitz Brewing Company from the runner-up spot next year at the latest.

THIS ONSLAUGHT has inspired an aggressive counterattack by Anheuser-Busch Inc., the industry leader for 20 years and manufacturer of Budweiser, the nation's top-selling brand. And as the old Indian proverb says, when two elephants fight, it's the ants that get hurt.

All over the country in recent months, Anheuser-Busch and Miller have been gobbling up market shares from Schlitz, the Pabst Brewing Company and the Adolph Coors Company, numbers two, four and five in the industry, respectively, and from smaller regional breweries.

At the same time, Anheuser and Miller are adding new brewing capacity at such a rate that by 1980, if they meet their objectives and if the industry grows at an expected rate of 4 percent a year, they could be selling approximately half the beer in the United States (versus less than one-third today).

THE TOP five brewers have already increased their collective share of the market from 53 percent in 1971 to 68 percent last year, and by 1980, analysts believe, they could command 80 to 90 percent.

That would complete the transformation of the brewing industry, which has been shrinking into fewer and fewer hands since the bubbly days immediately after Prohibition, when more than 700 breweries were in operation. Their number dwindled to 118 in 1965, 54 in 1975 and to 47 today. By the end of the decade, some observeers argue, only 15 might survive.

The process is dramatically illustrated by the most recent sales data. According to an industry newsletter published by Jerry Steinman of West Nyack, N.Y., Miller captured 30 percent and Anheuser 20 percent of the total industry's sales gains in May in 27 states with more than half the national population.

During the second quarter, for the first time, three of the top five brewers will show a decline in volume from the previous year, says Emanuel Goldman, an analyst with Sanford C. Bernstein & Co.

One of the hardest hit was Coors, which will show the biggest quarterly drop in barrelage since the company went public. As Steinman wrote recently, Anheuser and Miller now form "two sides of a nutcracker," with everyone else in the middle.

The key to Miller's success, it is agreed, is marketing. Specifically, a new management team from Phillip Morris, headed by John A. Murphy, simply applied the Procter & Gamble formula to beer — dividing the market into demand segments offering products and packages to satisfy each and spending vast sums on promotion.

"It was a new business and it wasn't," says George Weissman, vice chairman of Phillip Morris and head of its nontobacco operations. "We'd already been processing agricultural products and putting them into packages that are thrown out after use. They have the same kind of outlets, obviously you have to advertise them, and the financial controls are the same."

The new management's first breakthrough was in packaging, with the introduction of a 7-ounce bottle (standard size is 12 ounces), which did for the sales of Miller High Life what the flip-top box did for Phillip Morris's Marlboro cigarettes.

Then, after introducing several lackluster new brands, the company finally hit a winner two years ago with Lite, a low-calorie brand that turned out to be the most successful new beer in years.

Miller is also testing an even lighter beer called Player's, is introducing a new 8-ounce can that fits neatly into a man's hand and is test-marketing a domestically brewed Lowenbrau in a bid to challenge Anheuser's Michelob, the leader in the super-premium end of the market.

All of these innovations cost money, and Philip Morris has not been shy about spending it. The cigarette giant has twice the cash flow of the largest beer manufacturer ($348 million last year, compared with Anheuser's $155 million), and cigarette profits have furnished much of the $500 million that Phillip Morris has spent in revitalizing Miller, including the cost of acquisition.

In addition, Miller's own earnings have been poured into advertising budgets which, per barrel, have consistently dwarfed the industry averages.

For years these massive outlays prevented Phillip Morris from earning any profits from beer operations, but last year Miller showed an operating income of $76.1 million, nearly triple the previous year and more than enough to compensate for all of Phillip Morris's expenditures.

This year Murphy expects to see operating income top $100 million. The company's profits per barrel have soared as volume and productivity have improved because, company executives say, all of Miller's brands are positioned in the premium end of the market, making Miller the highest-priced beer, per barrel, on the market.

Moreover, with demands for its product exceeding capacity since April 1975, the company has been able to implement a 2 percent price increase this year — in sharp contrast to the price-cutting engaged in by its competitors.

"THE MOST remarkable thing happening now is that we've been able to keep increasing our market share in the last six months in the face of heavy discounting by Busch and Schlitz," Weissman claims.

Anheuser-Busch executives admit that short-term price promotions have been part of their strategy to counter Miller. The "King of Beers" was badly hurt by a 95-day strike last year that slashed production by about 50 percent and sent market share tumbling from 23.7 percent in 1975 to 19.4 percent last year. When the shutdown was over, the more traditional St. Louis-based company, after some admitted "crepe-hanging," as one executive put it, frankly set out to beat Phillip Morris at its own game.

"There was a shift toward a more aggressive business when Miller emerged and when the industry took a short-term slowdown in 1975 and 1976," says Orion P. Burkhardt, chief of beer marketing for Anheuser-Busch. "Now everyone has to be a better marketeer."

AT A PEP rally-style conference last fall, Anheuser urged its 950 wholesalers to go "back to basics" with a hard sales approach, personally calling on retail customers and "pressing the flesh" in supermarkets and taverns. "Some of those guys hadn't been on a delivery truck in years," says Burkhardt.

Early this year, the company finally came out with its entry in the light beer sweepstakes, Natural Light. Anheuser also is testing an 8-ounce can and, according to August A. Busch III, president and chief executive, it may come out with still another brand within a year. "We're very aggressive," he says, almost defensively. "We'll be probing and testing the market — if there's a void we'll find it."

Above all, Anheuser is matching Miller's high-rolling promotion budgets with record-breaking advertising expenditures. The company says this year's ad budget will be about 60 percent higher than the $49 million spent last year. Much of the money will go into a new, hard-sell television campaign for Budweiser, the source of more than 80 percent of Anheuser's revenues and the nation's best-selling beer.

SOME analysts wonder what Anheuser's fast rebound, fueled by extensive discounting, may be doing to its margins, which are already lower than Miller's. When asked about the company's profitability, Busch replies, "We're not necessarily out to have the highest unit margins in this industry, and we think that says something to the consumer."

In any event, most industry observers believe that the revitalized company will have no trouble regaining one-quarter of the total beer market this year, its acknowledged goal, and in holding on to the industry leadership for the foreseeable future.

The real victims of the struggle now consuming the industry, according to the experts, will be the regional brewers, which simply don't have the resources to build the massive plants or match the escalating advertising expenditures now characteristic of the titans of the brewing industry.

Canada air strike set

OTTAWA (AP) — Canadian air traffic controllers said Saturday they would meet a threat of back-to-work legislation by moving up their strike deadline and changing strategy from rotating work stoppages to a general walkout.

Leaders of the Canadian Air Traffic Control Associaton set the walkout of the 2,200 union members for 4 a.m. EDT (1 a.m. PDT) today.

A strike would virtually shut down all air services in Canada except for mercy flights and flights to the remote north, which the controllers have agreed to handle.

Transport Minister Otto Lang said he will introduce legislation Tuesday ordering the controllers back to work and imposing a contract settlement. With swift action, the bill could become law Tuesday night, he said.

Bare booth buss bust, patron says

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — The self-proclaimed "World's First All-Nude Kissing Booth" was open for 25 minutes before its first customer put down his dollar for a kiss.

"It's not worth a dollar," O.D. Jones said after his 20-second smootch with a naked dancer in the Tampa bar.

The kiss took place under hot lights as a television camera recorded the booth's opening Friday night.

Gil Rodriguez, the bar's owner, said potential kissers probably were scared by reporters and undercover policemen in the crowd.

Tampa ordinances don't allow nude entertainers to dance within three feet of their customers. But police say if the women are seated in a kissing booth they are not entertaining, thus making the booth legal.

The Florida Division of Beverages has suspended enforcement of its rule prohibiting contact between nude entertainers and patrons, pending a court challenge of the law.

But state officials say they are paying close attention to what goes on at the kissing booth.

"We'll examine the situation very closely, get eyeball evidence," said Division of Beverages Director Charles Nuzum. "If it's just kissing, it's not too bad. But if they start 'rassling, well . . . ."

Pair have feet on ground after up-in-air honeymoon

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — It was "more nice than bad," but Bridgette Money said she and her husband, Sam, 19, won't miss their honeymoon quarters in a tent atop a shopping center marquee.

The Moneys spent their first three weeks of wedded life aloft to earn $1,000 and an all-expenses-paid Las Vegas honeymoon in a promotion for radio station KYNN.

"It wasn't bad at all," the 18-year-old bride said Saturday. "It was kind of nice. Well, it was more nice than bad."

After spending three weeks perched 25 feet in the air, she admitted: "I feel better now. I like having my feet on the ground."

Some 200 persons were on hand when the honeymoon ended Friday and the couple came down to a wedding reception at the shopping center.

Mrs. Money said the first week of the honeymoon was "weird" because of the attention they received.

"I thought I was dreaming. I kept asking myself, 'What am I doing up here?'" she said. "I kept wondering, 'What is everybody coming to see?' But then we got used to it."

With telephone, CB radio and a portable outhouse, they settled in for the honeymoon.

"We got a lot of calls from all over," she said. "It shocked us. They'd wake us up and say something like 'This is a radio station in Florida.' It was weird."

They also had visits from her dog Gidget, and they adopted a black cat, named Marquee.

It started with a want ad seeking an engaged couple for three weeks of outside work. Their wedding took place July 17, just outside the 8-by-16-foot tent camper on a platform on a marquee of Crossroads shopping center, at Omaha's busiest intersection.

They were forced down twice on the second day by tornado warnings. Since their safety was involved, they didn't forfeit their chance for the $1,000 and the gifts donated by shopping center merchants.

With the honeymoon over, the Moneys headed Saturday for four days in Las Vegas.

"We're really looking forward to it," she said. "We're just starting out, and neither one of us has been there. It's a once-in-a-lifetime thing for us."

Four faces of killer called 'Son of Sam'

By Arthur Everett
Associated Press

NEW YORK — The .44-caliber killer is the target of the greatest manhunt in New York history. But it is doubtful if any of the 300 police officers hunting him would recognize the "Son of Sam" if they sat next to him on the subway.

Four sketches of the mad gunman have been prepared at one time or another during his year-long reign of terror — testimony to the divergent descriptions obtained from a handful of witnesses.

The newest sketch was based on details obtained from the killer's latest of eight attacks — last Sunday's fatal shooting of 20-year-old Stacy Moskowitz, fifth female victim of "Son of Sam." One young man also died.

Among those providing the latest information was Stacy's date, Robert Violante, also 20. He got a glimpse as the killer crouched and fired twice at the girl, shattering her skull and mortally damaging her brain.

But the killer's next shot struck Violante, destroying one eye and damaging the other. It is questionable whether he will be able to see if the time comes to identify a suspect in the case.

A composite of the four sketches portrays a white male, 20 to 35 years old, standing 5 feet 7 to 6 feet 2, weighing anywhere from 150 to 220 pounds. Police are considering the possibility that the .44-caliber killer has deliberately misled them through the use of disguises, including wigs and false moustaches.

They think only one person is involved, because ballistics tests have shown that all the shots came from the same .44-caliber Bulldog revolver made by Charter Arms.

Adding to the difficulty of catching "Son of Sam" is that he almost certainly does not fit the sinister role he has chosen for himself, according to Dr. Robert Sadoff, a forensic psychiatrist at Philadelphia General Hospital, who pointed out:

"He's probably the last kind of individual you'd expect to do this sort of thing. He's a nondescript individual leading a quiet life. When he's his usual self, he could be an industrious, helpful guy.

"My feeling is that his game with the police is giving him as much excitement and interest as the killings."

And Dr. Lewis Robbins, psychiatrist-in-chief at Long Island Jewish-Hillside Medical Center, said of the police profile of the killer: "It fits too many people in too many situations for one to make any definite conclusions."

It is generally agreed that there is a psychopathic sexual twist to the mind of the killer, whose primary targets have been women.

"His most obvious motivation is a murderous revenge on women," said Dr. Gabriel Koz, director of Manhattan State Hospital. "He's infuriated by the intimation of being left out of sex, out of love.

"I think he's not on the surface crazy. There is a core of psychosis or craziness, but it's well enough disguised that he passes for normal."

During the investigation, more than 3,000 persons have come under suspicion, only to be cleared. Said Inspector Timothy Dowd, head of the task force assigned to catch "Son of Sam":

"We have a few things we know for sure. We have a few theories. But we have no solid leads. It's frustrating."

One clue would seem to be the .44-caliber revolver that gave the killer his original nickname. But the police are faced with the task of tracing 28,000 such guns produced, including 600 that were reported stolen at one time.

As for tracing "Son of Sam" through ammunition purchases, he has made none. Detective Frank Pergola said:

"We know this guy must have a stockpile of ammunition. He's fired 32 times so far without going into stores to buy more ammo."

The killer always fires only four bullets from the gun's five chambers, saving one, perhaps, for the policeman who eventually corners him, or for himself when he faces capture.

VIDEOTAPE VIEW of a "Son of Sam" sketch is shown at a precinct station during a briefing on the killer given all New York police officers before they went on duty Friday. They were told to chase couples from lovers' lanes to prevent them from becoming the gunman's next victims.

'Dawson 5' throw party

By Robert Furlow
Associated Press

DAWSON, Ga. — Shoving and grinning, five young black men lined up in a row for the television cameras.

"You some kind of singing group?" a girl shouted.

No, they were having a courthouse-steps birthday party for Roosevelt Watson and James Jackson Jr., two of the "Dawson Five" charged with murder in the shooting of a white ranch foreman.

The party took place during a break in testimony in which Watson and Jackson calmly accused law enforcement officers of threatening them with castration, electrocution and informal execution with a bullet between the eyes.

The contrast in moods between the party and the testimony wasn't the only contrast in the first week of arguments on motions in the 18-month-old case of the shooting of Gordon Howell at a rural grocery.

In the courtroom, about 15 men sat to the right of Superior Court Judge Walter Geer. Some were there to keep order if needed. Two were officers expected to take the stand this week to deny the allegations that they brutally threatened the defendants.

All were white.

The five defendants, aged 18 to 23, and one of their attorneys were the only blacks inside a barrier separating court principals from spectators.

Outside the barrier was a sea of black faces, more than 200 persons murmuring "yes, yes," or "he never did" as a quiet accompaniment to the testimony.

The whites were on their farms or in their stores, somewhere else.

Geer has forbidden anyone on the county jury list from attending the hearings since they are potential jurors in the case. But blacks filled the courtoom each day.

Hoping to suppress a witness's identification of Watson, defense attorney Millard Farmer led a psychologist — an expert on eyewitnesses — through testimony attacking the reliability of that identification.

Hoping to suppress evidence gathered with a search warrant in early 1976, Farmer made much of a then-used justice of the peace fee system — now outlawed by the U.S. Supreme Court — in which fees were paid only if warrants were granted.

Hoping to show a climate of racial discrimination, defense attorneys questioned local ministers and school officials and the operator of a whites-only swimming pool.

The headmaster of all-white Terrell Academy — begun seven years ago when courts ordered the local high school integrated — said he has no problem getting teachers.

"Is that because they don't want to work at the public school?" asks Farmer.

"That's right, that's right," come the quiet voices from the spectators.

The headmaster said that's about right.

Waiting their turn were Dist. Atty. John Irwin and a helper — Michael Stoddard — who was sent by the state Prosecuting Attorneys Council.

Sometimes slouching in chairs but paying attention most of the time were the defendants: Roosevelt Watson, who will be 21 Monday, and his brother Henderson, 23; James Jackson Jr., who just turned 18, and his brother Johnny, also 18, and J.D. Davenport.

Sandy is Broadway's hot dog

NEW YORK — Sandy, the mongrel in "Annie," has become a major Broadway celebrity at the age of about 2½, and we reporters have to cover his social life the same as we cover the party-goings of Sylvia Miles, Tennessee Williams and Monique Van Vooren.

Sandy's become a gay dog, a party dog. He gets invited everywhere. He's truly famous. Gallagher's restaurant removed the photograph of a celebrated woman from a front-room position and placed Sandy's picture there.

He's become so popular that his young owner-trainer, Bill Berloni, must watch his social activity so he doesn't get overtired and miss a show.

"Sandy not only gets invited to go to parties but to be a host at parties," Berloni said the other day at the new uptown apartment he took after Sandy and his understudy, Arf, brought him a new prosperity. Sandy and Arf bring Berloni about $450 a week.

"I have to watch Sandy's time," Berloni said, sounding like a stage mother. "Sandy was scheduled to be mascot of the 'Annie' softball team in the game with the Bad News Bears. I told them Sandy could only stay a short time for pictures. I had to take him home and let him rest up for the show that night."

HIS PAW-prints have become valuable. He gave them for the opening of a special display at the Lincoln Center Public Library.

"I have trouble working all this in," said Berloni, who's only 20. "In the summer, a dog's metabolism changes. Sandy needs more rest."

Sandy's a cross between an Irish wolfhound and an Airedale terrier, and is long-haired.

"We bought an air-conditioner for Sandy and Arf," Berloni said.

I can report one exclusive item about Sandy. He almost caught a burglar. At least he averted a robbery.

"This is the God's truth," Berloni said. "On a Tuesday about two weeks ago, it was hot, and that afternoon I stayed home and took a nap.

"Suddenly both dogs started barking. It being a new apartment, I decided to quiet them so we wouldn't get complaints from the neighbors.

"They were barking at the window ledge. Suddenly, I saw a man who was about halfway in the window. Sandy was biting his leg. When the man heard me, he got out of the window and to the fire escape or wherever he got in. I called the police and told them I was the owner of Sandy. They knew who Sandy was and got there within about 15 minutes. For a couple of days there were plainclothesmen around our door."

SANDY'S favorite game is playing in the spray foam hydrant sprinklers.

"I'm taking him on a vacation — for just a day or two," Berloni said. "Back to Goodspeed Theater in East Haddam, Conn., where it all started."

That's where Bill Berloni snatched Sandy from an animal shelter's death chamber a year ago. Back in those days Reid Shelton (Daddy Warbucks) hadn't gone bald yet, and Dorothy Loudon hadn't joined the cast of "Annie" as the cruel orphanage-keeper. And Sandy was just starting his road to fame.

Some people may think Sandy's had too much recognition. One member of the Outer Critics Circle resigned when Sandy was given an award and a certain actor wasn't.

Now there's not much left for Sandy to accomplish. Just for his caricature to go up in Sardi's, because he's already got Simon & Schuster planning his life story — "by Bill Berloni, as told to him by Sandy."

YOUR HOROSCOPE by JEANE DIXON

Forecast for Monday

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Your year ahead is like a long but fairly serious party. Much depends on your basic attitudes, what you do with time at your disposal. You have more access to people at large than you realize, very little privacy in any significant action. Relationships are complex, durable. Today's natives are pleasant, candid, rely on their inner sense of morality and justice rather than technical rules. Those born this year will pioneer original approaches to chronic problems.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Be selective: items available for trading, barter, are there for good reasons. Legal matters seem simple, actually reflect complex issues, many schemes.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Don't rise to the bait for over-optimistic spending, big investments based on unrealistic sales talks. Let higher level people protect their own interests.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): The soft sell works better if ideas you're selling are yours. Talk is cheap; people go to excess as if at first misunderstood. Socializing is favored; go!

CANCER (June 21-July 22): It's quite all right if your efforts fail to gain public attention now. The urge to travel is stronger, can be gratified by astute planning, careful maneuver.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Your opinions are in direct conflict with official positions, especially on finances. Opt for sure things based on experience. Romantic appeal runs high.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): As you put a recent vision in practice, you find flaws, along with a gap between what people could be and really are. Avoid overcommitment, scattering energy.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): You want change for the sake of action. Be content with maintenance designed to keep essentials going. Useful information shows up briefly; be alert!

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Put on a bold front, claim all credit due, perhaps a bit of spec. Get backing of silent partners. Find ways to express emotions, expect no immediate response.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Pick up where you left off, make no comment. How you spent the weekend is nobody's business. Sign agreements early, or else all must be renegotiated later.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): This is the last minute before heavy going sets in. Get right on the ball with important projects: work! Evening tapers off to a light romantic-social mood.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Deal only with current reality. People and things are very changeable; act accordingly. Find a trinket symbolic of your feelings, offer it as a fun surprise.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Those nearby shift views, see life in a different way. Get an audience, speak up, spread your outlook. You may convert a VIP. Then help is there if needed.

ED FLANDERS PLAYS TRUMAN—AGAIN
With Gregory Peck as Gen. MacArthur

—AP Wirephoto

Ed as Harry 3rd time around is about enough

By Norman Goldstein
Associated Press

NEW YORK — When you meet Ed Flanders for the first time, you're tempted to ask him how daughter Margaret is doing, how things are in Independence, Mo., and how Bess is faring.

Flanders has played Harry S. Truman three times now — the latest in "MacArthur," with Gregory Peck in the title role — and critics and audiences agree that he seems to become the man rather than to impersonate him.

Flanders, an affable acting veteran of 25 years, thinks the first accolade of his portrayal of the former president came from Margaret Truman, who said only that his hairline was 1½ inches too far back.

Flanders — 42, blue-eyed, with short, curly and graying hair — is pleased, too, that many who knew Truman well have seen the film and "it didn't jolt anybody. There was enough of the man there. That's as much as an actor can hope for: Capture the essence—then talk fast."

FLANDERS STARTED acting at age 17 at San Diego's Globe Theater. He has a list of credits topped by a Tony Award and an Emmy for his role in "A Moon for the Misbegotten," stage and television versions. He started the Truman characterization with "Truman at Potsdam," followed by the one-man show, "Plain Speaking," both for television.

It was in preparation for the David Susskind production of "Plain Speaking" that Flanders saw film of Truman and "got to look at Harry talking," picking up the "melody, his speech: so fast. And I read as many books as I could get my hands on.

"Then it was only 'learn' them words and don't stumble over the furniture.'"

There was, of course, more to the transformation.

"I'm basically a technical actor; I'm not into tertiary motivations. What's more important to me is that it looks right and sounds right."

"Getting his sound" was the first thing he set about to accomplish, Flanders said, treating a listener to the subtle inflections of the "Missoura-Oklahoma-Kansas ... thing." Then came the mannerisms.

The "look right" for "MacArthur" came with the help of makeup artist Dick Smith. It took three hours each day to put on the rubbery face, and he had to wear it another 10 hours or so during the shooting day: "You can't relax with that makeup. ... I couldn't eat; I couldn't do anything else."

THE FACIAL transformation was a meticulous mirror based on photographs of Truman. "We argued a couple of times about the nose," Flanders says. Smith won that one: "My face is rounder; Truman's jaw was bigger. We fixed up the jowls. ... I was 'Larry Latex.' Wear rubber, will travel."

A lively sense of humor is something actor Flanders shares with the man he depicts. In fact, that Truman quality struck Flanders most of all.

"Even in the MacArthur crisis," when the president fired Gen. Douglas MacArthur in a dispute over Korea, "that survival instinct comes out in humor," Flanders says.

The actor professes genuine respect and affection for Truman. "Like him or not, you knew what you had. After Watergate, that's fresh air. He was not pompous; he was a down-on-ground horse trader. The man's directness was enough. And his honesty. I have great respect for the man."

Flanders' Truman in "MacArthur" probably will be his last. The makeup difficulty was part of the decision. "The color's been stripped out of my hair ... I did it for 'me art.'" What's next? Movie? Play?

"I'm looking for a play. It's been eight years since I did 'Moon' with Jason Robards. I've read maybe a dozen plays since. I don't know where people are coming from anymore," he says, referring to his displeasure with those scripts. "Maybe I'm getting older than I think."

In the interim, Flanders has directed Robards in a stage production of "The Championship Season" in Florida and has done a television program about journalist and newspaper editor William Allen White — without "rubber."

Update on 60s' women radicals

By Joan Zyda
Knight News Service

Rennie Davis, we hear, is selling insurance; William Kunstler is trundling the countryside lecturing on plea bargaining; Bobby Seale and Tom Hayden are politicians; Abbie Hoffman is the travel editor of the pop music magazine Crawdaddy; Jerry Rubin is taking self-improvement courses; and Eldridge Cleaver has found religion.

But where are the radical women of the 1960s?

Is pacifist Joan Baez, the Pied Piperess of the radical movement, leading the masses against Uganda's murderous Idi Amin? Is Jane Fonda giving acting lessons to Vietnamese orphans? And is Elizabeth McAlister, the former Catholic nun, still playing "Kilroy was here" with the Pentagon?

Today — a war, two Presidents, a Watergate, and a J. Edgar Hoover later — most of the radical women of the '60s have settled into the straight society they once challenged aggressively. But, in interviews, they point out their ideals haven't changed.

"I'm still a radical," said Baez, 35, "but I'm basically in a cooling-off period. I backed away from the scene after the war ended because I could feel myself getting very tired. I just decided it was time to put my son, myself, and my music ahead of everything else for a while."

At first, facing the world without an aggressive and overt political stand made Baez feel guilty. "At concerts last year, I was sure people were going to throw spears at me for not championing some cause," she added. "But it didn't happen. they seemed relieved I had shut up. And I felt better after I read somewhere that even Gandhi — the only one who ever made sense to me — took some years off," she added.

Her music these days is strictly mellow, in contrast to the 1960s when it was almost always didactic. The cover of her latest album, "Blowin' Away," may be a bit of a shock to some people.

"My mother's probably going to drop dead when she sees me in this pair of goggles (and a silver racing jacket) looking silly," she said. "I can hear the hard core saying, 'She flipped out. She's gone Led Zepplin.'"

Baez, who is divorced, spoke by telephone from the West Coast in a forthright and relaxed manner, laughing often, in a voice instantly recognizable to anyone familiar with her old concerts and old records in which she liked to say, "If nobody would object, I think I'll take off my shoes."

The latest in chic fashions has even replaced the folksy burlap dresses that used to be Baez's trademark. "I'm addicted to only good things," she said. "The only three places I'll shop in this country are I. Magnin, Joseph Magnin, and Saks, although I try to ease the guilt buying four of one outfit and giving three away.

"If I had the time," Baez added, I'd fly to Paris for my clothes."

HER STRONG-willed pacifist sense has mellowed, too, so that she now lets her 7-year-old son, Gabriel, play with toy guns.

"I swear to God," Baez said, laughing, "some pacifist friends of mine would have just dropped dead if they had seen Gabe and me the other day. He was wearing a plastic sword hooked through a chest strap, and around his hips were two toy six-shooters in a holster. I said, 'Come here, Gabe, I want to take your picture,' and he whipped out both guns and aimed them in different directions. I thought it was great, I didn't care."

Baez mentioned that she also took Gabriel to Disneyland and dropped a quarter in a toy machine for him to shoot missiles at B-52s. "The sound was very realistic — just like Vietnam," she said. "Gabe was very happy. He said, 'Mom, you've got to try this.' So I did."

After the war, Baez said she did only a few political things, things that appealed to her. She went to Northern Ireland last December at the invitation of the Irish peace demonstrators.

"I almost burst into tears when I got the letter from the Irish peace people," Baez said. "Their cause touched me exactly where home is. They were mostly women who don't want to see innocent children killed. It was as simple as that, and it wasn't all red-taped up in Left-wing politics.

"But I wasn't going to stay there and be a peace activist all my life. I went over there only to share whatever knowledge I'd gained in peace work over the years.

"And the whole time I was there, I was afraid I'd be killed, and I kept imagining Gabe by himself without his mother."

She said she was "tempted" last spring to go to Seabrook, N.H., with guitar in hand, to protest the nuclear generating plant because the demonstrations there "felt like home to me... a bunch of kids walking in with knapsacks to sit on their testing ground."

But she decided not to take part.

"I'm tired," she explained. "I just don't feel like saving anyone these days."

"IT TOOK A very high level of passion and steam for women like Baez to do what they did in the '60s," said Dr. David Hubbard, a psychiatrist and expert on protest movements in the United States.

"The times were so turbulent that they just chewed up some of these women and spat them out. Even the most hell-raising of female radicals couldn't maintain that posture for long. There was an exhausting amount of exhibitionism in what they did; most expended themselves to the nth degree."

Another big problem, he said, was that many of the women activists were so busy concentrating on the big issues of the day that their personal lives went by the wayside.

"Many got hotter than hell and burned up all kinds of energy for ideals, but they didn't dare let life get personal," Hubbard said.

One radical woman who did get personal managed to combine the best of both worlds. In 1969, Sister Elizabeth McAlister married fellow radical Philip Berrigan, the excommunicated Roman Catholic priest and leader of the "Catonsville Nine," a group known for destroying draft records at a Selective Service office in 1968 in Catonsville, Md.

McALISTER HAD been a reserved, apolitical nun, a member of the Roman Catholic Order of the Sacred Heart of Mary for 11 years and an art history teacher at Marymount College in Tarrytown, N.Y., until she met Berrigan at a peace workship in 1964. She soon joined his Catholic antiwar forces. When they married, McAlister was automatically released from the sisterhood.

In 1971, McAlister and Berrigan were members of the so-called "Harrisburg Seven," a group indicted for conspiring to blow up the heating system in Washington's federal buildings and kidnap Henry Kissinger. (The jury couldn't reach a verdict and the charges were dismissed.)

Afterward, the couple had two children and settled into a Baltimore commune called Jonah House, which makes its collective living painting houses. But parenthood and even the end of the Vietnam war hasn't cooled their activism. They are what they always were — thorns in the Pentagon's side.

"We're at perpetual war," McAlister explained. "It's the nuclear age with nuclear toys. I don't trust the bastards with their thumbs on the buttons."

Their demonstrations are as outlandish in the late 1970s as they were during the late 1969s. "Let's see," mused McAlister, summarizing their postwar activities. "We've dug a couple of mock graves on the Pentagon lawn. We've chained the doors closed to the Pentagon twice. We've splashed blood (duck blood purchased at a delicatessen) on the Pentagon columns at least four times.

"We've sprayed the word 'death' with blood on Air Force bombers, and we've

Tiny tots pageant regulars

LOUISVILLE — The other little girls had conducted themselves with unnerving aplomb, their little-girl bodies sashaying on the stage and twisting into poses as they modeled their party dresses, their 3- and 4- and 5-year-old faces locked into smiles without joy or spontaneity.

But Lisa Minton, 4 and frightened, wanted no part of her first beauty pageant and refused to be coaxed onto the runway. In the dark at the bottom of the steps to the stage, she whimpered while her mother tried to reassure her.

"All the other girls did it," Carol Minton insisted. "They're not afraid. Won't you do it just once for me? We'll have ice cream when it's over." The Erie, Pa., woman put her arm around the little girl's waist.

In the shadows around them, other mothers were fussing over their daughters and giving instructions. "Hold your hands out like this," said one heavy-set woman, splaying her own chunky fingers parallel with the floor.

"Smahl reel naahee for the judges," a mother from Kentucky instructed while applying some coloring to her youngster's cheeks. "Don't look down. Look straight at 'em. They'll lahk ya' betta' if ya' do."

Dress hems were tugged at, hairdos were flounced, and every now and then a passing entry would stare at Lisa Minton and ask why she was crying.

"You don't want to be the only one too scared to go out there, do you, Lisa?" her mother continued as the line of girls waiting to be introduced grew smaller and smaller. "You promised me you'd go out there before we came here. I'll buy you a pop if you keep your promise."

On stage, the announcer was ready for another little lass. "Our next competitor is 3 years old, she's 3 feet tall, and she's not in school yet."

The youngster, who until then had been lost in her own private thoughts, suddenly came alive. Her eyes opened wide, and her lips receded, revealing a forced, porcelain grimace which was intended to pass as a smile. Her dress was a bit too long, and she had to lift it to keep from tripping.

As each contestant displayed herself before the judges and the hundreds of parents and grandparents in the audience, the announcer shared with them some of her secrets — her favorite color, her favorite person, her favorite food. Red and blue, Mom and Dad, and McDonald's hamburgers got most of the votes, although spaghetti and corn had their supporters, and one girl's favorite person was God.

BY NOW THE last little girl was on stage, and Carol Minton knew her time was running out.

"You're a pretty little girl," she scolded, "and you're too scared to go out there."

"I don't know how," Lisa said, her voice a whisper amid the whimpering.

"Just walk right out there with your head up straight."

Finally Lisa agreed to try. Her shoulders hunched and her head lowered, she tiptoed into the spotlight. Then her courage gave out and she froze against the curtain, sobbing from fear and embarrassment while women in the audience oohed and aahed.

A woman in a Mickey Mouse suit finally brought her back to her mother, who took her by the hand and led her from the room. Lisa had blown her chance to become Tiny Miss of NAPS — the North American Pageant System.

NAPS, which was organized last year by an Ypsilanti, Mich., housewife named Judy Jones, is one of a growing number of beauty pageants springing up around the country for toddlers and preteens.

One estimate is there are more than 5,000 of them, ranging from haphazard neighborhood ventures to national enterprises such as NAPS, which usually involve local and state preliminaries and, if properly conducted, can earn their organizers substantial monetary returns.

In the dozen or so national contests, youngsters compete for such titles as Our Little Miss, America's Little Miss, the National Sweetheart, Cinderella Girl, Little Miss Nationwide, and Little Miss Hemisphere. Most are part of larger pageants in which teen-aged girls also vie for beauty awards and boys and girls alike take part in talent competitions.

SOME CONTESTS encourage their participants to wear make-up and color their hair; others forbid it. Some give extra consideration to the little girl with sophisticated stage manners; others claim they are looking for the "natural little girl." Youngsters who travel the circuit learn how to fill the bill wherever they are, acting naive and spontaneous here and knocking them dead with vampiness there.

None of the national contests draws participants from all 50 states, and some settle for far less. Last year, NAPS attracted entries from nine states. This year the figure was up to 13, but Mrs. Jones was able to organize local pageants in only seven of them.

Of the 96 girls competing in the beauty categories, most did not have to win anything to be invited — just pay a $75 entry fee, which did not cover any SINGERS Frank Sinatra, above, and Elvis Presley — latter beat former in buying first Stutz Blackhawk, new status car.

VETERAN actor Dana Andrews — learned to handle crises without drinking.

Q: I read that the new status car in Hollywood is the Stutz Blackhawk. Can you tell me who owns them and what they cost?

A: For starters, it's interesting to know who doesn't own one — Frank Sinatra. Ol' Blue Eyes wanted to buy the first one sold, but Elvis Presley beat him to it and Sinatra was so miffed he never has bought one. Unmiffed, Presley has since bought four more. Other Stutz owners include Dean Martin (with three), Elton John, Isaac Hayes, Evel Knievel, Dick Martin and Robert Goulet. The hardtop is priced at $64,165, and the convertible a mere $120,000.

Q: Please settle a bet. Which is the longest running TV serial — "Guiding Light" or "Love of Life"?

A: "Love of Life" and "Search for Tomorrow" both premiered in 1951, while "Guiding Light" made its debut in 1952. However, including its 15 years on radio, "Guiding Light" holds the record for total broadcast years, with more than 7,000 episodes.

Q: Is it true that Shelley Duvall was discovered at a soda fountain, like Lana Turner?

A: No. The sensuous starlet was discovered in her own living room in Houston. A guest at one of her parties brought along two friends who were members of the production company filming "Brewster McCloud." Impressed with her unusual looks, they introduced her to director Robert Altman, who has since given her roles in "McCabe and Mrs. Miller," "Thieves Like Us," "Nashville," "Buffalo Bill and the Indians" and "Three Women."

Q: Please settle an argument. What exactly is punk fashion?

A: An evolution of punk rock, Britain's current rage, punk clothes are worn by the performers on stage and by members of the audience. Now being displayed in New York boutiques, they include such bizarre outfits as bloodstained (red paint) shreds of cloth pulled together with safety pins and jewelry made from bicycle chains and razor blades. Ears and cheeks are pierced with safety pins for a final macabre touch.

OLD AND NEW — author David Halberstam, left, is current heart throb of actress Hope Lange, who's appearing on stage with her ex-husband, Don Murray, right.

Q: What's happened to Hope Lange? At one time, she was always on our TV screens — now we haven't seen her in ages.

A: Hope's spending a lot of time in bed with former husband Don Murray — but only because the couple, who were divorced in 1961, are starring together in the Broadway version of "Same Time, Next Year."

Offstage, Hope's best and brightest is Pulitzer Prizewinning author David Halberstam, whose "The Best and The Brightest," a blistering attack on the Kennedy administration, was a sensation when published in 1972.

Q: Has anyone figured out how many pounds of fat the average person consumes in a year?

A: Last year, fat-faddish Americans consumed a record average of 56 pounds of fats in the visible form — butter, margarine, cooking oil, shortening, lard, salad dressing and other fatty products. That doesn't include the even larger amount of invisible fats eaten in meat, cheese, milk, eggs, poultry, fish, grain products, fruits and vegetables.

Q: How long has Dana Andrews been on the wagon, and is he going to make any more movies?

A: "This last time I have not had a drink for almost eight years," says the 65-year-old actor, who is currently playing a role in "The Last Hurrah." "At that time I went on a binge and was terribly upset about it. Before that, it was four years. Now I really am sorry for people who think they can't get through a trauma or disappointment without belting a belt."

Andrews, who is reading five movie scripts, recently finished "Only Good Guys Wear Black."

Q: Which is the largest profession in the U.S., in terms of the numbers employed?

A: Teaching — and many of its members are learning a bitter lesson about the laws of supply and demand. Last year, there were 400 to 600 applicants for every opening as a college English teacher, with the competition in prestige schools as high as 5,000 per vacancy. In the 1975 graduating class, there were 90,950 more teachers than jobs.

ACTOR Albert Finney — changing habits at age 40.

ACTRESS Shelley Duvall — proper introduction sparked her career.

Q: What's happening in the on-again, off-again marriage of Albert Finney and that French actress he married?

A: Finney is finally writing "fini" to his marriage to French star Anouk Aimee. After seeking consolation with a nude model named Erica Creer, the "Orient Express" star is now making tracks with lithe and lovely actress Diane Quick, and seems to have taken a new lease on life: at 40, he has taken up jogging and spruced up his wardrobe.

Facing peril as '007' makes Moore filthy rich

When the late Ian Fleming sold the rights to 12 James Bond novels to producers Harry Saltzman and Albert Broccoli in 1960, he did it to set up a trust fund for his children.

He hated movies, only saw two in his life ("Gone With the Wind" and "Cavalcade"), and hated the choice of Sean Connery as 007. He died four years later, still hating the James Bond movies, but Broccoli is still turning them out and will keep turning them out until he runs out of hardware.

Nobody can tell one James Bond movie from another anymore, but nobody cares. They make 'em big and they make 'em expensive and there's a brainless audience out there in the unwashed swamp of indiscriminate moviegoers that eats 'em up as fast as they can make 'em.

Ian Fleming didn't care for Sean Connery, who got rich on the Bond movies and then got sick of them. He wouldn't have approved of George Lazenby, who made one Bond film and then retired from show business to go off to a monastery to meditate. And the man who gave birth to James Bond in print describing him as a skinny man with a scar on his face (his ideal choice for the role was always Hoagy Carmichael) would be hard put for an explanation of Roger Moore.

"I don't know why they picked me," grins Moore, a 49-year-old actor who has often been described as prettier than his leading ladies, "but the money is fantastic."

It sure is. Moore originally signed for three Bond films and now he's talking about renewing for a fourth. He gets a staggering salary plus a hefty percentage of each film's gross, and all of the Bonds have made astoundingly healthy profits. Moore has become world famous and filthy rich playing 007.

YET IN PRIVATE life he's as much like James Bond as Tatum O'Neal. A soft-spoken gent with a beauty mark Elizabeth Taylor might envy, he seems more at home in an oatmeal cardigan from the Burlington Arcade playing backgammon on a yacht in the South of France than a daredevil secret agent in a rubber fin battling crocodiles, serpents, sexy villans and exploding submarines. "When I started out as an actor," he says wryly, "I thought I'd wear blazers and answer telephones. I'm still waiting."

In the 10th and latest James Bond epic, "The Spy Who Loved Me," which hits the nation's screens this week, Roger Moore is facing new perils:

"It's twice the budget and twice the size on the screen. Most of the Bond pictures cost around $7 million. This one cost $13.5 million. We go back to the underwater bit. A car turns into a submarine that shoots ballistic missiles that knock out helicopters. There's a basic plot: The Russians and the British have lost Polaris submarines that get swallowed up in the bowels of a giant tanker owned by an evil villain named Fishfinger, who plans to blow up New York and Moscow.

He has webbed fingers and lives underwater off the coast of Sardinia in a magnificent underwater city designed by Ken Adam, who did the sets for 'Sleuth.' Everytime he presses a button, all the pictures go up behind a 60-foot dining table and reveal the ocean beyond filled with man-eating sharks. Just like a Beverly Hills screening room."

When Roger Moore talks about the Bond films, which he's paid handsomely to do, it's with the obvious tongue-in-cheek detechment of a wise fool who knows exactly which side of the toast has the butter. Getting the publicity out of the way as fast as possible, he continues: "The sets are so enormous they had to build new soundstages at Pinewood, fill them with water, then blow them up. They set up eight cameras to get the explosions, then dropped 65 billion gallons of water on us when they torpedoed the underwater city, and it washed the director, Lew Gilbert, right out of the tank. We had to shoot the whole thing over again, which didn't go over very well because it came right after the drought in England."

DOES HE EVER get injured? "Constantly. I am convinced the producers are trying to kill me for the insurance. I now have four holes in my backside from a chair that blew up before I could get out of it. I've had concussions, bruises and scars all over my body from these films. I cracked my kneecap, dislocated my shoulder and smashed up a speedboat going 50 miles per hour and knocked out all of my teeth. Listen, it is obvious I don't do this for my health. I do it for money. All I really want to do is wear blazers and answer telephones."

AGENT 007 James Bond was never as handsome as his screen portrayer, actor Roger Moore.

Moore says he's done the Bond character so much the only things he looks forward to on each new Bond film are "the stunts and special effects. The fun of it now is sitting on the set trying to think up new gag lines.

rex reed

"Some of the best James Bond lines in the Sean Connery versions were ad-libs he made up on camera. They cut my best ad-lib in this new one. I fired a gun right at Curt Jurgens' groin and said "Ball's-eye, Fishfinger!' and they thought it was too outrageous. But I did talk them into leaving one thing in — at one point, a submarine turns into a sports car, rides up on the beach, the occupants roll down the window and throw a fish out." These are the jokes, folks.

Has he ever thought about diversifying the image? "Every waking moment. But the men who put up the money for movies today want at least 25 explosions and a speedboat flying through the air when they think of me, and if a script doesn't have those elements, then they say,'Oh, then let's go for Robert Redford.'

I'm dying to do a romantic comedy, but the problem is there aren't any romantic comedies around for men. When I was managing director of Brut Productions, the film division of Faberge, I was responsible for finding and getting them to make 'A Touch Of Class.' My only mistake was not casting myself in it. But I don't think the Bond pictures have hindered my career. I think they're just another extension of my tiny talent."

HIS CAPACITY for self-parody is disarming. One gets the impression that he doesn't take his career any more seriously than the critics do. Yet there's an underlying need to reestablish firmer roots in acting out roles of more substance, and it come to the surface like cream rising to the top of lukewarm coffee when the Bond press-agentry is over and done with and Moore is able to relax and be himself. "I've been terribly lucky because I went from the 'Maverick' TV series to the 'Saint' TV series to James Bond and been typed in every one of them and still I've never been out of work. If anything, I've managed to confuse everyone."

The son of a London policeman, Moore started out as a cartoonist and tea server in a publicity office. An extra job in a Shakespearean movie led to drama classes, modeling, and eventually a trip to America, where he ended up at the tail end of the old MGM era, toiling in a costume epic called "Diane." It still turns up on the Late Show to haunt him: "It had some of the most terrible dialogue ever written, despite the fact that it was a Christopher Isherwood screenplay. Every time I see it, I crack up at one line: I say to Lana Turner.

"I played a rough-and-tumble prince who only wants to wrestle and hunt stags. So she's brought in by my father, who says,'Turn him into a real prince.' So Lana takes this raw youth and obeys the instructions of the court, and I turn to her and say, 'You made me a prince — now make me a king!' I'd love to remake that turkey with Anita Bryant and say, 'Now make me a queen!'"

The films in his Hollywood period were all about like that. He lost Elizabeth Taylor to Van Johnson in "The Last Time I Saw Paris," got upstaged by Ann Blyth's horse in "The King's Thief," and in "The Miracle" with Carroll Baker, he led a parade of soldiers through the streets of Brussels in Rosalind Russell's leftover costumes from "Auntie Mame." He fled Hollywood in 1955, ended up in Yugoslav spaghetti spectaculars, met an Italian temptress named Luisa in something called "The Rape of the Sabine Woman," and they've been making their own spaghetti ever since. Mrs. James Bond, as she hates to be called, is happy with Roger's new fame but disgusted with the image.

BESIDES THE "You are lovely, you are hideous, you remind me of my nephews" fans, he's developed a cult of unruly female camp followers. One girl last year arrived at their country house near London and started sleeping under a tree. Luisa ran out in the yard and evicted her from the property. Luisa is his soulmate, bodyguard, and the mother of his three children — Deborah, 13, Jeffrey, 11, and Christian, 4.

"They're all pros," Moore says. "Jeff played my son in a TV movie about Sherlock Holmes. Deborah worked with me in a TV episode of the 'Persuaders' with Tony Curtis that I directed. But Luisa is the director at home. We have an understanding that I have the last word." What's that? "Yes, dear."

Between Bond pictures, he's done other action-packed bombs like "Street People" with Stacy Keach and "Gold" with Susannah York, but the Bond films have furnished him with the luxury of travel (the new one was filmed in Sardinia, Egypt, Scotland, England, Switzerland, the Bahamas and the Arctic Circle) and the opportunity to work with snakes, sharks and other exotic dangers. Doubles? "If it's a question of falling down 64 stairs, I get a double. If it's 63, I can cope: The love scenes, of course, they have to use a double because Luisa is standing around with a bloody great knife.'Do it,' she says — 'but don't enjoy it!'"

For a man self-described as a "devout coward," Roger Moore has learned to take it on the chin onscreen and off. "To look brave without flinching," grins 007 — "THAT'S acting!"

Papier-mache clocks scarce

Q. "We're seeking information on a papier-mache clock made by Jerome & Co." — Mr. and Mrs. S. D., Bay City, Mich.

A. When the Litchfield Manufacturing Company started supplying ornate papier-mache clock cases to American clockmakers in the mid-1800s, they met with instant acceptance: Who could resist elaborately designed mantel clocks enhanced with mother-of-pearl, painting and stenciling?

Oriental motifs proved popular as did those with patriotic overtones. Some designs were named to honor well-known public figures such as the Hungarian patriot Kossuth. Even Tom Thumb was thusly honored. Due to their scarcity, papier-mache clocks are timely investments. Value guide: Jerome & Co., mantel, oriental decor, $250.

Q. "I'm loaded with Gene Autry items and would appreciate some pricing data." — Tim, Greenfield, Mass.

A. Do nostalgia antique buffs mind being saddled down with material pertaining to "America's Favorite Singing Cowboy?" Never. Value guide: Better Little Book, "Cowboy Detective," 1940, $11; coloring book, Whitman, 1940, $10; Melody Ranch cut-out dolls, 1950, $12; movie still, 1942, $4; pencil tablet, $4; pocket mirror, $18; thermos bottle "Gene Autry Melody Ranch," $7; song sheet, "South of the Border," 1939, $5; wrist watch, animated gun, 1940s, $65.

Q. "Can you enlighten me about Sabino glass?" — Mrs. E. L., Vancouver, Wash.

A. Sabino of Paris was one of the foremost glass artists associated with Art Deco forms of the 1920s and 1930s. His furniture, composed of units of pressed glass molded on invisible frames and handsome lighting fixtures, including illuminated plaques and figural lamps, won wide acclaim on both sides of the Atlantic. Mention must be made of his exquisite enameled glass creations. Obviously inspired by the works of Rene Lalique, he fashioned opalescent figurines as well as white and smokey glass ornamental articles. Value guide: figurine, Art Deco nude, 7 inches tall, circa 1928, $120.

Q. "I can't resist those old sad irons." — Marion, Toledo, Ohio.

A. Although some of the earliest handwrought flatirons had the handles attached at only one spot, the later 19th century cast iron versions usually had them attached at two points. The numbers found on them indicated the weight of the iron and many also bore a maker's name for easy identification.

The ever reliable Mrs. Potts double-pointed irons had removable hardwood handles. Value guide: Enterprise, double pointed star iron, circa 1900, $10.

Picasso takes to your bed

Picasso.

You can't beat that for a big name when you're looking for blockbusters to enhance home furnishings.

Once upon a time, you merely hung a Picasso painting, lithograph or poster, on the wall and hoped friends and relatives took notice.

But soon you will be able to make your bed with Picasso sheets and bedspreads and to treat your windows with curtans or draperies to match. Or maybe you'll want to frame a pillowcase and hang it just like an original painting.

It isn't necessary to be an art connoisseur to appreciate the five Picassos, mainly lithographs, now being reporduced on bed linens, draperies and curtains. The new patterns will be coming to area stores in early September. And unlike many name designer collections, this wholly coordinated series won't cost a fortune.

Pacific Home Products of New York, makers of household goods for mass marketers such as Korvettes and Montgomery Ward, has planned the Picasso collection to be sold for about a third less than most signature items, according to a company executive.

Twin sheets, for example, are expected to be priced at $5.95 to $6.95. Designer items usually run several dollars higher.

Arnold M. Brockman, product manager of Pacific, said the company had arranged with the Picasso estate to reproduce, as exactly as possible, five of the widely known works of the late, great artist. Brockman said duplication of the patterns comes closest to the originals on pillowcases. So, by framing one, you almost get the effect of a real painting. The patterns are repeated in smaller scale on sheets.

In every instance, the original colorings are used.

"Don Quixote" appears in black and white, just as the artist did it. Also in Picasso's own colors are hands and flowers, dancers, his famous doves and a collage of posters.

Dignitaries attend inaugural of 'Blair House'

ONE OF LONG BEACH'S most eligible bachelors, Dr. Bill Blair, has chosen a bride.

His wedding gift to Penny Riddle is a magnificent home on Weston Place. The about-to-be-weds may be Mr. and Mrs. by the time you read this. Their close friends tell me the couple caught a plane a few days ago for Tennessee and may tie the nuptial knot there.

Penny moved herself and her belongings in on one day and when the surprise housewarming took place the next, 50 guests were astonished to find pictures hung and everything in place.

Dwight and Charlotte Bennett were hosts for the cocktail and dinner house warming. Perhaps the house was in good order because the Bennetts called mutual friends in Palm Springs to help with the surprise.

Maj. Donald Miller, USMC, and his wife, Cathy, live in Palm Springs. They telephoned Penny and said they were coming to Long Beach and would love to see the new house.

The home has a posh lounge room with a wet bar and all of the trimmings. This called for a silver ice bucket engraved with the words "Blair House."

The same engraving also was used on assorted serving dishes and cocktail napkins.

Of course, if you are going to have such an elegant place to imbibe, a well stocked bar is a must. So gifters took care of that detail, too.

Among gifters were Penny's parents, Bill and Millie Boucher, and her "Grandma" Beck.

More were Ron and Sandy Howarth, Roland and Marion Bach, Mason and Jan Kight, Bill and Bonnie Scott, Bill and Mary Klingensmith, Dr. Art and Joan Nickerson, Hal and Jeanine Bolick and Ron and Marilyn Brown.

And still more were Bill and Arna Maas, the Dr. Dave Gorens, Jack and Patty Queen, Don and Sandy Gill, Councilman Wes Carroll and his wife, Jeanie, and Dr. Behrooz Ahmadi.

SPEAKING OF the Volunteer State of Tennessee.

Lakewood resident Lucy Faber just returned from a month's visit to Williamsburg, Va., where she attended a gigantic reunion of relatives on the paternal side of her family.

Now you may ask, what does that have to do with Tennessee?

Family members at the reunion in Williamsburg received the news that the state of Tennessee had declared the birthplace of Lucy's paternal grandmother, Mary DeVault, an historical landmark. The ante-bellum mansion, "Sunnyside," is located in Leesburg, Tenn.

Women are asking

'Any way to conserve energy without taking the fun out of cooking?'

By Reba and Bonnie Churchill

Keep that barbecue going well into fall, and save energy! That's the tip of kilowatt watchers who figured out summer picnicking in yard, campsite or park not only was fun but saved fuel. Many plan to continue grilling outside and eating inside. Regardless of season, always follow safety precautions.

Now our thought is if cooking a hamburger, and over one-third of all meals cooked on the grill are burgers, saves on range power, think what it will do for the cooling/heating system in your home. Cooking outdoors, the house will not get overheated, and the air conditioning can be turned down, or off. In cooler weather, food smells will not linger, so less energy is wasted on kitchen fans and other equipment.

Checking with the Charcoal Barbecue Industry, we discovered, "Charcoal is a natural resource that replenishes itself at a rate which is faster than consumption. Charcoal briquets mainly manufactured from natural by-products, such as sawdust, wood chips and scrap lumber, are a valuable though formerly unused energy source."

The logical next step is if preparing the meat entree is a saver, how much more would one economize if the entire meal is cooked on the grill? Everything from soup to dessert can be prepared. Meat for soup stock is cooked over the coals, then added to a pot simmering with soup makings. Bell peppers, stuffed with meat or rice and croutons, are wrapped in foil and cooked in the hot embers.

But, what really trips our tastebuds is making a dessert called "Banana Boats." Slit lengthwise through one side of the skin of a ripe banana, add chocolate bits. Close skin and "grill" until the peeling is tender. When you open the banana, there's a moist-'n' tender fruit oozing with rich, dark chocolate. Your mouth may not believe anything this good is aiding the country's fight to conserve energy!

P.S. We've reprinted the peanut butter diet, in which the calories are precounted and the recipes included. For a copy of the booklet, send 50 cents and a self-addressed, stamped envelope to: Reba & Bonnie Churchill, "4 day fun diet," Independent, Press-Telegram, P.O. Box 46-181, Hollywood, Calif. 90046.

Privacy key to compartmental living

Erma Bombeck is on vacation. Following is a reprint of one of her favorite columns, as determined by reader response.

Ever since our children went into their "locked door" syndrome, our house has all the charm of a mental institution.

The entire house used to be open range. Anyone could graze anywhere and still be in plain sight. Not anymore.

The other night I knocked loudly on the bedroom door.

"It's Mama."

"Who?"

"MAMA!"

"Are you sure?"

"Yes."

"What do you want?"

"Open the door. I want to talk to you."

"Did 'he' send you to get his records back?"

"No. Unlock this door."

The door opened a crack and one eye peeked out. "Oh, it's you."

"You were expecting Donnie Osmond? Come to dinner." The door slammed shut.

Following a telephone wire, I traced the next child to a locked closet.

"I know you are in there. The telephone wire is warm. Come to dinner."

There was silence. Then a whispered voice said, "She's listening. I'll call you back."

THE NEXT one was a toughie. I found him behind a locked door in the garage playing his drums.

"Do you hear me?" I shouted. "It's dinner."

"Who told you I was here?"

"The neighbors."

"Is that all you want?"

At dinner I asked them, "Why do you feel you have to lock yourselves in your rooms? Surely, we can respect one another's privacy without bolts and chains. Getting this group to the dinner table is like cracking the First National Bank of Manhattan."

"Look, Mom," they explained patiently, "we are going through a phase of our lives when we need privacy. We have to have time to find ourselves — to find out who we are, what we are, and where we are going. Surely you can understand that."

Later that evening, I locked myself in the bathroom when a note slid under the door. It read, "I need a quarter. Where is your purse?"

I wrote back, "I am finding myself. If I don't know who I am, it's a lead pipe cinch I don't know where my purse is."

Says truth was Jeffers' goal

The Women at Point Sur*, by Robinson Jeffers. Afterword and Notes by Tim Hunt. Liveright, $8.95.

So many poet-prophets, especially those of truly original vision, run the risk of either incurring widespread moral opprobrium or, perhaps even worse, becoming cult heroes of feverishly devoted coteries. The publication in 1927 of "The Women at Point Sur" brought Robinson Jeffers both. Happily, having survived all this to become California's premier poet, Jeffers is now undergoing a period of critical re-evaluation which may well boost him into the vaulted ranks of America's holy triumvirate, Eliot, Williams and Stevens.

Liveright's new edition of Jeffers' ambitious narrative poem (175 pages) comes at a perfect time. Restoring several deletions made in deference to the censors in 1927, the volume also combines six thematically related short poems and an afterword by Tim Hunt.

Condemned as immoral and nihilistic, "The Women at Point Sur" is essentially an exploration of Jeffers' controversial, and sometimes elusive philsophy of Inhumanism, the idea that man, in order to evolve, must break the bonds of his humanness to confront the violent and the irrational which are fundamental both to ourselves and to inhuman nature.

This need to transcend human ties is dramatized in Rev. Arthur Barclay's search for truth, for the "power behind appearances." Proclaiming the "old laws abolished" and Christianity nothing but the "yarns of idle fishermen," Barclay leaves the pulpit to wander the hills of Big Sur in search of a new God and new followers.

He preaches a doctrine of Dionysian self-abandon and exhorts his followers to confront the God within them through wild and passionate actions. Barclay, we soon discover, is insane and his quest for truth becomes muddled in a desire for personal power.

Under the force of his delusions, he incites a rash of sensational acts, including several adulterous affairs, the rape of his 20-year-old daughter, the sanctifying of the homosexual union of two women, and the acceptance of an act of infanticide.

His ministry culminates in a surreal apocalyptic orgy in which his deranged daughter, thinking she is her reincarnated brother, shoots herself while the rest of the disciples scatter in madness to avoid the holocaust of flames which, as if it had leapt from their own souls, sweeps the face of the mountain. As Barclay, bereft of followers, dies alone and unfulfilled, the poem concludes on his final cryptic pronouncement. "I am inexhaustible."

In the afterword, Tim Hunt argues persuasively that, unlike the contention of earlier critics, the poem is not so much an illustration of Jeffers' doctrine of Inhumanism as it is a search for truth, a means of allowing both poet and reader to confront the destructive conflicts of being human, to awaken us to our own potentialities.

As with any great work, "The Women at Point Sur" will continue to generate controversey, to excite and entertain readers today just as it did half a century ago.

— Rodger W. Clare

The Widower's Son*. By Alan Sillitoe. Harper & Row, $8.95.

Those who admired the detail, the insight, the narrative pull of "Saturday Night and Sunday Morning" or "The Loneliness of the Long Distance Runner" will be tantalized but left unfulfilled by this latest novel.

It promises well with young William Scorton, the widower's and ex-woldier's son, being conditioned by his father, his aunt, the military college and then breaking the traces with two delightfully vulgar young sisters.

But unfortunately, the touches remain surface. True, the reader gets excellent class and status descriptions, and a merciless exposure to a battle, a retreat, and then a subsequent marriage to a brigadier's daughter which in turn becomes a series of battles and retreats for William. Yet, somehow, the point of view and time switches do not work smoothly. The artifice shows and distracts. Five years of William and Georgina's marriage get telescoped in a sentence, and we unexpectedly get her thoughts in one of their violent arguments.

Then, in a strangely compressed two-page ending chapter, Sillitoe suggests a whole 10-year change in the life of this ex-soldier, ex-bowling hall manager, now college professor, in a second marriage with two sons. What we don't know is why William Scorton ends up as he does. And by the end of this muted novel, some readers may not really care. Dr. Eileen Lothamer thrown broken dolls over the White House fence."

Age has mellowed many radicals of the 1960s

McAlister, 37, was released last April from a federal prison after serving 90 days for her part in throwing the blood on the Pentagon columns. "It was worth it," she said. "We painted the Pentagon for what it really is."

Now she is "making a really serious evaluation" to see if she can help her children (Frieda, 3, and Jerry, 2) to "participate" in a decision to get into "it" again — "it" being jail and a more painful separation. She says residents of her commune — all sympathizers — are used to watching her children while she is away.

TWO TERMS in prison — some of the time spent in solitary confinement for trying to organize inmates — has temporarily quieted the voice of Chicago's nurse-activist Jane Kennedy. Her political conscience isn't stilled, though.

"It was terrible being in prison...terrible," said Kennedy, who was paroled last year after serving one year of a three-year sentence for burning induction records at an Indianapolis draft board office in 1969.

"Prison is social rape. You feel like you're on the darker side of the moon. I built up such a rage there, it will take me at least a year to regain myself. I often shut people out for that reason. Sometimes, I don't even answer the phone."

The 60-year-old Kennedy, who had been a respected nursing educator, was the most daring of female war resisters. She served 14 months of a four-year sentence in 1973 for breaking into the Dow Chemical Co. in Detroit and mixing up magnetic tapes that contained the formula for napalm.

Calling her a "prisoner of conscience in the tradition of Gandhi," a Midwest contingent of lawmakers, doctors, and cultural people nominated her for the Nobel Peace Prize last year.

These days, Kennedy, who is divorced, is working on a book that criticizes the prison system, and she is teaching a course on nursing at Governors State University in Park Forest South, Ill., this summer. Otherwise, she spends her days reading author Ann Wauk, sitting on her back porch, tending to her rose bushes and tomato plants, and taking her dog, Lady (a stray she adopted in prison), on long walks. "Today, Lady is my transition to the outside world," Kennedy said.

She has no regrets. "I'm living a real life, not a pseudo life," she explained. "I acted on what I believed in. I saw the war was immoral and I felt I had to take a stand. I'd do it all over again."

MEANWHILE, Jane Fonda, whose radio broadcasts from North Vietnam earned her the appellation "Hanoi Hannah" in some circles, is making a blitz of films — all liberally sprinkled with political messages. They won't be dull didactic documentaries, she said, but rather movies with subtle messages.

One is an American Revolution story about Shay's Rebellion, the revolt of farmers against the government's high taxes, which Fonda says she will make with her father and brother. Another is about a paraplegic Vietnam veteran and his conservative wife. A third story is about a woman who is murdered before she can expose a nuclear power plant as being lethally defective.

"All the movies are really about small people fighting against big people," said the ever-political Fonda.

Before the hectic filming schedules, Fonda campaigned in middle-America fashion for her husband, Tom Hayden, one of the Chicago 7, who unsuccessfully ran for the United States Senate in California last fall.

"We don't have to be protesters anymore," said the 39-year-old actress who also used to bail the militant Black Panthers out of jail. "We don't have to be on the fringe. Many people in this country agree with us. Basically, the radicalism of the '60s is the common sense of the '70s."

Thomas A. Bailey, professor of American history at Stanford University, thinks many of the female activists have simply matured as people.

"There's an old saying," Bailey said. "If a man or woman doesn't have some radical ideas in youth, then there's something wrong with their heart. And if a man or woman doesn't have some conservative ideas in their older years, then there's something wrong with their head."

LESLIE BACON, 25, the antiwar activist who went to jail in 1971 rather than testify before grand juries about bombings in the U.S. Senate Building and a New York City bank, seems to prove Bailey's point.

"I used to be strongly ideological," said Bacon, now a free-lance journalist living in Berkeley, Calif. "Idealism was a religion, a blanket way of seeing the world. Now I think people who know all the answers are crazy."

And as the late Weatherman Susan Stern concluded in her book, "With the Weathermen": "We represented no alternative to anyone. Once we tore down capitalism, who would empty the garbage and teach the children?"

But Angela Davis, America's most famous Communist, hasn't changed her revolutionary politics. She is still mad at the American system.

"Things are worse now," Davis, 32, said in an interview over national radio last May. "There is a worsening of racism and repression."

The activist is now the director of the National Alliance Against Racist and Political Repression, a group containing "Communists, Democrats, and everything in between," she told the same interviewer.

Davis has been constantly "unavailable" for interviews lately, in contrast to the 1960s when she was at the beck and call of the press. "She usually declines interviews unless she is on a speaking tour or something," a representative of her organization said.

ALSO "UNAVAILABLE" for interviews was Kathleen Cleaver, whose husband Eldridge, is the former Black Panther leader who recently found religion. A friend of the Cleavers, who asked not to be identified but who is working on Cleaver's defense fund, said Mrs. Cleaver has "dramatically changed her views on many political issues and feels the American system is best."

The friend, however, wouldn't say whether Mrs. Cleaver had been bitten by the same religious bug. "She would have to tell you that herself," the friend said firmly.

Mrs. Cleaver is trying to raise money for the legal defense of her husband, who is charged with attempted murder and assault with a deadly weapon in a 1968 Panther shootout with police.

Other female activists of the 1960s have simply joined different protest movements. Singer Holly Near, who went to Vietnam with Jane Fonda on an anti-war entertainment mission, is busy writing and concertizing songs about women.

"We live in a very heterosexual world," expained Near, 28, an avowed lesbian. "Nothing in our culture speaks to us. I hope I break down some of those barriers with my songs."

And Sister Mary Luke Tobin — the nun who chated with Madame Nguyen Thi Binh in 1971 in Paris on how the U.S. could end the war — is now director of citizen action for Church Women United, a quasi-political group based in New York. Sister Mary Luke has been representing her organization in marches against the death penalty all over the country.

OF COURSE, there are still some "fugitives," according to the FBI. Bernardine Dohrn, a graduate of the University of Chicago law school, and Kathy Boudin, daughter of radical attorney Leonard Boudin, are wanted by law enforcement agancies for their participation in the violent "Days of Rage" in Chicago in October, 1969.

Kathy Ann Power, 27, of Denver, who is supected of killing a policeman during a Boston bank robbery (to finance revolutionary activities) in 1970, is also still at large; her accomplice, Susan Saxe, 27, was sentenced to 12 to 14 years in prison last year.

Most of the women radicals of the '60s, however, have made their peace with the system, along with their male contemporaries.

"We don't have the time to be involved on a full-time basis any more," Baez said. "We have families to raise and jobs to go on."

But they remain a silent force tucked away in the daily life of the nation. "We're older now and more realistic," Baez added, "but basically our politics are as radical as ever. And if there's ever another worthwhile cause, you can bet we'll all be active again."

Contemporary Living

Face up to memory lapse

tish baldrige

How many times have you found yourself in a situation like this: "Hello, Roger. This is — er-a-my good friend er-a. . ."

How many times has somebody forgotten, misspelled or mispronounced your name? Have you ever introduced someone over and over again in a group, giving his name wrong?

In my past diplomatic and my present business life, I have forgotten and continue to forget the names of so many people in so many countries, that I am quite an expert at the art of recovering from the embarrassment of it. Even though I have learned how to bluff my way out of it, a terrible uneasiness overtakes me each time I "do it again."

Unfortunately, the onus of help for people like me lies in the other person, not in ourselves. The "forgotten me" has to come to our rescue. Here's an example of the enactment of the Golden Rule and the giving of instant aid to the person suffering from "name distress":

YOU MEET a good friend on the street. His mother-in-law rounds the corner simultaneously with her sister. They all stop to greet each other, and your friend begins to stutter over your name in trying to introduce you. (Maybe he says nothing, but waves of panic are flowing over his usually serene countenance.) The woman is talking about her grandchildren, hesitating because she's expecting an introduction to you. So you immediately stick out your hand to her. "I'm Jim Richards," you explain, "and you look nice enough to be Bob's mother or mother-in-law." Immediately she gives her name with a grin and smiles through the rest of the conversation at your compliment. You have taken the initiative to glide over your friend's name-forgetting, and have thus removed any cause for further embarrassment.

If someone continually forgets your name, have pity and compassion, even if he forgets who you are or that he even knows you. I say this with feeling, because in dealing with literally hundreds of people per week in my business, a total of 25 years of doing this adds up to a large number of "forgottens." It's not a Freudian block that causes this. It's simply that the mechanism that sets off one's word-associations with people occasionally misfunctions. It occurs often with overly-busy, overly-harrassed people.

IF YOU ARE introduced around at a party by the wrong name, don't let the person continue. If you accept the misintroductions in order not to embarrass the person making the mistake, everyone involved usually ends up far more embarrassed as the plot thickens. Give your correct name, but do it with a laugh, and give the person a reassuring pat on the arm. "Hey, Alice, I'm Jane Jenkins, not Ginny-whatever-her-name-is. I'm Jane Jenkins and obviously far better looking, richer and more intelligent than Ginny-whatever-her-name-is." Everyone will laugh and the blunder will be quickly forgotten.

If someone mispronounces your name, gently correct him. It is better to embarrass him only a little with an early correction than to embarrass him a lot when he's gone all the way around the room.

If you're making introductions in a group, you will help the others out by introducing people clearly and distinctly, and by giving their first name, last name and title. A judge, doctor, congressman, or clergyman should always have a title given to help those who will be talking to them. "Congressman Malcolm Smith, I'd like to present The Reverend Michael Bellweather." Then you can follow quickly (if they are both your friends, and contemporaries), "Mal, meet Mike."

Making good introductions, helping out people in name distress, teaching people the proper pronunciation of your name or someone else's is all a part of good manners which in turn means efficiency and better living for all of us.

So help people out. Give your name immediately when being greeted or introduced. Be easygoing about your name and identity. Don't be sensitive if your name is misspelled. Everyone suffers that fate, even John Smith (Jean Smythe for example?). Above all, forgive anyone who forgets your name, just as you hope all those whose names you have forgotten will forgive YOU!

Children's anger different from that of adults

By Richard Flaste
New York Times News Service

NEW YORK — When they say they love us, these darling children, we kiss their hair, stroke their cheeks and love them back. We believe them.

But when they unequivocally declare they hate us, it's hard to know what to believe.

Some parents take their children literally and are devastated by the thought of being despised. Others respond to children's anger as if it were just too adorable for words and of no real significance at all.

Dr. Susan Harter, a University of Denver psychologist who described children's feelings in a recent issue of the Journal of Consulting and Clinical Psychology, sees both of those parental interpretations as common misunderstandings of children's emotions. She says there appears to be a qualitative difference between the way children and adults feel and express emotions, a difference that makes it difficult for parents to get an accurate picture of the situation.

Children, she writes in the article, "are at the mercy of immediate emotional events." They see parents, friends, siblings — even themselves — "as all good or all bad or all knowing or consumed with stupidity."

Adults, too, may look as though they're overwhelmed by an emotion of the moment. But ordinarily that's not truly the case, Dr. Harter said in an interview. Ordinarily, she said, "when adults feel mad it's against a network of emotional concepts; they know that basically they also love this person. So it's not all-consuming. They have a perspective young children just don't have."

DR. HARTER says that it's "really important for a parent to know, that when a child says, 'I hate you,' it's the only way the child can think at that moment and it's normal, the nature of the cognitive beast."

It's also temporary. Children, much to the bafflement of their parents, can leap from one emotion to the next almost before the air has had a chance to dry their eyes. And that can be misleading. The abrupt changes lead us to think the emotions were of no significance in the first place.

But that attitude, Dr. Harter insists, "is really unfair to children. If you talk to them about what makes them mad, they get so serious about it. The anger is a real feeling."

Dr. Fitzhugh Dodson, a California psychologist whose newest book, "How to Discipline With Love," will be published this fall by Rawson, believes it's a good idea for parents to respond to a child's expressions of anger with some toned-down reflection of it and thus help a young child gain an expanded vocabulary about emotions.

"The child," he said, "may be feeling all these gradations of things from annoyance to rage but has only the one word — hate." So a parent might respond with, "Tell me why you're so mad, or why youire so annoyed."

DODSON SAYS he has noticed that parents and other adults tend to try to deny a child's emotions. An older child, for instance, might say, "I'm scared stiff of that math test," and the parent will say, "Oh, you're not going to fail; you haven't failed a test yet."

That, Dodson asserts, "is a way of making the kid feel the parent doesn't understand, and it's teaching the kid to lie about real feelings."

At the other end of the spectrum are parents who accept everything — even a child who appears to be in a continuous fury. That image makes Dr. Daniel Wiener wince. Wiener, who is clinical professor in the medical school at the University of Minnesota and the author of several books on child-rearing, describes children who express their anger to the point of being obnoxious.

Wiener, who is perhaps sterner than other child-rearing authorities and who asserts that children have to learn to tolerate reasonable frustration, says: "When you do something that frustrates a child, it's perfectly normal for that child to get angry and most of the time I'd be neutral about it. But some children go around spouting off at the least pretext. And then my own reaction would be to get annoyed or angry, just as I would with anybody else."

Authors explore death

dr. walt menninger

Dear Dr. Menninger:

Recently, you wrote a column concerning reactions to the death of a family member. The trauma of death in the family has changed the personalities of many. Some become bitter and hateful; others may react with consideration and compassion.

In any case, death of a loved one seldom leaves a life unchanged.

Death is a natural occurrence when it happens to someone else. It is a terrifying thought to every human being until he has resolved the question in his own mind and unconscience.

Whether it is a child of seven or a man of 70, he faces the trauma of his own personal death. The questions: "Why am I here? Where will I go when I die?"

Death should be the number one topic of conversation for the total populace, because we are the generation living in the nuclear age. The late President Kennedy phrased it thus, "The sword of Damocles now hangs over our head."

Elizabeth Kubler Ross is receiving very favorable recognition for her book, "Death and Dying." Among medical and some college students, the topic of death is being discussed more freely. Please consider a column on how to face death. Sincerely, Mrs. R.H., Iowa.

DEAR MRS. H.:

Since mankind does have instruments like the hydrogen bomb which can bring about our total destruction, it does seem reasonable that we all think about how we might face death. However these are also times when we have increased skills for preserving and sustaining life.

In the past 50 years, the average life span has increased by 30 percent. In 1920, the average life expectancy at birth was just over 54 years; now it is over 70.

Yet, death is inevitable, and there is no easy way to face death. With few exceptions, no one likes to anticipate dying. And when it actually approaches, most people will not be ready for it.

Faith can be an extremely important source of sustenance when facing death, along with a capacity to face one's feelings.

An increasing number of books and papers have been written on death and dying, describing feelings and experiences. These writings may be helpful not only for self-understanding. They may help those who go on living to come to grips with the death of their loved ones.

IN ADDITION to Kubler Ross, let me call attention to two other books which present a somewhat different perspective of death, and which address your questions.

One is "Death and the College Student," edited by Edwin Shneidman, Ph.D. and published by Behavioral Publications (New York, 1972). It is a collection of 19 brief essays on death and suicide written by Harvard undergraduates enrolled in a course on Psychology of Death taught by Dr. Shneidman.

In a Foreword, the former director of the Harvard Student Health Service, Dr. Dana Farnsworth, writes, "Any student of the way human beings deal with tragedy and the prospect of their own non-existence will find this book both stimulating and illuminating."

The second is "Life After Life," by Dr. Raymond Moody, published by Mockingbird Books (Covington, GA., 1975; Bantam Books paperback edition, 1976).

Originally educated in philosophy and now a physician, Dr. Moody encountered a number of persons who had what he calls "near death experiences." Subsequently, he has collected narratives from over 100 persons.

From the mass of narratives, he has identified a composite experience, with some 15 separate elements which recur again and again in people's experiences. These include such things as feelings of peace and quiet, being in a dark tunnel, being out of the body, meeting other spiritual beings, and a quality of being unable to express what happened.

In nearly every case, he notes, "the experience affects one's life profoundly, especially his views about death and its relationship to life."

The Formula

Soothing balm

By Norman Stark

There are two types of alcohols that can be used for making this rubbing alcohol compound: 1) isopropyl or 2) denatured. Denatured alcohol is ethyl alcohol that has been intentionally adulterated to make it unfit for human consumption.

Many different chemicals are used as additives depending on the end use of the alcohol. For example, alcohol that is to be used as an industrial solvent would be far more drastically denatured than alcohol that is to be used as a rubbing compound. But remember, all denatured alcohols must not be taken internally as they are toxic to varying degrees. They are also flammable.

Isopropyl alcohol is my choice for a number of reasons. 1) It is readily available in small quantities, 2) it is lower in cost, and 3) although it is toxic, it is far less so than most of the denatured alcohols. But it is also flammable and should be used with the proper precautions.

To make up this formula for rubbing alcohol you will need one and three-quarters cups of either DENATURED or ISOPROPYL ALCOHOL, one-fourth cup GLYCERIN, and one-half cup WATER. Mix these three ingredients together and store in glass or plastic bottle. And keep container tightly sealed to minimize loss by evaporation.

Besides the satisfaction you get by making your own products for personal or home care, most formulas are real money-savers that enable you to beat the prices of store-bought items.

(Like any chemical product you use at home, you should store this one safely, label it — listing ingredients and noting any cautions — and keep it out of reach of children.)

Davis resigns from Long Beach PCA

By Elise Emery
Arts Editor

Citing a potential conflict of interest as his reason, Chuck Davis resigned Wednesday from the board of directors of the Public Corporation for the Arts. Davis was elected president of PCA at its first meeting May 5, 1976, and was re-elected to a second term in May of this year.

His letter of resignation to Mayor Thomas J. Clark said, in part, "This letter will serve as official notice of my resignation as an appointed member of the Public Corporation for the Arts for the City of Long Beach. This action is necessitated by my personal involvement in a professional profit making venture which will be directly involved with the cultural and performing activities of the new Long Beach Convention Center.

"Since I personally will be active in the promotion and development of events in the Convention Center that will be in competition with local, non-profit cultural activities, I feel a definite conflict would exist in my continuing as a member of the Public Corporation for the Arts.

"It would be impossible for me to serve in a capacity promoting the cultural activities of the community in an unbiased manner while participating in a competitive profit making venture in the same field."

Davis told board members at the regular PCA meeting Wednesday in the Main Library that he will be active in booking Broadway plays in the Pacific Terrace's Center Theater.

DAVIS'S SURPRISE announcement came at the end of a meeting which was never officially called to order for lack of a quorum. Only these seven members of the 15-member board were present: Sheri Beebi, Robert Benson, Davis, Ed Hyka, Jerome Leff, Vivian Yunker and Laura Killingsworth.

They viewed a slide presentation by the Long Beach Symphony Association and heard a report by Harvey Waggoner, general manager of Long Beach Civic Light Opera.

Waggoner told the group that LBCLO is adding a fourth production to the 1976-77 season which concluded its previously announced three-production season in June. "When we planned this season, we expected to open our 1977-78 season in the new Pacific Theater in November of this year. However, the theater will not open until late January, 1978, and we decided that we should not be inactive from June until next February when it will be possible for us to open at Pacific Terrace."

The extension of the current season will be the production of "The Music Man" for four weekends from Oct. 28 to Nov. 20 in Jordan Auditorium. The projected 1978 season will include "The Sound of Music," "Gypsy" and "My Fair Lady."

The current season attracted the greatest audience in LBCLO history, Waggoner said. "At the beginning of the year we had a choice of two ways to go. We could suspend union aid for this season and try to strengthen our financial situation, or we could pay our bills and close our doors with dignity. The unions, knowing we would return to a union operation when we entered Pacific Terrace, agreed. We hoped our patrons wouldn't turn away because they feared artistic loss. That didn't happen; the result has been bigger audiences and financial success."

IN ANSWER to a question from Mrs. Yunker, Waggoner said he attributed the increase to solid, middle-of-the-road programming and increased efforts to attract theater-goers from Orange County.

"Now, the Terrace Theater situation is very complex. It is certain to be vastly more expensive. We have been waiting for information about the basic union contracts with Pacific Terrace, refining our estimates of costs almost daily as to our expenses for next season. We expect the result of this planning to be announced next week. We have told our patrons we would be in Terrace Theater in February, 1978. We want to keep faith and keep up production."

Board members discussed a letter from City Manager John Dever asking whether or not the PCA would be interested in raising $10,000 for a sculpture to be placed on an existing slab at City Plaza. The money originally had been allocated by the city, but no longer is available. Leff reminded the group that PCA earlier had asked the city to designate one percent of the cost of any public building for art. "Only if the city does this should the PCA participate in fund-raising," he said.

"If we can raise $10,000 we need it for arts groups and for our own survival," Mrs. Killingsworth commented.

Added Davis, "I can't see myself asking businesses to donate unless it is for a fine piece of sculpture, not for a work you can get for just $10,000."

At the suggestion of Mrs. Beebe, the PCA will ask if money from the California Arts Council and the National Endowment for the Arts is available on a matching funds basis.

BOARD MEMBERS also informally discussed an agenda item, Future Directions of the Public Corporation for the Arts. Said Mrs. Killingsworth, "The arts groups are confused and fragmented by the various categories they have been put into by the city. Can't we find a way to bring them back together?"

Before the meeting, a PCA committee had met with Robert Creighton, assistant city manager, to recommend the following four-point program:

1. That the City form a Cultural Affairs Department to serve as an effective overall umbrella organization serving all the arts in the community, both municipal and non-municipal.

2. This Department to become empowered with the right and duties as the official pass-through contracting agency for municipal funding for non-municipal arts activities, and that the Department be responsible to a board of directors. The Public Corporation for the Arts shall function as the board of directors for the Department and shall have approval on all expenditures and programs, both municipal and non-municipal.

3. The Public Corporation for the Arts' board of directors to continue under its existing structure, with the Congress of the Arts intact.

4. That this Department receive its funding from present budget allocations, augmented by a determined percentage of the annual revenues generated by the City's Room Tax or another stable funding source.

SAID DAVIS, "Our role should be to tell the city administration what should be done. What are we now but an advisory group? What are we actually doing?"

Mrs. Killingsworth said, "The original concept of the PCA was that it should not be merely an advisory group, but one that would have real clout. Now everything is in an awkward stage. Maybe it's time to stop justifying ourselves and to be a strong entity. Who are we helping? What are we acomplishing? Each of us has spent hundreds of hours in meetings and conferences to set up the PCA. We should either have a strong entity or resign."

"We must have a group for the arts that has stable funding, whether it is the PCA or not. We must have unity of purpose and funding," said Mrs. Beebe.

"That's your clout," Davis concluded.

The seven members at Wednesday's session will meet as a committee next Wednesday at 3 p.m. in the Main Library to discuss Future Directions more fully.

Community bills musical

As a change of pace, Long Beach Community Playhouse opened the musical, "Stop the World — I Want to Get Off," Friday for a seven-week run. The Playhouse rarely has ventured into musical production.

Gerald Iovine directs the show which is played against a highly stylized circus set and takes the audience through the birth, life and loves of Littlechap. Despite driving ambition and an unhappy marriage, Littlechap skips through life in his quest for love and power, usually confusing the two.

ANTHONY NEWLEY wrote the script for himself. Musical numbers include "I Wanna Be Rich," "Once in a Lifetime" and "What Kind of Fool Am I?" Leading roles are filled by Glenn Bradley and Lucy Daggett who have played in many productions at Community, Long Beach Civic Light Opera and other area theaters.

The musical is scheduled Fridays and Saturdays at 8:30 p.m. and Sundays at 2:30 p.m. Tickets are $3 Fridays and Sundays, $3.50 Saturdays. Fifty percent discounts are offered to senior citizens and students for the Sunday matinees. Reservations may be made by calling the theater at 5021 E. Anaheim St.

GLENN BRADLEY as Littlechap and Lucy Daggett as Evie have leading roles in Community Playhouse production of 'Stop the World — I Want to Get Off.'

Farce on stage at LBCC

"No Sex Please, We're British," a comedy by Alistair Foot and Anthony Marriot, will be the last production of the season by Long Beach City College's Summer Repertory Theater.

Performances will begin at 8:30 p.m. Thursday through next Sunday in the LBCC Auditorium, Clark Avenue and Harvey Way.

The plot concerns a newlywed couple's innocent involvement with mail-order pornography. Peter and Frances (David Fruechting and Dawn Ide) live above the bank that Peter manages. They accidentally receive pornographic pictures through the mail. Enlisting the aid of Peter's nervous chief cashier, Brian Runnicles, (Owen Griffith) only makes matters worse for the couple.

Soon blue films start arriving and to further complicate things Peter's mother Eleanor (Pattie Dole) stays with the couple and tries to gain the attention of Peter's superior, Leslie Bromhead (William Snare).

DIRTY BOOKS begin to arrive during the friendly investigations of police superintendent Paul (Greg Heinlein) and Arnold Needham (Chuch Wise), the bank examiner who has "come to check the books."

After mistaking Needham for the porno man, Peter and Frances seem to have the situation under control until two fun-loving young ladies (Jan Quinn and Lani Reynolds) of questionable virtue show up.

"It's summertime and we wanted the pure entertainment of a comedy play," said director Shashin Desai. "The actors and the audience can relax and have fun."

Admission is $2. As seating is limited, advance ticket purchase at the LBCC Student Body Bank is advised. If tickets are available, they will be sold at the door.

Museum shows 'art of India'

During their many years of travel and residence in India, William G. Archer, a British a civil servant, and his wife, Mildred, collected Pahari miniatures. They discovered that, although the paintings were available, only a few discriminating scholars and collectors appreciated that form of art. However, Archer's interest developed into connoisseurship as he accumulated his own collection and the outstanding one now in the Victoria and Albert Museum in London where he is Keeper Emeritus of the Indian Section.

Eighty of these brilliant miniatures from 14 schools of art in the Punjab Hills of the Himalayas in Northern India now are on exhibit in the Ahmanson Gallery of Los Angeles County Museum of Art, 5905 Wilshire Blvd. They will remain on view through Sept. 18; admission is free.

Titled "Visions of Courtly India," the exhibition gives a scholarly survey of India from the 17th through 19th centuries, a personal view of collecting and glimpses into Indian courtly life of the period. Weddings, festivities, hawk hunting, the elaborate toilets of court ladies, and what Archer describes as "the stresses and tensions inherent in the Indian feudal order" are subjects, along with classic love themes and religious tales.

THE MINIATURES, most of them never before shown in the United States, are rich in variety, ranging from the boldness and strong color of early works whose formal distortion and simplification are typical of primitive art, to sensitive, delicate and refined charm of the later story paintings. Throughout, the approach is poetic, with color and design hinting at poetic associations.

The largest of the exhibited works measures 11 by 15 inches; most are much smaller, some as tiny as 4¼ by 2¾ inches.

'RADHA'S TOILET' opaque watercolor on paper, was painted by Indian artist Garhwal about 1790. It is in 'Visions of Courtly India' exhibit.

Symphony gets CAC grant

Long Beach Symphony Association is one of 275 arts organizations and artists to receive funds through California Arts Council's grants program. More than $1.5 million in state-appropriated funds were distributed July 29 in San Francisco.

The Long Beach Symphony was given $5,000 for "eight free concerts featuring aspiring California guest artists." The award was in the Organizational Grants category. Other classifications were Artists in Schools and Communities, and Artists in Social Institutions.

Included in the CAC's grant announcements were awards to 160 arts organizations in the state totaling more than $800,000, $630,000 to support artists' residencies in schools and community centers and nearly $100,000 for 30 programs in social institutions, including hospitals, mental health centers and prisons.

The CAC, a state agency, was established in January, 1976 . It is directed by a nine-member council appointed by the governor.

LONG BEACH Symphony Association also has been given a federal grant of $93,000 by the Comprehensive Employment Training Act (CETA) to sponsor a series of chamber music concerts in the community for 52 weeks.

Beginning in September, the grant program will enable 14 qualified Long Beach musicians to hold full-time musical positions for one year. Concerts will be primarily for persons who are seldom able to enjoy live performances — shut-ins, invalids, the elderly and those on restricted budgets. Musicians who are interested in the program are invited to call the Symphony Association office at 121 Linden Ave. to make an appointment for eligibility interviews. All 14 positions must be filled by Aug. 31, said John Hyer, symphony manager.

Serenade to be 'Slavic Festival'

To conclude this season's free Starlight Serenades, Don Ray will conduct the Long Beach Symphony and the California Boy's Choir in a "Slavic Festival" Wednesday at 8 p.m. in Recreation Park. The series is under auspices of the Symphony Association.

This will be the program: Cossack Dances from "Mazeppa" by Tchaikovsky; Polonaise from "Boris Godounov" by Moussorgsky; "Village Scenes" by Bartok and "Boyhood" by Breughton sung by the California Boys Choir; "Dubinushka" by Rimsky-Korsakov; "The Fair at Sorochinsk" by Moussorgsky; "In the Steppes of Central Asia" by Borodin; Polonaise from "Eugen Onegin" by Tchaikovsky; "The Snow Maiden Suite" by Rimsky-Korsakov; and "Turkish March" by Moussorgsky.

THE CALIFORNIA Boys Choir, started by Douglas Neslund in 1968, is an organization with a dual purpose: To give Southern California boys from 9 to 13 years of age a musical education and to provide professional local ensembles with a boys choir. The choir's headquarters are in the California Museum of Science and Industry in Exposition Park, Los Angeles. The majority of the boys are from the Los Angeles and Long Beach areas.

The choir has performed at Hollywood Bowl, for the Ojai Music Festival under the baton of Michael Tilson Thomas, with Carmen Dragon and the Glendale Symphony and with the Roger Wagner Chorale.

AS AN EXTENSION of the summer concerts in Recreation Park, Marvin Marker's Long Beach Junior Concert Band will play a Starlight Extra program Aug. 17 at 8 p.m.

Bus to ballet

The Elizabeth Keen Dance Company will climax its four weeks of residency at Long Beach State University with a workshop performance Thursday at 7:30 p.m. in the LBSU Studio Theater, 6101 E. Seventh St. There is no admission charge.

In addition to compositions by workshop students, the dance company will perform "Poison Variations" and "A Fair Greeting." Both works were choreographed by Keen, the first to music by Gwendolyn Watson, the second to Brahms' "Variations on a Theme by Handel."

Parking is available in the pay public lot on the south side of Seventh Street.

Wife-saving tips offered to husbands

DEAR READERS: Last weekend I published 10 tips for wives who want a successful marriage. Here are 10 for husbands:

1. Don't ever forget her birthday, anniversary, Christmas or Valentine's Day.
2. Don't keep talking about the beautiful young chicks at work.
3. Don't pick up something to read when she's trying to talk to you.
4. Don't ever bring a friend home for dinner without asking her first.
5. Don't use her car and return it with an empty gas tank.
6. If you know you're going to be late getting home, CALL and tell her.
7. Don't try to make her jealous.
8. Don't look like a slob all weekend.
9. If you know you're wrong, don't be too stubborn to admit it.
10. Don't ever go to sleep without telling her you love her.

DEAR ABBY: I am 59 years old but don't look it. I weigh 147 pounds and stand 5 feet 2 inches tall. I keep myself looking nice and carry my weight well. I think I look a lot better at this weight than if I were to reduce and get all wrinkled in the face and neck like lots of women I know.

abigail van buren

I am divorced and have been going with Harvey for a year now. He is 50. He speaks of marriage and I am all for it, but here is the catch. He says, "If you will go on a diet and keep losing weight until I tell you to stop, and then show me your birth certificate, I will marry you."

Abby, I never told him how old I was because I never thought it was important. Besides, we are near enough the same age, and I look younger than Harvey. How about the dieting part? Set me straight. I like him a lot. — HARVEY'S FRIEND

DEAR FRIEND: Better show him your birth certificate first. It might not be necessary for you to lose the weight.

DEAR ABBY: My best friend is cheating on his wife and he uses me for alibis so he can get away to be with the girl friend.

He has a wonderful faithful wife and a beautiful family, and every time I see his wife and children I feel guilty.

I hate to lose my buddy's friendship, but my conscience is bothering me. — ALIBI IKE

DEAR IKE: Tell your friend you're through being a party to his fooling around.

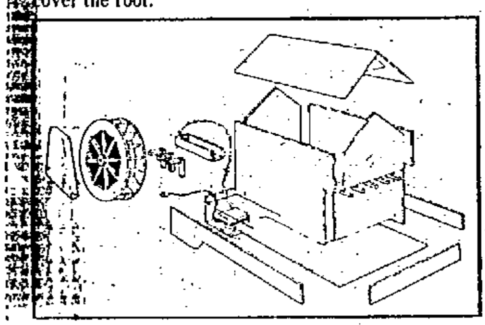
The workshop

All you need for this handsome outdoor decoration is a few square feet of space in your backyard, patio or garden, a few pails of water, and our easy-to-follow instructions.

Styled after a real grist mill built in 1797 on the bank of Clear Creek in Tennessee, this project requires no special tools for completion. The base, sides and roof are made from scrap exterior plywood, while scrap composition shingles can be used to cover the roof.



A simple, inexpensive electric circulating pump lifts water to the trough just above the wheel. As the water spills down, it moves the wheel and provides a pleasant, trickling sound. The pump recirculates the water from the small millpond, eliminating waste. Our step-by-step photos and instructions guide you through every phase of construction. A full-size traceable pattern for the wheel itself is included, as well as a complete materials list.

To obtain our No. 456 Grist Mill plan (via first class mail), send $2.50. Or order the C-26 packet (nine different lawn and garden projects including today's Grist Mill) all for only $8.50. Advice to the Taxlorn 67

Should we pay cash?

DEAR MR. SMITH: I am buying a house. Will it be better, for tax purposes, to pay the $50,000 in cash or borrow the money from the bank? — C.O.W.

That is more of a tax question than it appears to be. Naturally you will want to compare what you are now earning by investing the $50,000 with the total interest cost (including mortgage points and service charges) if you were to mortgage the house.

If those costs are greater than your income from the $50,000, that excess should be reduced by your combined federal and state income bracket — but only if you customarily use itemized deductions. At that point you have the net cost of holding on to the $50,000, which is so important when funds are needed immediately. And finally, if your annual income tax bite is substantial, some of the $50,000 should be available for a tax shelter or two.

jacob smith

DEAR MR. SMITH: My mother and I jointly own two rental properties acquired several years ago. We have a written agreement that says I am to manage the properties (which I do) and my mother must provide the cash needed, as a loan at 10 percent interest, and she is to report the income and deductions each year. Our agreement also says that I am entitled to 100 percent of the profits if we ever sell the properties. Now that we are selling, how do I report all this? — S.M.I.

You have an awkward arrangement, typical of many family joint ventures.

My suggestion would be to use Form 1065 from 1977 on, even if you didn't use a partnership form before. That way, you clearly show how you allocate operating income and deductions, which is 100 percent to your mother.

When you sell, you allocate the capital gains to yourself, without the puzzle of how to claim the tax basis (cost) on your Form 1040. I would suggest further, that you go back and reconstruct a make-believe 1065 for each prior year. If you do it accurately, you will be gratified, at the end, to discover you come out to the precise amount of money each of you is entitled to receive. The allocation of funds must agree with the allocation of profits for tax purposes.

DEAR MR.SMITH: I recently bought a boat and leased it to a boat-rental company. I will use it less than 14 days this year. What type of depreciation is best, and what is the reasonable "useful" life of the boat? If my total expense exceeds the income, may I apply the loss to my other ordinary income? — D.L.

Obtain IRS Form 4831, study it carefully, and fill in the blank spaces with as many figures as you can reasonably estimate for the eight or nine months you will have leased out the boat in 1977. On Page 2, you will notice the first line (Line 27) is for additional first-year depreciation. You can claim up to $2,000 ($4,000 if married) on that line.

That bonus depreciation cannot exceed 20 percent of the cost of your boat and other business equipment. If you choose to take that bonus, you must reduce the tax basis (cost) of the property accordingly. The balance can be depreciated straight-line or declining balance at 200 percent (150 percent of the boat is not new.)

Then fill out IRS Form 3468 to compute the investment tax credit, which is 10 percent of the acquisition cost. To be entitled to the credit, the lease term must be less than 50 percent of the useful life of the boat, and it must not be a net lease. And the credit applies directly against your income tax liability. Much better than a deduction.

The IRS, in one of its guidelines, suggests a useful life of 16 years is acceptable. You can modify that, if the type of boat and its condition do not justify a 16-year life. The rental income and deductions on Form 4831 are carried to Schedule E, Part II, and form part of adjusted gross income. If the result is not helpful, just go back over your options.

How, if it turns out you bought the boat from your closest relative, and that the boat-rental company is your second closest relative — well, there could be a few more rules to apply.

contest-related expenses such as lodgings at the Galt House, where the pageant was held.

ENTERING beauty pageants — and some youngsters are practically full-time on the circuit — can be expensive, with modeling classes, custom-made dresses, and transportation. Several parents at the NAPS pageant said they spend more than $5,000 a year to keep their daughters in contest condition.

A native of Kentucky, the platinum-haired Mrs. Jones bubbles to a self-righteous boil at the suggestion these activities give girls false values. "We're running a youth training program," she said.

"You know, the women's lib types are always complaining that beauty pageants are bad for little girls. Well, I disagree. There's nothing wrong with teaching a girl to be pretty, and what better way for her to learn how to compete? I've never yet seen a competition kid grow up to be a drug addict or a drunk."

"Yeah," her husband Max interjected. "Girls have always used their bodies to get ahead."

Mrs. Jones laughed. "Va va va voom," she said.

Dear Mr. Corn: Holding a good five card major and 16-18 points, with no singletons, would you open the major or one no trump?

Answer: A debatable area. In Aces Standard, I specify an opening in the five card major. In less defined systems, a partnership might agree to open one no trump.

However, I would recommend the one no trump opening be limited to those cases where the suit texture is no better than Q-J-x-x-x or K-J-x-x-x.

Dear Mr. Corn: Responses to a one club opening. I cannot find the one diamond response to show a negative or a "bust."

Six to ten points — one no trump. Otherwise, pass. Am I right?

Answer: Artificial and forcing club systems can be effective. Unfortunately, many of these "systems" are homemade versions and are woefully incomplete.

In standard systems, a one over one response in a major is preferable to a one no trump response and a pass is correct with less than six points.

Dear Mr. Corn: What would you bid with this hand after this bidding:

♠ K Q 7 2
♥ Q 7
♦ A 9 6 5
♣ J 7 4

West	North	East	South
1♣	Dbl.	1♥	2♥
Pass	2♠	Pass	?

Invite or Jump?, Dayton, Ohio.

Answer: Since you've already cue bid, a three spade invitation might be enough. However, there's little chance of wasted values in the club suit, so a jump to game could be the winner.

Dear Mr. Corn: Is this sequence forcing an opener?

Opener	Responder
1NT	2♣

Answer: In standard usage, the two club bid is a correction bid and might show a weak spade-club two suiter or a weakish hand with four bad spades and a five or six card club suit. (With the same number or more clubs than spades, opener should pass two clubs).

In some developed partnerships, there is an agreement to play the bid as forcing with several meanings. Some play "Check back Stayman" asking opener to show any three card spade support. Others play a new minor forcing, undefined, over the one no trump rebid.

Dear Mr. Corn: I held this hand and bid as follows over my opponent's weak two heart bid. Did I bid correctly (I was South)?

♠ A K Q 10 2
♥ K Q 8
♦ 7 6 3
♣ A 3

East	South	West	North
2♥	2NT	Pass	3♦

Liked My Hand, Little Rock.

Answer: A close question. I'm with you on the first bid but your second bid is questionable. It depends upon what partner's three diamond bid means, and it's usually a signoff. In any event, I wouldn't criticize either pass or three no trump since partner doesn't need much to make the game.

TRENT ESPERTI
Manages restaurant with a view

ONE OF THE DELIGHTFUL things about dining at Adolph's Restaurant, the swank dining room of the Queensway Hilton, 700 Queensway Drive, is the view, especially from the top floor.

One gets a view of Long Beach, perhaps all of the eight miles of the "long beach." What a beautiful city, seen from that angle.

Now I know there are many things wrong with our town. But looking at it from Adolph's I get a vision of what it can become. This is a city of beauty which can become more beautiful if City Hall and the people will just try.

Adolph's, ably managed today by Trent Esperti, is a restaurant worth visiting. When it started some time ago it seemed to be run by amateurs. It isn't like that now. We enjoyed the service and the food, In the past we objected to the too loud music. On this visit, the music was gentle.

Adolph's is founded on a legend. There was this great Austrian chef who decided to come to America. Alas, he was washed overboard during a storm. But there was this great cook on a Caribbean island who enchanted everyone who visited there.

Well, Adolphs of Long Beach attempts to follow its legendary ancestor. The dinner menu has a strong Caribbean and South Seas flavor.

Dale, my wife, enjoyed "Sea Treasure" — halibut topped with almonds. I ate terriyaki beef brochette. Very good.

One has all sorts of choices — escargots, artichokes, crab, shrimp, steaks and prime rib, split rack of lamb, mahi mahi, and exotic desserts. Dinner prices range from $6.95 to $9.95.

THE CAPTAIN'S QUARTER, an elegant restaurant near the intersection of Pacific Coast Highway and Anaheim Street, has a lot going for it. We recently ate there and enjoyed ourselves.

The Captain's Quarter has a revised menu which emphasizes sea food.

There are hot appetizers such as Escargots Bourguignonne (snails), steamed clams, pan-fried baby mushrooms, fried cheese and fried zucchini. Cold appetizers are royal shrimp cocktail supreme, crab legs cocktail and sea food cocktail.

The dinner entrees include sea food cocktail, clam chowder, soup of the day or salad (choice of two) potatoes and hot bread. The beef and seafood combinations range from $4.49 to $11.85.

The "Denizens of the Deep" — specialty of this house — offers a great variety of food that swims.The top offering is the Captain's Seafood Patter for two at $22.50. This elegant platter include oysters, scallops, shrimp, lobster and sole with wine. There are many other fine offerings. I am attracted by the abalone stuffed with crabmeat at $9.85. Cioppino, a bouillabaisse cooked in the Italian style, is one of the features. The Captain's Mate — shrimp, sole, oysters and scallops with a carafe of wine ($7.45) — provides a complete, man-sized dinner

There are smaller dinners for the kids.

The Kettle Restaurant, also owned by the Captain's Quarter, is located at 1776 W. Linoln Ave., Anaheim. It is a slightly different type of restaurant. There are "interesting specials every evening at various special prices." The place tends to emphasize meats instead of seafood, but seafood is available. Roast beef au jus is $7.50. Steak and lobster is $11.50. Polynesian spareribs, slowly baked for blending of Kettle sauces, is $5.95.

I think you will find good eating at both the Captain's Quarter and the Kettle. The owners, the Bill Van Solingens, are true professionals.

Cariboo's lifestyle reminiscent of bygone era

By Helen Guthrie Smith
Staff Writer

BARKERVILLE, British Columbia — There's a bit of yesterday alive along British Columbia's historic Cariboo Wagon Trail, the old supply route that connected the Cariboo district's gold fields to a water outlet leading to the coast.

The original trail, with Mile Zero at Lillooet, pushed its way through a big and incredibly beautiful countryside. It pushed through rolling meadows, hills and timberlands, past deep lakes of blue and green and along the treacherous Fraser River where the legendary Clementine was said to have met her fate, ending up at a booming Barkerville.

The trail was etched out by gold-hungry miners, their camp followers and suppliers after Billy Barker, a sailor-turned-miner, struck it rich in August 1862, setting off a gold rush similar to that which began at Sutter's Mill more than a decade earlier.

When the mines petered out, the miners moved on. The traders, merchants, farmers, ranchers and lumbermen stayed and built Canada's newest and westernmost province.

TODAY, THEIR descendants living along the famous road — now a 260-mile modern highway — keep their colorful past alive through festivals, stampedes, rodeos, horse shows, logging competitions and even gold pan throwing contests.

At towns all along the road, the summer visitor can join in in celebrating the past.

In Lillooet, originally known as Cayoosh Flats, the past is recreated through Gold Rush Days the last week in July and through a rodeo in September.

Lillooet's mining days were rowdy. In 1863, the population was estimated at 15,000, and according to one source, the townspeople were served by "13 saloons and 25 other liquor outlets."

The town was once the winter home of thousands of Cariboo miners. The "Hangman's Tree," an old bull pine, overlooks the town and, as local history has it, was used six times. The remains of the victims rest nearby.

Forty-nine miles along the trail lies Clinton, a bustling western town. Its big ranches host dudes in the summer and hunters in the winter. Its past is revisited through rodeos and pony and chuckwagon races. Equestrian and roping events are held every Sunday during the summer.

THE 105TH ANNUAL Clinton Ball and Rodeo, said to be the oldest established event in the interior of British Columbia, was held in May. In the beginning, it was THE social event of the year.

Guests came from a 200-mile radius. Ladies ordered their gowns from Paris and festivities lasted six days. Over the years, the length of the ball had dwindled to two days, but the old-time spirit remains.

After the ball, visitors can get another shot of nostalgia by poking around two nearby ghost towns and an abandoned fort.

Cariboo Wheel Days also revive the past. They are held Aug. 26 through 28 at ranches and resorts in the 70 Mile House area, which is at or near Green or Watch Lakes. There are square dances, cowboy breakfasts, chuckwagon races and fiddle exhibitions.

The town called 100 Mile House, taking its name from the roadhouse there which was 100 miles from Lillooet, celebrates its yesterdays with rodeos and horse shows. The town is in the center of lake and ranch country.

Farther along the trail, Lac La Hache, both a community and a 12-mile-long lake, celebrates with a square dance jamboree in June.

A famous stampede is held the first week in July at Williams Lake, center for cattle ranching and the lumber and mining industries. Cowboys from all over North America come for the event.

Weeks before the stampede, the whole town goes all out to recreate an earlier era. Hay bales are brought into bank lobbies, rail snake fences are painted on bank windows and boots and Stetsons abound. A fall rodeo follows.

In Quesnel, the gateway to Barkerville, and also a farm, lumber and mining center, there are rodeos in July and September. A fair and a loggers' competition take place in early September. The fourth annual Billy Barker Days are set for mid July and will included a Gold Dust Ball, a rodeo, a bed race and a gold pan throwing contest. There's a fiddlers' contest, too.

Wells, a dinky town just outside of Barkerville and the home of hard-hat loggers and long-haired youths working for the provincial park department in Barkerville, goes backwards with gold rush nights the third weekend in July.

AND IN BARKERVILLE, the end of the line, the past is a permament condition. The long-haired youth from Wells stand in as miners and tour guides for visitors to the authentically restored boom-then-bust town.

In 1962, the town was officilly opened as a provincial park. Its saloons, log houses, false-front stores and a solitary church have been, or are being restored to a period between 1868 — when the town burned to the ground and was instantly rebuilt — and 1880.

One can walk the dusty street, cutting almost straight through the center of the town, and see and feel the past. Interiors of many of the stores have been faithfully recreated.

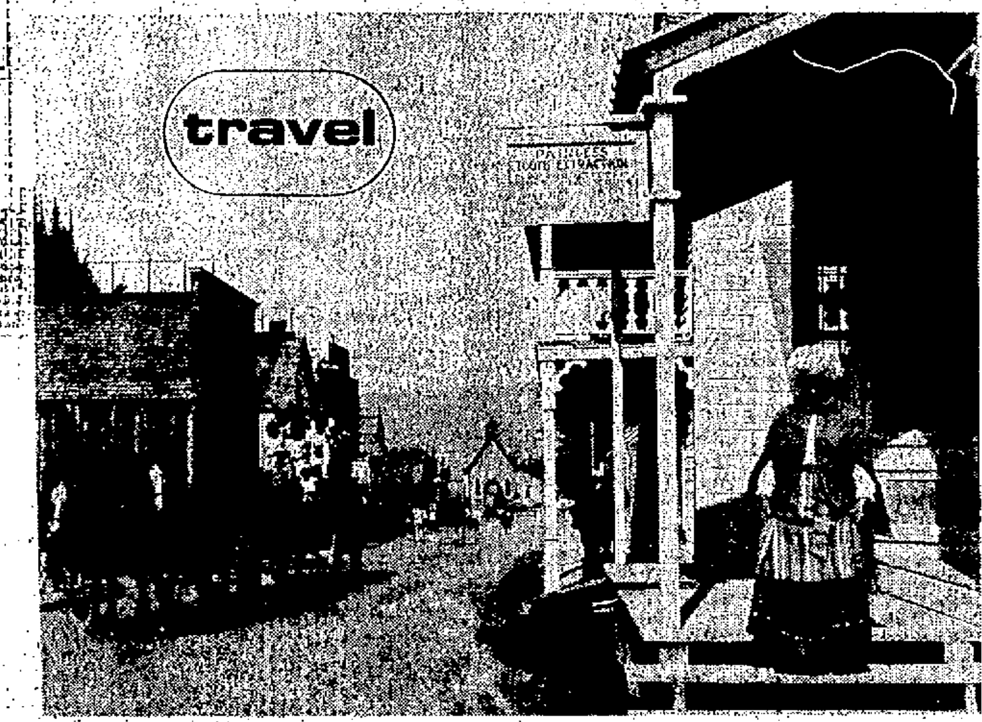
With a good many of the props there, it doesn't take much to conjure up a picture of stagecoaches, teams, wagons, jubilant, but unwashed miners, hurdy gurdy girls — and mud.

A museum and stage performances, held twice a day in the summer, help one make the transition from 1977 to the days when Billy Barker was making it big — before he lost it all to the bars and to a woman.

Throughout the Cariboo, even without the festivals and rodeos, it's easy to go back to an earlier era. The area doesn't seem to have caught up with the 1970s. The pace is slower and the air and water much too clean.

You can get to British Columbia's Cariboo area by flying Canadian Pacific Air to Vancouver then flying Pacific Western Airlines to Quesnel or Williams Lake.

For information on the Cariboo, including festival dates and places, write to Tourism British Columbia, 3303 Wilshire Blvd., Suite 585, Los Angeles, Calif. 90010.



TOURISTS CAN RELIVE PAST IN TOWNS LIKE BARKERVILLE, B.C.

Lots to see in the Badlands territory

By Bob Tonsing
Knight-Ridder News Service

PIERRE, S.D. — The size of the Badlands National Monument, which attracts more than one million visitors a year, has been more than doubled. A new southern unit adds 133,000 acres to the existing north unit's 111,000.

The new area has few modern roads such as those in the original tract, but will be a pleasant surprise to backpackers and visitors with recreational vehicles who are prepared to rough it.

For most tourists — those with limited time to sightsee — the established northern route, U.S. 16A from Cactus Flat, S.D., to Wall, S.D., still is the best choice. The 30-mile black-topped road offers great scenic variety.

Included in Park Service programs are three nature walks each day during the summer. Two take several hours each, with the third, more strenuous, three to four hours.

There are some strenuous hiker trails jutting off 16A. For them walkers should wear sturdy shoes and bring a supply of water. Hikers also should remember that the clay and gumbo of the Badlands can get slick and crumbly following a rain shower.

FOR sightseers who don't really enjoy walking there are more than a dozen easily accessible "overlooks," each offering its own intrepretation of Badlands scenery.

Monument personnel show a special nightly slide program at the visitor's center, have astronomy programs and offer special interpretive programs. There also are two-hour night "mystery walks."

The new southern unit has been described as "badder" than the northern area. Vistas offered at Palmer Creek, Sheep Mountain Table or Red Shirt in the south range through rugged canyons, expansive buttes ragged gullies — all with a breathtaking splendor.

Brazil by bus appealing, challenging

jane morse

At a time when a Holiday Inn has risen in the sleepy Peruvian town of Iquitos, when Master Charge is acceptable in the hill stations of Malaysia and the martini has been introduced to Odessa, is there anything left for the adventuresome explorer?

Well, yes. If you're as unflappable as an ox and a little crazy in the head, you can try seeing Brazil by bus.

On the grounds that you don't take in much of the country when you merely fly over it in a jet, busing through Brazil has appeal. There are, however, several large flies in this ointment.

For one thing, the real Brazil has to be at least four times larger than maps show. To fly from North to South takes about twice as long as it takes from New York to Miami.

Plus there are stretches that are still unexplored and boundary lines that are still unmarked.

To "see" an entire country can only be a figurative expression. I knew that. What I didn't know — and couldn't find out in the U.S. — was how Brazil's bus system operates, where it operates and when.

THAT'S PROBABLY because there is no one system. What exists, however, are some exceptionally good value buses, and I took one, finally, from Rio de Janeiro to Sao Paulo.

The trip started well. There was a blur of people in motion at the Rio terminal but they moved at a cheery, "just looking" pace like crowds at an amusement park rather than meeting in shoulder-to-shoulder combat as they do in most metropolitan transportation terminals.

I found a ticketseller upstairs behind a sign reading "Sao Paulo 12:30." I paid for a ticket then followed his sign-language directions to the bus. A handler stashed my suitcase in the baggage compartment and gave me a claim check. Minutes later we were off.

For the most part, the scenery between Rio and Sao Paulo is high drama, Colorado with palm trees. A swiftly moving river ran beside us awhile, and the hilly terrain made the broad asphalt highway look like a triumph of engineering over nature.

ABOUT MIDWAY in our six-hour ride, there was a rest break at a sprawling restaurant-gas station-gift shop complex that resembled a Howard Johnson's liberated by gluttonous good-food addicts. For some reason, everything tasted like what it was supposed to be.

A super-clean restroom was attended by a woman who supplied terry-cloth towels in return for a tip of one cruzeiro (less than 10 cents). The bus, too, was well-equipped, with 34 well-padded seats, each slightly larger than its airline counterpart and capable of being reclined to an even greater degree.

There was a lavatory at the rear and curtains at all windows to screen out the sun. Moreover, the price was right: less than $6 for the trip.

Dig hard and you'll discover that there are similar bus-riding possibilities between most of Brazil's largest cities (with some major exceptions in the underdeveloped central and Amazon areas), many with several departures daily. Between Brasilia, the working capital, and Rio, the fun capital, there are at least half a dozen.

There are no giant, go-everywhere lines like Greyhound. A name to remember, though, is Iapermarin, Brazil's largest and usually most luxurious line, which operates in roughly seven states in the southern and eastern parts of the country.

ANOTHER THING to remember is that all services are "direct" between the two named points, meaning stopovers are out because there's unlikely to be alternative service between "minor" cities and no re-boarding is allowed on the "through" service.

At first this may not sound significant but if you go back to thinking about distances, it could give you the shakes. Once you buy a ticket for, say, Brasilia-Rio, that means you travel the full 19 or so hours Or Else.

For longer trips — like the 48 hours between Belem and Brasilia — there's good service by "leito," which is something to regard with respect.

It's specifically designed for comfortable night travel, carrying only 17 seats, each of which can be reclined at an almost fully horizontal position that turns it into a bed.

Some leitos come with air-conditioning, some without. All reportedly include snack and soft-drink service and such amenities as carpeting, coverlets and toilets.

My Rio-Sao Paulo bus was "regular." In addition there's something called "executive" service in a few places. It features seats for 24 to 30 passengers, a lavatory, snack and drink service. Regular fares cost approximately three cents a mile, leito and executive about double.

All services have rest stops about every two and a half to three hours, lengthened into meal stops at normal meal times. After dinner, main lights go out though reading lights are permitted.

Brazil by bus obviously presents the traveler with a challenge that's both fascinating and frustrating. So take your time and enjoy it.

Cruise vacation has everything

San Francisco

"There are two kinds of vacations," said a Government tourist man at lunch the other day. "The one where you go to a resort and stay; or one where you move around. From place to place.

"People on the first are surf-and-sand types. They get a resort hotel on a warm beach. They want good rooms and good food.

"The second are sightseers. They prefer big cities. Elegant restaurants. Expensive shops. Museums and art galleries.

stan delaplane

"So they take the tour: London, Paris, Rome and so on.

"THAT'S WHY cruise ships have become so popular for both in the last couple of years. You can do your sunning on deck. You're living in a floating hotel.

"The ship moves you from one place to another. You can get off, shop and sightsee."

Travel agents say cruise travel is bigger than ever this year. Russians are moving into the Caribbean-Mexican run with brand-new ships.

Hiring American cruise directors to upgrade entertainment. American food directors to get the menu away from boiled cabbage.

If you want a Christmas or New Year's cruise, book it now. By November, the Captain couldn't get a reservation for his mother.

"I am a young man in college looking for a new spiritual outlook. From what I hear, people who go to India and Nepal are looking for the drug scene . . ."

I never tried this. But I hear the American Embassy in Athens will work you up a letter to Mount Athos, 400 miles from there. Some 3,000 monks. (Who sleep all day and sing all night.)

Bare on comforts. Meager on food. Rich on spiritual examination. No women allowed. Not even female animals. And I'm sure no dope scene. Weather heavenly.

TREASURE-HUNTING visitors to Laguna's Sawdust Festival may shop for hand-crafted shoes by Jack Travis, above, or pottery by Dave Ford, below. Then visitors may walk across the street to the Festival of Arts or down the way to Art-A-Fair.

—Staff Photos by TOM SHAW

Laguna art shows lure many visitors

Laguna Canyon Road is an avenue to artistic talent for summer treasure-hunters.

The road to Laguna Beach leads to three art shows. Spirits may be depressed by the traffic congestion on the way, but there is plenty to raise spirits at the various exhibits. Paintings, pottery, dolls, etchings and prints all are on display for purchase.

The original Festival of Arts has been a cultural standout since it started in 1932.

Across the roadway is the Sawdust Festival, started in the late 1960s by a group of artists who broke away from the older festival in protest against its jury system.

The Sawdust Festival is limited to 160 craftsmen and artists. They are required to live in Laguna Beach or South Laguna for at least a year to participate.

Down the way is Art-A-Fair, which does not require exhibitors to be local residents.

One of the Sawdust exhibitors is Jack Travis, 28, who learned to make shoes eight years ago after breaking his back. He designs his shoes for use on asphalt and pavement.

The shoes Americans wear are made in other countries and the foot patterns here are different, Travis said. His shoes sell for about $140, but he says they last much longer than mass-produced footwear.

Dave Ford, 23, sells his pottery. This is his third year exhibiting at the Sawdust Festival.

"I want to get rich," he said.

Adult admission for all three shows is 50 cents. Each ends Aug. 28. The Art Festival is open daily from noon to 11:30 p.m. The Sawdust Festival is open daily from 10 a.m. to midnight. Art-A-Fair is open from 10 a.m. to 10 p.m.

County re-examines water conservation

Save rain, but get rid of it

Consider the paradox faced by the Los Angeles County Flood Control District: rain water must be disposed of quickly, but it must still be saved.

Even as California's worst drought continues, flood district officials are re-examining their traditional "cost-effective" approach to water conservation and taking a second look at what used to be regarded as expensive projects.

According to a report recently submitted to the Los Angeles County Board of Supervisors, nearly 94.5 percent of the water from the May 8-10 rainstorm — the last major precipitation in the Los Angeles basin — was percolated into underground water basins or is still being retained in surface reservoirs.

Still, the report says, the 5.5 percent that escaped to the ocean was a significant resource worth $1.9 million at $50 an acre-foot.

As a result, plans have been made to increase storage in several flood control dams and a $15 million, eight-mile pipeline is being considered to divert water in the Los Angeles River to the district's spreading basin near Pico Rivera.

Historically in the flood control district, water conservation has taken a back seat to flood damage control. Between 1919 and 1975, the district average in reclaiming storm water was 4.7 million acre-feet. The storm water, which would have otherwise escaped to the ocean, was allowed to seep into underground water basins.

That's enough water to fill the Shasta Reservoir — largest in California — and then allow 200,000 acre-feet to run over the brim.

In an average year, the district diverts about 140,000 acre-feet of rainfall away from the ocean, or about $7 million worth at present pumping and market rates for underground water.

There are two major difficulties in preserving the storm waters, the district says. First, there is the danger during the height of the rainy season that storing too much water will leave the flood channels ill-equipped to cope with later rains.

Second is the lack of sufficient spreading grounds where the water

Health election now in question

By Mark Gladstone
Staff Writer

The national health care bill last year was a staggering $140 billion, but a law passed by Congress in 1974, in part to reduce the high cost of medical care, is beginning to have an impact.

The Health Planning and Resources Development Act of 1974 is changing the way health care planning decisions are made in Los Angeles County and across the country.

This is the issue: For the first time consumers, providers and elected officials will decide how many hospital beds an area needs, the amount of expensive equipment that is necessarry and other planning issues.

Representatives of these groups have been elected to sub area councils of the Health Service Agency for Los Angeles County, and eventually a governing body for the entire county will be picked.

Originally, the election process was scheduled to be completed by Sept. 1, but that is now in question because Los Angeles City Atty. Burt Pines has filed suit, joined by the City of Torrance.

They seek a restraining order against the HSA and their request is scheduled to be considered in Superior Court Monday at 9 a.m. Pines is asking that the HSA not be allowed to hold meetings until various city council members are allowed to take their seats on the local councils.

BUT THE HSA is going ahead with its effort to determine the needs and priorities in health planning and has scheduled five meetings in the various areas.

The meeting for Sub Area Four is scheduled for Monday night at 5:30 p.m. at Mira Costa High School Auditorium at 701 South Park Ave., Manhattan Beach.

The purpose of the HSA is to improve health and increase the quality of services at reasonable cost and without duplication.

There are more than 200 of these regional planning groups across the country. Some cover a number of counties and others, such as in Los Angeles, cover a single populated area.

Los Angeles was one of the few areas to use an election to select the members of the area councils.

The U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare (HEW) determines which group will be the planning agency for a region and provides the funds.

For instance, in Los Angeles County the Board of Supervisors attempted to win the contract. However, it was awarded to a coalition of 42 groups representing consumers, providers and public officials who formed the non-profit HSA more than a year ago.

The regional HEW director in San Francisco awarded the group the nearly $2 million contract for this year. Next year, the budget request is for $2.4 million.

AN INTERIM governing board was appointed by the board of supervisors, and registration was opened earlier this year for voters. Of the seven million county residents, approximately 24,000 signed up.

Of these, more than 1,400 filed to run for the 150 positions on the sub-regional councils. The councils cover the same areas as the five supervisorial districts.

The election was held June 21. Eleven Long Beach residents won seats on Sub Area Four Advisory Council, which covers Supervisor James Hayes' district (including most coastal cities in the county). The terms of office will be for three years and members may be paid

Gay athletes' union opens 'closet' door

By Brad Altman
Staff Writer

Greg Carmack, a young Belmont Shore athlete, has many attributes admired by our society. In top physical condition from a summer on the beach, he is a 6-foot, 180-pounder with blond, sun-streaked hair.

Carmack likes sports. He played midget football in kindergarten, Little League baseball during elementary grades and was the varsity quarterback of his high school football team.

A 21-year-old Long Beach State University swimmer, Carmack has achieved masters class rank, the highest amateur classification.

Until now, public recognition of Carmack's athletic career always overshadowed the private reality of his life: he is a homosexual.

One of a handful of athletes who has publicly announced a same-sex preference, Carmack has been campaigning for several months to organize gay athletes on an international scale.

The organizing was started by Richard Raymond, an avowed gay athlete, who last January formed the Long Beach-based International Union of Gay Athletes. There are now 450 members worldwide, most of them college-aged varsity male athletes, including 25 LBSU gay athletes.

News of the gay athletes' union has spread mainly by word-of-mouth, but Raymond also travels to colleges in large cities to form chapters. An advertisement for the group printed in a homosexual newspaper brought 750 responses.

Some of those responding said in notes attached to their membership applications that they felt trapped, living double-lives "in the closet." They were worried that should their sexual proclivity be known, it might negatively affect their career and their relationships with their families and friends.

"The International Union of Gay Athletes exists to bolster the courage of the athletes who join us," Raymond says.

"To know that other gay jocks exist . . . to be able to relate to them on a social and competitive basis, is a tremendous burden lifted off many. We are a self-support mechanism for our members."

Carmack heads a social arm of the union called "Great Outdoors" in Long Beach. Weekend hikes and recreational activities are attended by up to 50 gay physical fitness buffs, he says.

ONE PARTICIPANT, a nationally-known college sports star, is training for competition in the 1980 Moscow Olympic games.

People Talk

F.C. Anderson

GIVE "People Talk" readers the write-of-way and you come up with a column like this.

Marilyn Hendrick of Long Beach is not an eavesdropper by design, but she couldn't help picking up on a conversation between two teen-aged girls who were waiting in the check-out line at the Market Basket, Bellflower Boulevard and Spring Street.

The first girl was dressed in jeans and a T-shirt. The other miss was all gussied up in a dress.

Jeans: "Every time you have a date with Ricky you're all dressed up. Where are you going this afternoon?"

Dressy Miss: "Nowhere in particular. I just got tired of people trying to figure out which one is the girl when I'm with Ricky. His hair is longer than mine, and until he cuts it I'll wear a dress when I'm going to see him."

Marliyn's tale reminds me of that old French proverb: "Men are men and women are women — and vive la difference!"

LET'S LEAVE the adolescent fashion show and amble over to the Lucky Market on the Traffic Circle, recently closed down after 20 years of service to the neighborhood. Marilyn Fortier, a teacher at Stevenson School, tells the story:

"My son Mark was part of the work crew brought in from another Lucky's to pack up on the store's last day.

"Late in the day they noticed an elderly man who appeared to be waiting for something. Finally, as closing time came, he checked out with his purchase, telling the cashier he had been the store's first customer when it opened and now was its last customer at closing.

"I thought the story rather quaint in this day of high transiency. Perhaps with more faithful customers like the old man there would have been no need to close the store."

Another case of faithfulness unrewarded involved an elderly woman I encountered some months ago at the former Cole's market on the Diagonal.

Cole's had died of the financial miseries and the store had been shuttered for many months, although signs in the front and back windows indicated hope of resurrection — after inventory.

My commerce often takes me to stores near that old market, and it transpired that one day I met the old woman, as she waited with shopping cart at Cole's front door. I had seen her there on station for a week or more, but I hadn't ventured to talk to her.

Now my curiosity could not be contained. I walked up to her and said, "They're not going to reopen, Ma'am. I checked into it."

"Don't believe everything you hear, young man. The sign says closed for inventory, and I believe it. Inventory doesn't take forever."

"The sign's in error, Ma'am," I said gently.

She shook her head, still not persuaded. Then she wheeled her shopping cart away, heading down Ximeno. After a few steps she stopped, looked back at me and said:

"Well, maybe tomorrow."

Somebody has to believe in tomorrow, even if it never comes.

LET ME be the first to congratulate Congressman Mark Hannaford for being the first to congratulate my wife and me on our 50th wedding anniversary. We loved the sentiment, even if it was delivered 19 years too early.

The Mr. and Mrs. Francis Anderson who live at my address were married May 29, 1946, in South Bend, Ind. That's 31 years by my arithmetic. Could it be that Congressman Hannaford was misled by the author's picture which sits atop this column? Have I finally come to look as old as that?

The real Golden Wedding Andersons were the subject of a story in our Life/Style section on Thursday, July 28. Not only is that Francis Anderson the Anderson who was married in Evansville, Ind., on July 30, 1927, but he's better looking than I.

It's obvious that Congressman Hannaford's staff saw the Anderson Golden Wedding story in Life/Style and jumped to the wrong conclusion, falling flat on their addressograph.

To the proper Andersons my wife and I bequeath the congressman's congratulations: "Your marriage has set an important example for our young people and certainly represents success in your personal lives."

Congressional letters run true to form, and I hope my wife and I can keep pace — at least until May 29, 1996, when Congressman Hannaford will try again.

Honest and open?

It may or may not have been a "blatant political payoff" as top Republican leaders contended, but President Carter's support of the oil-cargo preference bill certainly is "special interest" legislation which the president said in his election campaign he would reject.

Of course, Carter also promised maritime workers during the campaign that he would support legislation to guarantee that a certain percentage of oil — 9.5 percent is the proposed figure — be carried in American-flag vessels.

ANYONE WHO PUTS much faith in campaign promises probably deserves all the disappointments he will feel when they don't, or do, come true.

There is a more serious flaw in the president's position, however, as James Wieghart of Knight News Service reported in a column in these papers on Friday.

Gerald Rafshoon, who handled Carter's advertising during the 1976 campaign and who now serves as a media consultant to the president, also is directing the maritime industry's current advertising campaign, which is estimated at anywhere from $500,000 to more than $1 million.

Rafshoon has emphasized that he does not advise the president on the issues themselves, but only on the public presentation of Carter's decisions on such issues—including the oil-cargo preference bill. There has been no evidence that he has done otherwise.

But members of the president's staff have a special responsibility to avoid even an appearance that they might be using their position for their own, or a client's, benefit. President Carter is comparatively new to national politics and still inexperienced, but he should be more aware of this problem than anyone, having made such a point in the presidential campaign of how he would deal honestly and openly with the American people.

WE ARE SURPRISED, to say the least, that the Washington correspondents have treated the president so lightly in the cases of Secretary of the Treasury Bert Lance and Rafshoon, both of which had at least a tint of conflict of interest.

Both situations may be easily explained, but one cannot help wondering if Lance and Rafshoon would have had such an easy time if they had been aides of Richard M. Nixon.

Tales of two cows

The tentacles of government reach into almost every corner of modern life, and nowhere is this more true than in the field of economics.

The California Chamber of Commerce newsletter, Alert, just gave us some clues about how different kinds of government affect economic matters.

Here's what its said about "Comparative Economics:"

"Socialism: You have two cows; the government takes one and gives it to a neighbor, then controls the production, price and distribution of the milk.

"Communism: You have two cows; the government takes both and gives you some milk.

"Nazism: You have two cows; the government takes both and shoots you.

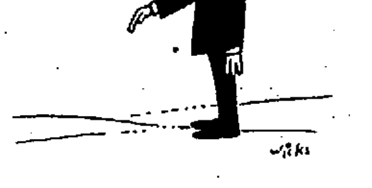
"Great Society-ism: You have two cows; the government takes both, shoots one, milks the other and throws the milk away.

"Governor Brown's Buddhist Economics: You have two cows, the government regulates their care, feeding and milking to the point that they both nearly stop giving milk; the governor tells you there are no easy solutions, that milk is, after all, a limited resource — and that you'll just have to lower your expectations.

"Coastal Region: You have two cows; the government puts one in an open space preserve and says it can't be developed or milked, but they promise to let you milk the other one after you prepare a plan, complete an EIR and wait three years for a milking permit — your milk will then be priced at $50 a quart and few can afford it.

"Capitalism: You have two cows; you sell one and buy a bull."

There is just one little question we have in this day of government-forced high inflation. Where'd anybody ever get enough money to get two cows in the first place?



'Sure I want peace in the Middle East...this piece!'

Behind scenes: Sohio a political struggle between Carter, Brown

by Jack W. Germond and Jules Witcover
Knight News Service

The embarrassing riches of California's excess oil supply have precipitated a political tug-of-war over energy policy between President Carter and the politician who could be his most formidable rival in 1980, Gov. Jerry Brown.

Carter's energy chief, James Schlesinger, has indicated support for construction by Standard Oil of Ohio of a multimillion-dollar terminal at Long Beach to receive oil shipped by tanker from the new Alaskan pipeline. California doesn't need the oil for itself, but it would be passed through an existing pipeline to Texas and on to refineries in the Midwest and South.

BROWN AND THE chairman of his Air and Resources Board, Tom Quinn, don't see much there for California, however. Not only isn't the oil needed here, they say, but the new facility would vastly increase air pollution in the Los Angeles basin. And the pipeline through Texas that would be used for oil will be needed a few years from now to assure natural gas imports for California consumers. The new terminal would mean only a handful of jobs for Californians, and so can hardly be justified as a boon to employment, either.

Thus, the situation sets up a classic industry-versus-enviornmentalist fight over construction of the new terminal, with the Carter adminitration at least tentatively siding with industry for construction and the Brown administration siding with environmentalists.

Quinn, who is also Brown's chief political adviser, says the state is not unalterably opposed to the construction, but will insist that Sohio comply with the state's anti-pollution standards, which might cost the oil company up to $80 million to meet. Sohio's current proposals have been rejected as inadequate by Quinn, and an apparent squeeze play is underway.

On one side, the Brown administration obviously hopes that by hanging tough, it will enlist Schlesinger to put pressure on Sohio to take stronger anti-pollutin measures. On the other, Sohio hopes that federal pressures on the Brown administration might bring some softening of the state's firm anti-pollution posture.

THE WHOLE MATTER came to a head with the recent decision by the White House to abandon another option for disposing of the new oil from Alaska's north slope: to ship it to Japan in a trade-off for Indonesian oil originally slated for Japan that would be rerouted to eastern United States ports. It was decided that at a time the president was talking energy prices, it would not wash politically to ship the Alaskan oil to a foreign country.

That decision left three options: ship it to California for distribution where it wasn't needed; ship it by tanker through the Panama Canal to Texas and eastern ports; put it in a pipeline in California for movement to the West and South. The first option would make no sense and the second would be very costly, so attention is inevitably centered on the third.

The economics of the controversy are revealing. No matter which means of transporting the oil is used, under the law the same price would be charged to the consumer. Thus, the higher cost of using the canal would cut into Sohio's profits. And Alaska would be hurt because its tax on oil at the wellhead is calculated on the sales price minus the cost of transportation. So, Alaska has been a booster of the Sohio terminal in California.

IN TALKS WITH Quinn, Schlesinger is said to have remarked at one point that "sometime California has to be willing to pay its price to meet national energy needs" — that is, to make some sacrifices in the national interest. That may be, but Brown is clearly skeptical about the entire Carter energy program. At a recent White House briefing he complained that the Carter plan included no serious solar or conservation elements as alternatives to more oil production and distribution. In this case, the governor is standing with the enviornmentalists and, in so doing, is casting the Carter administration as an ally of the oil industry, though the president's interest clearly is to get oil to parts of the country that need it.

Brown's position may cost the state a few jobs, but it is not likely to hurt him with voters who consider the oil giants to be the profit-greedy bad guys in the whole equation. If he can force Sohio to meet the rigid air-pollution standards, and get the federal government to guarantee certain other anti-pollution standards on tankers outside state control, Brown will have the best of both worlds. And that clearly is his objective in this war of words.

Everyone loses when governor shuns give-and-take of press conferences

SACRAMENTO — It is probably true that if Ronald Reagan had done with the press what Jerry Brown is doing, reporters in the Capitol would have bared their fangs and snarled in a collective rage.

The last plain, ordinary old press conference Governor Brown had was Feb. 3, a long six months ago.

There have been a few news conferences since then on specific subjects, and the governor as often as not is available either in person or by phone to reporters who have a particular question or two to ask. And reporters a couple of times a week are given notice that he is going to be available after a meeting with some visiting dignitary, or while walking back to his office from an event of one kind or another.

But the full-scale press conferences, where the governor, in effect, says, "Okay, here I am, fire away," have not been held since that Feb. 3 session, when reporters raked Brown over the coals for appearing to take credit due the Public Utilities Commission for participating in a plan to make natural gas due California available to the frozen New England states.

Bob Schmidt

View From Our State Bureau

The governor was given a pretty good going over by the reporters, some of whom seemed to take an unprofessional relish in having the usually unflappable Brown so obviously on the defensive. But Jerry Brown's antipathy for news conferences preceded that one.

In January of 1976, he visited the Sacrameto Press Club and was asked why he hadn't had a news conference in four months.

"I thought the regularity of these rather ritualistic encounters tended to result not in a lot of new information," he said.

It was suggested that the governor should stick to governing and let news reporters decide what news was. Apparently the suggestion was not taken then, and it hasn't been taken yet.

Which is too bad. Too bad for the reporters; too bad for the governor, and too bad for the public.

Too bad for the reporters because regular sessions with the governor are valuable, not only so then can ask him questions on subjects of concern to their readers, but so they can continue to develop their own "feel" for the man and the way he operates.

TOO BAD for the governor, because while his celebrated sense of what concerns the people of California may be merited, the questions from a roomful of reporters representing newspapers and radio and television stations from all parts of the state can certainly serve to increase that awareness.

And, finally, too bad for the public, because so much of what they see of their governor is in narrow, orchestrated situations pretty much designed to show a chief executive in a favorable light. The appropriately adversary nature of the formal press conference allows them to take a different measure of the man who heads the state.

Ronald Reagan appeared to enjoy his weekly jousting with the press, although it was difficult to believe he really did. Many of the sessions were marked by open hostility as reporters maneuvered to force him to answer a question he didn't want to answer.

REAGAN WON most of the contests, but the reporters were given to think they'd made him work some, and so there developed a grudging respect, even admiration, if no great affection. If the former governor had decided to cut out the press conferences, however, there would have

But the formal press conferences served a purpose, and they are valuable. They should be restored. Perhaps, as Jerry Brown nears his re-election effort, he will come to think they're valuable, too.

Enough U.S. energy to last 1,280 years

If the "sleeping bag society" doesn't queer it, we may have 1,280 years of energy left at the rate we're now using it.

There's a short-term 165 years' supply of energy on hand today in neat storage containers.

Not surprisingly, these terms, facts and promises are provided by a point-man for the nuclear industry, former Long Beach Congressman Craig Hosmer, founder and president of the American Nuclear Energy Council in Washington, D.C.

The 165-year fuel supply consists of about 200,000 tons of depleted uranium tailings, the material left over after enriched uranium has been extracted to make fuel for nuclear power plants. The stuff is stored at Oak Ridge, Tenn., Paducah, Ky., and Portsmouth, Ohio.

"But President Jimmy Carter has barred access by Americans to this great national resource," Hosmer says.

To realize the energy potential of these tailings would require, Hosmer says, "that they be used in breeder reactors where at least 70 percent of the material would eventually be transmuted into plutonium for use as nuclear fuel.

"Calculations by Dr. C. S. Winters of the Union Carbide Corporation predict their total power yield at some 11,500 quads of thermal energy. By comparison, today the U.S. uses only about 70 quads per year from all energy sources including petroleum, coal, uranium and hydropower."

A QUAD IS A quadrillion British thermal units.

The quads from the tailings plus 13,300 quads from all yet-to-be-mined U.S. coal plus the yet-to-be-mined U.S. uranium add up, in Dr. Winters' view, to 78,000 quads, enough to last 1,280 years at the current rate of usage.

Carter's indefinite deferral of breeder reactors, Hosmer says, "places this enormous energy resource as effectively out of reach as if it did not exist.

"The president declares that plutonium is an ingredient of proliferation and that this monumental act of forebearance is necessary to set an example against the spread of nuclear explosives for others to follow."

But all powers rich enough to wage global war, Hosmer continues, "already have armed themselves with nuclear weapons and intercontinental delivery systems. Most of the remaining nations with technical and economic means to go nuclear lack any motivation to do so.

"The remaining proliferation candidates (including a terrorist) are few in number (6 to 12) and their resources seem to limit them to a potential for regional troublemaking as distinguished from a global war-making capability. Containing them by military, diplomatic, security and similar means ought to be a readily manageable task."

In a Hosmer profile by Mona Reynolds, assistant editor of Power Engineering, Hosmer notes that atomic power for peaceful uses was accepted as "manifest destiny" after the bombings in Japan. Now it has opponents and is no longer unquestioned. Moreover, Hosmer adds, the battle is not being fought fairly "because some actions being taken toward the no-growth, low-energy lifestyle — what I call a sleeping-bag society — deliberately avoid allowing the people to decide on whether they wish to go that way."

Bob Houser

Political Editor

His nuclear energy council's job "is to try to bring this issue of the future of our lifestyle into the conscious understanding of the Congress."

Hosmer suggests that the fate of the nuclear industry is tenuous, noting that the pro argument in the old days went forward through scholarly activities such as forums, philosophical and technical meetings but "today there are activities going on in Congress that could wipe us out in three weeks. Perhaps the very survival of the nuclear industry is in the hands of federal decision makers concentrated inside the beltway around Washington." He drew a parallel with another of his main interests, water.

"My very strong opinion is that in the arid West, if you are in favor of cactus and not people, then don't build dams. But if you are for the people, build dams. Make use of the resources that are there. The forebearance in this respect regarding Hell's Canyon Dam in Idaho borders on insanity.

"Many other dams that didn't get built also would be in the middle of nowhere in narrow canyons and would be an improvement over the present conditions. Opponents insist that this kind of development will spoil nature and is all bad, but a dam supplies power and creates a recreational area for thousands of people."

In or out of Congress, Hosmer bids fair to generate quads of heat on both sides of his pro-energy argument.

The Ombudsman

Not even Gutenberg knew the answer to this

The Ombudsman is in receipt of a complaint from Bob Moriarty of Long Beach, who says his hands get filthy when he reads the Independent and Press-Telegram.

Why the ink smudges?

The reason is simple. The newspaper is printed on newsprint, not blotters.

Ink is like Harold Stassen. It has always had a tendency to run — and it runs more freely at the beginning of a press run than it does at the end. I surmise that Bob Moriarity's issue of the Independent and Press-Telegram is printed early in the run.

Inky fingers may be the price he pays for getting his news hot off the press.

Sure, technology promises nonsmudging ink. But it's difficult to deliver on that promise. The effort has been going on at least since the Fifth Century, when the Chinese used red ink made from cinnabar. They struck out; so did Johann Gutenberg in the 15th Century. His famed Bible ran, staining the fingers of the devout.

The monks in Italy fared no better. In fact, the phrase "ink-stained wretch" is thought to have originated with the monks and the pens they used in the creation of their illuminated manuscripts. Proper blotting was one of the biggest challenges faced by Brother Dominic and his fellow friars.

F. C. Anderson

Why flog the printing art? It's no more culpable than nonsmear lipstick which gives away the philanderings of husbands and other old goats.

We could solve the problem of running ink by chiseling our stories on stone. But this would induce aching backs and hernias in our carriers. And, anyway, isn't the news of the day heavy enough to bear as it is?

I can't give reader Moriarty any real hope, for my hands aren't clean in this matter. They're smudged with the ink of the morning Independent. Ink is nondiscriminatory; it smudges Ombudsmen, too.

Best we turn the problem over to Jimmy Durante, our Inka dinka do editor. I can't Inka dinka do better. Can you?

Now let's hear from Thomas M. Wheeler, who writes:

"It is heartening to see you endorse the New York Times' policy of not carrying X-rated movie ads. I would hope that your thinking also would extend to the exclusion of movie ads in which physical violence is shown.

"My own feeling is that I would rather see people making love than maiming each other. But, then, this is just a kinky aberration in my makeup, and probably goes against public opinion."

Wheeler also suggests we consider not running ads for the film entitled "Bad Mouth Bears." I think he means "Bad News Bears." Whatever he means, he makes clear he finds profanity issuing from the mouths of babes "singularly unappealing."

The latest "Bad News Bears" picture is rated PG, which is quite a distance from an "X," so why pick on it? Kids will be kids, or at least kids imitating adult speech patterns. I know a lot of youngsters who have foul mouths, but they bother me much less than masochism, sadism, snuff-out chronicles and the bilge that passes for art in the pornographic pictures.

Where do you draw the line on violence? We accept it in the context of a Rams' football game, or Billy Martin and Reggie Jackson of the Yankees on television, or the Vietnam war delivered to the dinner table via the tube.

Much of the news is violence. As news we can't ignore it. But gratuitous violence, manufactured violence, hoked-up violence, we can do without it. After a diet of violent news, is fictional maiming, slugging, killing and hurting really necessary?

Lots of people think so. That's why films exploiting violence do well at the box office; that's why Starsky & Hutch thrive on television.

Thomas Wheeler probably is in a minority in rejecting violence in films. He needn't apologize; it's not a "kinky aberration." The sickness is in the general society that gives films the models for bloodletting.

It's sad to look into a bucket of blood and see your image reflected. But that's what modern man is doing. The film makers just polish up the scenario implicit in that reflection, changing the names to salve the consciences.

"Here's looking at you, kid."

Letters to the editor

Porno movie ads

I just saw an editorial on television which really made me wonder. It pertained to the ads for X-rated and porno films, complete with graphics, in the "Entertainment" sections of most papers.

We have heard so much lately about child abuse, sex, crime and violence on television, pornography — especially child porno films — in your paper. It is usually splashed across the front pages and yet, one only has to turn to the entertainment section to see that these "stands" against this type of sick entertainment are just so much rhetoric.

I know these ads are part of the bread and butter of your newspaper, but I wonder if you have the courage to re-evaluate your priorities in this matter. Some newspapers are, in the least, taking the graphics out of these ads; others have had the courage to drop these ads completely. Where does your paper stand.

Whale or what?

Recently, a young man came to my door. He stated he was employed by Sunset Ford. He had a paper and asked me to sign it, stating if I was for or against the blimp.

Sunset Ford claims to be community involved; they pay to advertise such claims. It appears they will also pay to solicit signatures in favor of their blimp.

I am against the blimp and would like to see it removed.

DORIS JOHNSTON
Westminster

Let's complain about something worthwhile. "Willie the Whale" may represent an auto dealership, but when I see him, besides making me smile, he tells me I am almost home. How can his smiling face get anyone angry? I can't understand people looking out their doors and getting upset.

Drive to the nearest grade school and watch all the mothers who park on the wrong side of the street to pick up their children — these women always seem to be the ones who drive the most expensive cars. They always have the same excuse, "I'll just be a minute." But that "minute" could mean the life of another child.

Or how about the persons who park their fancy cars in the spaces designated for the handicapped? I overheard one woman telling her friend, "These spaces are wider and besides that, they are closer to the store." Sure, there are a lot of other spaces for the handicapped, but if each one is taken up by the wrong person, wow!

We've all seen those persons who park either in the red zone or double park, "just for a minute."

All of these drivers need something to remind them that for the safety of others they, too, must obey the laws. Let's see the stores have the cars towed away which are parked in the wrong space, or maybe give them a ticket.

Paramedic aid

On July 8, my father and I were taking a friend home. The friend lived in the Carmelitos Housing Project and, after we dropped out friend off, we began our trip home.

However, our drive home was soon interrupted by three young guys who were carrying clubs. They attacked my father, knocking him to the ground and hitting his head, which required 14 stitches. As I went to my father's aid, my arm was badly cut.

After they left, we went to another friend's house nearby and called the paramedics. They arrived within three minutes and began administering first aid. My father was in shock and had it not been for the quick and efficient action of the paramedics, he might have died.

I didn't have the opportunity to get the names of the men who responded to our call, but I want them to know that I appreciate their quick action.

Safety, security?

The continuing willingness to blindly accept the irresponsibility of political decision-makers remains the greatest threat to personal freedom and to individuality of thought.

When any governing administrator — secure by name, seniority or just good public relations, rather than by qualification, integrity and sound mental health — votes on or determines the success or failure of any policy or legislation, then liberty itself is under siege!

Commitments unanswerable to public trust then become classified information available only to those who may already be guilty of wrongdoing. Guilty, perhaps, of betraying impartial, independent and honorable intentions.

Such blatant improbity tends to limit freedom of exchange and freedom of expression; for many civilians trade their autonomy for "safety" and "security." The "safety" and the "security" of a herd being corralled for eventual slaughter!

CARL BACKSTROM III

Dying on the Pine?

Although Long Beach is known as "The International City," it is beginning to look more and more like Ghost Town, U.S.A. The dust is just as deep in front of the abandoned stores, and if it were panned it would assay three-fourths pure grit and one-fourth candy wrappers, ice-cream cups and beer cans.

As I hurry past "For Lease," "Moved" and "Closed" signs, I pause but once, nostalgically, before an empty shop where I had spent many happy hours fingering the merchandise beyond my budget. Now, I know why they moved — more fingering than figuring. A pint-sized senior citizen scurries past, her handbag locked tightly under her arm. Her bifocaled eyes dart warily from side to side. We smile faintly, understandingly, alongside.

In the next block I meet more people. I play a guessing game. Guatamala? Taiwan? Peoria? Juarez? Saigon? An old man on the corner scrapes out "Bringing in the Sheaves" on his violin. It isn't bringing in the nickels.

At last I come to an open store. Just inside a woman at a table is ready to put aside her crossword puzzle to pierce your ears for a quarter. I push further back into the inner recesses. An impatient customer in a bright green pants suit blocks the aisle, looking for a clerk. The only crowded place is the escalator, presumably all one family. They speak a foreign tongue, volubly. The little girl points excitedly at a display of shiny jewelry. Her mother nods a patient, "Si."

On the landing, I know how Columbus felt. All was strange? My favorite department had been dismantled, the racks gone and the counter chairs disappeared. I barely whisper, "Where is everybody?" The acoustics magnify it and a bored clerk emerges from a back room. She approaches with a wan, PR smile. I smile wanly back. "No, thank you. I'm just looking." Too many customers just looking.

I reenter the street. Young America jogs past. He is clad in brown shorts, barefooted, and his waist-long ponytail is fastened with a jeweled barrette. Someone hands me a pamphlet about saving my soul. At the time, I'm not concerned with saving my soul, but downtown Long Beach — a street that's dying on the Pine?

It's a blessing

I read the letter of Mr. Garcia claiming that California rightfully belongs to them. Yes, I admit, it used to — but not any more. And I would like to add: Isn't it a blessing that this state and the other three — Arizona, New Mexico and Texas — were ceded by Spain to the United States?

If these states were still part of Mexico, he probably would have joined the exodus of the many millions crossing the border into the United States illegally to look for greener pastures, because Mexico has no jobs to offer its citizens. Otherwise, this influx of millions wouldn't be in this country.

By the way, should we not be grateful for the Europeans who made this country the richest and most powerful in the world? Had it not been for them, we probably would have been tilling the soil from morn 'til dusk.

Small savings

I heard that homeowners only use four percent of the state's water, and the people are being asked to cut back 25 percent of their water use. If they don't, they will be fined; and if that doesn't do any good, a meter will be put on the water pipe that only lets so much water through.

If homeowners use only four percent of the state's water and everyone in the state cut back 25 percent, that would only save one percent of all of California's water. What good would one percent be against the 96 percent that the factories are using?

Coroner problems

Since my letter regarding criticism of the coroner's office appeared in the July 23 edition of your papers, I have had so many phone calls with people with the same problems. Some very sad cases.

I intend to turn over all such information to Los Angeles County Supervisor Baxter Ward for investigation.

If anyone has a death where the coroner is involved, they should be sure to request, by mail, the following five items: toxicological report, autopsy report, coroner's report, case report and medical report; otherwise, you will not get anything you don't ask for.

'Concerned peanut farmer' gets a little advice on Panama Canal

by Michael Kilian
Knight News Service

Dear Mike: What the hell can be done about this damned Panama Canal thing? — Concerned Peanut Farmer, Washington, D.C.

Dear Farmer: I must confess that the administration certainly seems to be between a rock, a hard place, and two sharp places on this one, but that's what happens to concerned peanut farmers when they give up the ways of the land and the Lord and walk among the unrighteous.

At the moment, the problem seems to be that the Congress won't approve a treaty that gives anything to the Panamanians, and the Panamanians won't accept a treaty that doesn't give everything to the Panamanians. Even if you did give them everything, they would only want more.

This might seem a monstrous dilemma, but it is actually, as Henry Kissinger would say, a small matter for great minds.

Congress' attitude is grounded in a certain lack of trust. There is considerable fear on Capitol Hill, for example, that if the Panamanians were to take over operation of the Canal, they would drop soft drink cans into the switch box, let the doors to locks rust, or otherwise exhibit negligence. Should one of our dreadnoughts become marooned in the Canal as a consequence, the world's balance of power might go askew.

(Dreadnoughts, PT boats, and captains' gigs seem to be the only naval vessels we have that will fit in the canal. Dreadnoughts haven't been made since the Spanish-American War, but they might be brought back as an alternative to the B-1.)

IF PANAMA IS to take over defense of the Canal, there is some congressional doubt as to whether the Panamanian National Guard would be able to repel, say, a Russian armored division — or even a Belizian bicycle squad. We could equip them with up-to-date missile systems, but there is fear they'd only drop soft drink cans in them, and the lethal range of a launched soft drink can, I think, is less than 100 yards.

A really major worry of the Congress is that, as disciples of the Barbary Coast school of economics, the Panamanians might jack up the Canal rates to exhorbitant levels, compelling shippers to switch to railroads, or supertankers, sailing around Cape Horn.

While this might seem a boon to railroad-rich states like Pennsylvania and Illinois, their railroads don't seem to connect with other states — at least regularly. As for supertankers, more and more of them are taking out Panamanian registry, anyway.

All you have to do then is convince Congress that the Panamanians are capable, rational, and reasonable. Your obstacles are:

— The Panamanians are not capable, rational, or reasonable.

— Even if they were, it would be in their best political interest not to be.

Rabid anti-Americanism, you see, amounts to the Panamanian government's entire domestic program. Without it, no Panamanian leader could achieve greatness. The same is true of the billions Gen. Omar Torrijos Herrera, the incumbent great Panamanian leader, is trying to shake you down for. He needs them for greatness, and perhaps a comfy retirement — which, judging by Panama's present economic conditions, may come soon.

AS FOR ALTERNATIVES, your proposal for a second Panama Canal will get nowhere, unless you want to dig one across Disney World and sell rides. No congressman is going to let you veto water projects in their districts while you build one of your own outside the country.

My only suggestion, then, is war. It'll give you something to do with the troops you're withdrawing from Korea. The worst the Panamanians can do is drop soft drink cans in the switch boxes and call for help from Fidel Castro. This will compel him to take Cuban troops out of Libya, Angola, Northern Ireland, and other Cuban spheres of influence. Thus, you will ease world tensions, or at least move them around.

P.S.: I'm told heads of state from all over the world have been frantically calling up Henry Kissinger in recent days and asking his advice. You might want to give him a try.

Today in history

Associated Press

Today is Sunday, Aug. 7, the 219th day of 1977. There are 146 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On this date in 1789, the U.S. War and Navy departments were established.

On this date:

In 1782, George Washington established the Order of the Purple Heart.

In 1912, a Progressive Party convention in Chicago nominated Theodore Roosevelt for president.

In 1941, Soviet planes carried out their first bombing raids against Berlin in World War II.

In 1942, U.S. Marines landed on Guadalcanal in the Pacific.

In 1945, the Soviet Union declared war on Japan, seven days before the Japanese surrender in World War II.

In 1957, a Federal grand jury in New York indicted Col. Rudolf Abel as a Soviet spy.

Ten years ago: Arab merchants went on strike in the Old City of Jerusalem to protest Israel's annexation of the quarter from Jordan.

Five years ago: The Federal Council on Environmental Quality released a study showing that air was getting cleaner in the U.S. but water was growing dirtier.

Thought for today: Nothing goes swifter than the years — Ovid, Roman poet, about 43 B.C. to 17 A.D.

City official loves clowning around

By Tim Burt
Staff Writer

When the advance planner for the city of Cerritos isn't frowning about his municipal worries — city development, codes and ordinances — he can sometimes be found just clowning around.

Marshall Krupp, a full-time official, is a part-time clown who performs in local parades and visits hospitals to try to cheer up youngsters who need it.

"It's a riot — a great outlet to get away from the day to day pressures and have a good time," Krupp says.

The 27-year-old Krupp directs a group of clowns for the Beverly Wilshire Shrine Club and is secretary of the Goodtime Clowns.

Besides starring as Cerritos' clown in city events, Krupp appears in about 50 parades a year and performs in telethons and other charity events.

"The clown is kind of the teddy bear of society. It's good clean fun and there is so little physical comedy these days. Just about everything is spontaneous — very little is rehearsed.

"One time, a car we were in caught fire. This wasn't part of the routine but we turned it into a funny scene, pouring lots of water on it and making it look like it was planned. Everybody thought that was part of the routine.

"The funniest thing we do is when there are horse droppings along the way, we stick an artificial flower in the middle. People who have seen us often, now expect us to do it as part of our routine."

But while Krupp, the clown, must smile on the outside, as the old saying goes, he may be crying on the inside.

"That's happened an awful lot. There was one kid we went to visit in a hospital who had just lost all of his limbs — he had a cancerous disease and he was turning into a vegetable.

"The people in the hospital told us not to say anything to him as we went by but when he saw us, he started smiling and talking again. A few weeks later, he got artificial limbs and started wanting to live, even though we were told he didn't have long to live."

There are not as many laughs for Krupp in his role as advance planner. The pressures include securing commitments for a 90-acre auto mall while trying to envision potential problems for a city which has reached nearly full residential development.

Cerritos has been negotiating with potential tenants, trying to secure commitments for the proposed mall site, bounded on the north by 183rd Street, on the west by the San Gabriel River, on the south by South Street and on the east by the 605 Freeway.

The city expects to derive at least $1 million annually in sales tax from the mall.

"We are negotiating with three auto manufacturers and two are putting together architectural designs," Krupp said.

"I couldn't tell you when we're going to break ground, but I believe we will have an auto mall in the city."

Krupp and his staff are projecting at least seven years ahead.

"We are looking at programs trying to anticipate the problem of blight, which hits so many cities, before it occurs. For instance, we're looking at a possible program of neighborhood self-revitalization where people in the neighborhood put together their programs."

HSA election now called in question

only for expenses.

The winners have yet to be certified because of the pending legal action.

Steven Amerikaner, a deputy Los Angeles city attorney, said the city attorney's request for a restraining order is based on three points:

—That the HSA refused to certify the election victories of two councilmen because they are not members of racial, economic or ethnic groups necessary for balance on the regional councils.

—That some of the councilmen were denied seats because only one council member from each city is allowed on each sub area council.

—Other irregularities in the balloting process.

Torrance Councilwoman Cathryn Geissert also is trying to determine if she can be forced to relinquish her seat on the Sub Area Four Council.

John O'Connor, a consultant to the HSA, responded that the elected officials who ran for seats were aware that if they won they would be required to appoint substitutes to balance the composition of the boards.

Long Beach Councilwoman Eunice Sato was elected to the council in Sub Area Four, but has yet to be certified. She said she has not been asked to appoint a substitute. She is the only Long Beach council member elected to the board.

Negotiations have been taking place between the Los Angeles city attorney's office and the HSA to avoid going to court Monday. The board of supervisors also has been considering challenging the election process.

Even if the court case brought by Los Angeles is settled, those in the health field say the case is just the beginning of controversy for the new health agency.

FRED DONNER, senior program officer for HEW who oversees the Los Angeles HSA for the federal government, said, "So far I don't have any major problems with them (the HSA). Everyone will have problems from time to time."

He explained that after the local HSA develops a comprehensive plan for health care and is fully designated by HEW and the state planning council, it will review plans for hospital and health care expansion.

If, for instance, a hospital wants to add rooms, the expansion can be rejected or modified if it does not fit into the overall plan, Donner said.

Eventually, HSA will also have a say over how funds for a number of community health programs are spent. He said the HSA may not have that power for two years.

Some of those associated with the HSA say that the current controversy is the result of a lack of understanding by politicians of the importance of the HSA in health planning.

Others who provide health care are disturbed by the granting of these broad powers to a regional agency.

Jeff Gerew, public relations director for Memorial Hospital Medical Center in Long Beach, said, "Generally it's our contention that more government regulation adds to the cost of health care."

Panel to scrutinize Sohio project

By John Sheehan
Staff Writer

Standard Oil of Ohio's proposed project to ship Alaskan crude oil through the port of Long Beach comes under sharp scrutiny this week by a congressional special investigations subcommittee.

The subcommittee, working for the House Interior and Insular Affairs Committee, will hold hearings Monday and Tuesday in San Francisco on, as one subcommittee investigator phrased it: "Whatever happened to all that Alaskan oil?"

The House Interior Committee, he explained, which passed the Alaska Pipeline Act in 1973, has authority to hold oversight hearings on the disposition of Alaskan oil.

"We want to know where that oil is going," said Tim Glidden, chief investigator for the subcommittee. "We want it on the record."

Though Glidden acknowledged that numerous studies have agreed that most of Alaska's North Slope oil cannot be processed on the West Coast — as predicted when the Act was signed by President Nixon in 1973 — "a lot of people back East still don't know that.

"The Act came out of this committee and the committee wants to know what became of it," Glidden said.

He said Monday's hearing will be devoted to testimony from Washington state government and industry officials who are expected to discuss the impact of ARCO's Cherry Point, Wash., refinery which, he said, was designed to exclusively handle Alaska's heavy-sulfur crude oil.

Tuesday's hearings, Glidden said, will focus on the Sohio project.

Subcommittee members taking testimony at the Public Utilities Commission Building, 350 Stockton St., will include the chairman, Rep. Harold Runnels, D-N.M., through whose district Sohio's 1,025-mile Long Beach-to-Midland, Texas, pipeline would run.

Glidden also said that Rep. Mark Hannaford, D-Long Beach, Lakewood will also attend.

Gay athletes' union

"I won't be satisifed," Carmack says, "until a gay athlete stands on the Olympics winner's platform and says, 'I'm accepting this gold medal on behalf of my gay brothers and sisters.'"

The most well-known gay athlete to come out of the closet is former professional football player David Kopay of the Washington Redskins.

Virtually all gay athletes keep their sexual interests secret, Carmack says.

"If some of us don't challenge the oppressive labels and publicly prove them wrong, we'll be trapped by the gay stereotypes for the rest of our lives," Carmack said.

The organization's greatest success so far came at a meeting in mid-July with top ABC executives and producers of a new television series, "Soap," premiering this fall. Raymond criticized the comedy show for portraying an openly-gay character in initial episodes as a "limp-wristed fruitcake, so pathetic as to arouse my sympathy."

After the meeting, producers of "Soap" and ABC executives reportedly agreed to rewrite the character and introduce a gay athlete in the series' fifth episode, Carmack says.

"BEING A MALE homosexual does not mean that you are effeminate any more than being an athlete means you're a dumb jock," Carmack says.

He says the need for a union of gay athletes was similar to the same pressures that once pushed black athletes into the forefront of professional sports.

"Blacks were out to prove that they were not inferior because of their race," Carmack says. "We're out to prove that we're no less men because we're homosexual."

How many gay athletes are there? No one really knows. An investigation of the phenomenon — published in January's Human Behavior magazine — found that the rates of homosexuality among athletes are at least as high as those found in studies of the population at large. (Dr. Alfred Kinsey's early research indicated that 4 percent of the general population is gay.)

Raymond played football for six years in high school as well as the University of Indiana and Tulane. His brother, a professional football player, and father, an NCAA sports official, are gay, Raymond says, adding: "You may use that as they do not have the same last name."

County rain-water paradox

can filter through the soil to the groundwater basins below.

One of the best remaining sites for groundwater percolation is at the base of the Dominguez Hills along Del Amo Boulevard between Alameda Street and Wilmington Avenue.

The 110 acres suitable for this purpose would cost an estimated $8.8 million, the district says, with the price rapidly escalating as surrounding vacant land is developed for industrial use. Other project costs bring the total to $12 million.

IF THIS site were presently available it could be used — along with a deflatable rubber dam in the Los Angeles River channel — to conserve 6,000 acre-feet of storm water a year, according to the report.

Even more could be saved if so-called "low-flow" waters could be used, the report goes on. These waters come primarily from discharge of industrial waste water and are permitted to dissolve mineral content as high as 1,500 part per million (ppm). To be suitable for spreading in a percolation basin, the water should contain 500 to 700 ppm.

Only with the use of the low-flow water, which would increase the annual groundwater recharge at the Dominguez site to 15,000 acre-feet, could the project begin to approach a profitable cost-benefit ratio, the report says. It would still be a "money loser" at a 9 to 10 ratio, but far better than the 2 to 10 ratio using only storm waters, the report explains.

ONE OF THE major advantages would be retrieval of water from the Los Angeles River — the major channel for loss of rain water to the ocean.

For example, the May 8-10 rainstorm dumped 673,000 acre-feet of water on Los Angeles County, of which only 38,005 acre-feet escaped to the sea. Of that, 21,762 acre-feet made it via the Los Angeles River.

An alternate project in the $15 million range has the advantage of tapping the Los Angeles river upstream — before it encounters much of the industrial discharge pollutants — and carry it through an eight-mile pipeline to the Rio Hondo Spreading Grounds near Pico Rivera, the report says.

Had this pipeline been in operation, according to the flood control district, 127,000 acre-feet of water — of a total of 248,000 lost to the ocean via the Los Angeles River channel — could have been conserved. The dollar benefit of those 127,000 acre-feet is $6.3 million, or more than a third of the cost of the project, the report says.

RICHARD OSTRUM, of the district's water conservation division, says the pipeline project has a major flaw — the district can't afford it, at least not without combining it with a number of other programs for water conservation and asking the board of supervisors to submit it to the voters as a bond issue.

In the meantime, several of the less costly projects are in various stages of implementation.

One scheduled to go to bid later this month involves construction of diversion structures to direct storm waters into the Rio Hondo Channel upstream, rather than downstream, from the Rio Hondo spreading grounds. Estimated at $185,000, the project would capture up to 1,000 additional acre-feet of water each year for a 3-to-1 cost-benefit ratio.

Another project to be presented to the board of supervisors this month, Ostrum said, is transfer of the Metropolitan Water District's Morris Dam and Reservoir to the flood control system.

Built in 1934, the dam will require about $8 million in improvements to bring it up to modern safety standards. It would be used to store rain runoff until it could be diverted to one of the spreading basins.

ALSO ON the list for quick implementation is enlargement of the holding capacity behind the Whittier Narrows Dam.

By spending an estimated $500,000 to build levees around 23 oil wells at upper elevations of the reservoir, the district can conserve an extra 3,500 acre-feet of water annually for 10 years, the report says.

Other projects listed in the report, delivered to supervisors in June, include spending $16 million to increase the seismic safety of 14 dams along the foothills of the San Gabriel and San Fernando valleys. Other pojects include spending $8,000 for levees in the Mint Canyon-Santa Clara River area.

"While conservation is costly," the report concludes, "the cost is well overshadowed by the benefits in the dollar value of storm and other waters saved for local water supplies that would otherwise be wasted to the ocean."

What's Your Problem?

Private rentals handled better by an unemotional outsider

Turn a stranger lose in your house? That thought is enough to strike terror in the heart of anyone owning rental property that has a real sentimental attachment.

DEAR MR. CAMPBELL: Because of a shortage of funds, I must rent out the lower floor of my house. The trouble is, the house is beautifully furnished with Louis XVI furniture and I am afraid for its safety.

Naturally, I don't want just anybody to rent the property, so I don't want to advertise in the newspaper. Will a real estate agent rent the property for me?

Also, where can I sell a few antiques? — Ms. M.F., Covington, Ky.

A. It's obvious that you recognize your own inability to handle the rental of property that is so close to you. You definitely need someone who can approach the job strictly as a business proposition.

A great many real estate agencies do indeed handle rental property — just look under "Real Estate" in your telephone book. You will, of course, want to reserve the right of final approval on any prospective tenant.

Getting someone to appraise and sell — or buy — your antiques for you shouldn't prove any problem, either. "Antique Dealers" are also listed in the phone book. Check out the ones that interest you with your local Better Business Bureau, however.

DEAR MR. CAMPBELL: I am interested in buying an acreage in a recreational area, but recently found out the people I've been negotiating with don't really own the land. It's actually owned by their 11-year-old son, who inherited it from an uncle. Am I going to get into any legal trouble if I buy the land through his parents? — G.G.L., Pittsburgh, Pa.

A. That's a possibility. To be on the safe side, you should get a lawyer.

The deal should be perfectly legal if the parents are also the boy's guardians. I assume they are, of course, but it's something that can't be left to guesswork.

DEAR MR. CAMPBELL: I had a piece of commercial real estate I owned listed with a broker to sell. Suddenly, though, the state condemned the property as a part of a renewal project and I was awarded $22,000 for it. I wasn't too unhappy because, frankly, I didn't think it was worth any more than that. The only trouble is that the broker is insisting on a commission on the sale. I don't get his point. — H.L., Hartford, Conn.

A. I don't either. A broker isn't entitled to a commission when a forced sale is involved. He's trying to bluff you.

DEAR MR. CAMPBELL: How come you use the phrases "real estate broker" or "real estate agent" when you are usually talking about a Realtor, a member of a local real estate board affiliated with the National Association of Real Estate Boards? Do you have something against the NAREB, with which I am proud to be associated? — N.O., Buffalo, N.Y.

A. No, not at all. I have great respect for the NAREB, but "Realtor" is a copyrighted terms and must be capitalized. A lot of people who set type for newspapers don't appreciate this and "Realtor" often appears with a small "r." And then the flood of outraged mail begins!

(How did I do in this mention of it?) (Register-Tribune Syndicate)

PARK PLACE PRICES START AT $99,990

Five models present Park Place features

Maintaining strong market interest are the large, family homes of Park Place located in Westminster at the corner of Newland Street and Edinger Avenue. Five "vignetted" models display the floorplans and features of the three and four bedroom homes priced from $99,990 to $126,990 for the currently available phase of 16 homes.

THE ONE and two story homes are designed for families seeking convenience to shopping, schools and recreation opportunities plus the traditional privacy associated with single-family home neighborhoods. Rear yards are completely fenced with back walls of concrete blocks and side fencing of wood.

Wood shake roofs shelter the fully-featured interiors which range from 1,758 to 2,577 square feet of living space. Individualized exteriors display expanses of wood siding and stucco, multi-roof lines, pop-out detailing, and recessed front entries.

High sloped ceilings distinguish many rooms, greenhouse windows are located in some kitchens, and each plan has a wood-burning fireplace in the living room or family room. A formal dining room, separate family room, breakfast nook, and wet bars are among the design features.

Plan 224 is a two-story arrangement with four bedrooms and an optional bonus room upstairs. The 2,507 square foot plan is ideal for families desiring the additional space for a recreation room, hobby center or extra bedroom. The living room, dining room, kitchen and family room are arranged for privacy zoning of areas, a concept of special appeal to families with teen-age children, according to Tamura.

ELEGANT master bedroom suites feature a private bath and dressing room. Some have a sitting room with a sloped ceiling, double basins in the master bath, and huge walk-in closets.

To see the premium homes of Park Place in Westminster, exit the San Diego Freeway at Magnolia Street, then north to Edinger. Turn left on Edinger and continue to the model complex and sales information center at the corner of Edinger and Newland. From the Garden Grove Freeway, exit at Magnolia and south to Edinger, then right on Edinger. The office is open daily from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m.

Shapell record income

BEVERLY HILLS — Shapell Industries Inc. (NYSE, PSE), diversified homebuilder and community developer, has announced record results in revenues and earnings for the second quarter and six month period ended June 30.

For the second quarter, the company reported gross revenues of $60,769,000, up 58 percent from $38,376,000 for the same period 1976. Net income advanced 92 percent to $5,356,000, or $1.77 per share, from second quarter 1976 income of $2,795,000, or 90 cents per share.

Six month gross revenues were up 80 percent to $106,476,000, as against $59,104,000 for the comparable period last year. Net income increased 211 percent to $8,807,000, or $2.91 per share, over 1976 profits of $4,175,000, or $1.34 per share.

Nathan Shapell, chairman and chief executive officer, said "These outstanding results during the first six months of 1977 reflect the delivery on schedule of new homes for which orders were received during the latter part of 1976 and 1977."

Long Beach Realtors Board forms tax reform task force

The Long Beach District Board of Realtors has announced the formation of a Tax Reform Task Force, which will be dedicated to the reduction of real property taxes in the Long Beach area and including Los Angeles County.

Chairman is Charles (Chuck) Anderson, president of C-21 The Land Office at 3300 E. Broadway.

REALTORS president, Ed Deal, made the appointment after many complaints came in from irate citizens about outrageous property taxes, as a result of the recent reassessment of property in several areas of Long Beach, in which property taxes jumped over one hundred percent above last year's assessment.

The committee is co-chaired by Bernie Specht, first vice president of the Long Beach District Board of Realtors and a Long Beach business man. Eight other Realtors from all areas of Long Beach comprise the total tax reduction group.

Plans of action are already being formulated and will be announced soon. Interested citizens are invited to submit their names to President Ed Deal at 3747 Long Beach Blvd. if they wish to serve on the committee, which will be limited to 20 members.

Efforts have been made for the past several years to limit taxes by tax initiative plans, none of which have qualified for the ballot. However, a new approach to the problem is being taken by the Committee which is carefully studying voting records of County Supervisors and others who are responsible for the run-away tax problem that has almost swamped the tax payers.

MORE DETAILS will be forthcoming as soon as the chairman feels they are complete enough for publication.

Deal says Realtors are dedicated to the protection of real property ownership rights and states flatly that the property owner should be entitled to a just and equitable tax that is both reasonable and within the capabilities of the owner to pay.

RE speakers announced

Speakers for this week's meetings of the Long Beach District Board of Realtors and the North Long Beach Real Estate Club have been announced.

Gulf Oil vice president Ralph L. Lewis Jr., will speak Tuesday in Long Beach after the 7:30 breakfast in the Queen's Way Restaurant. His subject: "Energy — Yesterday, Today and Tomorrow."

"What Solar Energy Can Do for the Public, Tax Benefits and Property Values" will be the theme of Solar Research's Allen Farrell's talk to the NLB at its 7:30 breakfast in the Park Pantry, 17511 Susana Road, Compton.

La Cuesta still has some sites

The grand opening of the first half of the final phase of 25 homes is currently in progress at La Cuesta Racquet Club townhouses, the highly successful Homes by Ayres development set on a high ocean breeze plateau at Beach Blvd. and Memphis, one block south of Adams, in Huntington Beach.

A limited number of view sites are still available in the 150 ocean-close neighborhood homes, according to Frank Rupp and Lee Taylor, sales directors. The Racquet Club first opened in 1975 and more than 150 homebuyers have purchased residences since.

Proximity to the coean, which eliminates the need for air conditioning, is the hallmark feature of the development, Rupp noted.

To see La Cuesta Racquet Club, exit the San Diego Freeway at Beach Blvd., drive south one block past Adams to Memphis and west to the development. From Pacific Coast Highway, travel north on Beach to Memphis and west to the models.

Units selling well at Shadow Run

Only four single family homes, one a professionally decorated model, are still available at Warmington Development's Shadow Run community in Santa Ana.

Carol Eichen, one of Southern California's leading decorators, has added tasteful touches to the model home.

PRICED FROM $68,500 Shadow Run homes range in size from 1,059 to 1,800 square feet of living space in two, three and four-bedroom arrangements, all with two baths.

From the opening a few months ago, the community gained rapid popularity by offering a good location in an established community and an array of features including vaulted ceilings, shag carpeting, decorative lighting fixtures and custom fireplaces.

Quality construction, a Warmington trademark for over 50 years, is seen in the brick and stone veneers, heavy shake roofs, use of tempered safety glass, smoke detectors, exterior wall and ceiling insulation, concrete driveways, weather stripping and preparation for air conditioning.

THE HOMES also meet consumer demands for totally equipped kitchens with dishwasher, continuous-cleaning, eye-level double ovens, ceramic tile countertops, disposal and hardwood cabinets.

TO REACH Shadow Run take the San Diego Freeway to Bristol or Harbor exit, drive north approximately 2½ miles to Edinger, then turn west (from Bristol) or east (from Harbor) to Raitt Avenue and then go south on Raitt one block.

The sales office is open daily from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m.

C-21 Rossmoor opens new office

Century 21 Rossmoor Realty, 3662 Katella Ave., Los Alamitos, Jack Ayers, broker, announces the opening of another office — Century 21 Ayers Realty, 3542 Cerritos Ave., Los Alamitos.

Michale Drale will be the manager there and Wayne Bryant manager of the Rossmoor office at 11135 Los Alamitos Blvd., Los Alamitos.

Rams blocked out, 22-17

By Rich Roberts
Staff Writer

Who's the favorite of the fans, the man they came to see? N-a-m-a-t-h spells instant history.

Joe Willie made his debut with the Rams at the Coliseum Saturday night, and as he ran onto the field—before he had even called a play—he was given a standing ovation by most of the 55,168 in attendance.

"I didn't see them standing," Namath said,"but I heard the noise. It did give me a good feeling."

It didn't seem to matter that his entrance came in the third quarter of the first practice game and the Rams already trailed the Minnesota Vikings, 16-7, on their way to a 22-17 defeat with deja vous vibrations.

The Rams had come from 16-0 down to lead, 17-16, after rookie Vince Ferragamo directed a 74-yard touchdown drive in the fourth quarter. But Viking cornerback Nate Allen, who blocked two kicks in last December's National Conference title game at Bloomington, did 'em in again.

Gerald Vaught, a rookie from Mississippi State, dropped back to punt from the Minnesota 43-yard line with 1:35 to play—a successful first effort was aborted by a penalty—when Dennis Harrah bounced the snap, and by the time Vaught could kick it Allen was upon him.

In Minnesota, Allen blocked Tom Dempsey's field goal try and Bobby Bryant returned it 90 yards. This time Allen did the honors himself. He scooped it up at the Ram 23 and was home free.

Up to that point, it would have been an uplifting win for the Rams, who have suffered regularly in opposition with the Vikings. Now they can regard it as just another meaningless summer exercise, lest their sanity escape them.

The focus, then, falls on the quarterbacks, who fought a standoff if comparisons are valid when both sides are substituting freely—although Viking coach Bud Grant futilly rushed in his first-string line trying to stop the Rams' go-ahead touchdowen.

Pat Haden got his shot in the first half—Namath will play the opening 30 minutes against Philadelphia next Saturday night—and ran 32 offensive plays for a net of 164 yards, completing 6 of 12 passes for 104 yards, including a 36-yard scoring bomb to Willie Miller, but also throwing an interception that led to Minnesota's second TD.

Namath, playing only the third quarter, ran 16 plays, producing 61 yards, while completing 3 of 4 passes for 34 yards.

"I felt pretty good with it," Namath said. "But I made a blunder that stopped one drive. I had Dwight Scales open and missed him."

Haden said, "I threw a poor pass for the interception.

Haden also blamed himself for a poor handoff before John Cappelletti's fumble which Wright recovered to set up Fran Tarkenton's 8-yard touchdown pass to tight end Stu Voigt, although it appeared that Cappelletti was more at fault. In fact, for an awful moment, it appeared Haden would have to make the tackle, but Jim Bertelsen dragged Wright down from behind.

"The quarterback is two-thirds responsible for the handoff," Haden said."John never had it."

If Namath or Haden don't think they can handle the job, then how about Ferragamo? He completed only 3 of 9 passes for 20 yards but kept his troops organized for the longest drive of the night en route to Rod Phillips' 7-yard charge off right tackle, plus Ian Sunter's placekick for a 17-16 lead with 5:05 remaining.

"Coach (Chuck) Knox said to go with what felt comfortable," Ferragamo said.

So he sent running backs Jim Jodat and Wendell Tyler hammering away at the Vikings' defense which to the end included a gooodly number of the old familiar faces.

Tyler and Jodat may be only a couple of ther NFL's boys of summer, since the Rams were operating without three of their veteran running backs—Lawrence McCutcheon, Cullen Bryant and later Rob Scribner, who took a helmet in the thigh.

They also were missing holdouts Harold Jackson, Rich Saul, Tom Mack, Jack Reynolds and Charles Young, and linebacker Rick Kay continued to rest a sensitive knee while offensive tackle Doug France played only two plays

'Go with the bomb, Pat'

Newest Ram quarterback Joe Namath offers veteran's advice to starter Pat Haden during first-half of Saturday's game with Minnesota. Haden ran offense first half and Namath third quarter, but Vikings pulled out last-minute, 22-17 exhibition victory at Coliseum.

Robby's advice starting to pay off for Baylor

By Tracy Ringolsby
Staff Writer

As long as Frank Robinson keeps on talking, Don Baylor is going to listen and opposing pitchers are going to suffer.

"Every at bat I talk with Frank," Baylor said of Robinson, who was named Angel hitting coach when Dave Garcia became manager July 10. "He really stays in the game and has an unreal ability for figuring out how pitchers are going to try and set up hitters."

Angel of the day

DON BAYLOR had a three-run home run, singled and scored another run in 9-5 win over Baltimore.

Try as they might, pitchers have been having their problems setting up Baylor lately.

Hitting under .220 most of the season, the Angels' $1.6 million free agent has raised his average to .238 and has driven in 17 runs in his last 13 games, hammering out six home runs during that span.

The latest home run, which also produced the three latest RBIs, came in the third inning Saturday night as Baylor sent the Angels on their way to a 9-5 win over Baltimore.

It was the fourth Angel win in five games, left them with a 51-54 record and 11½ games out of first place,

Ken Brett went seven innings plus to win his fourth in a row. Despite the fact Brett was credited with giving up five earned runs, he pitched an excellent game as far as Garcia was concerned.

He gave up one run in the second inning, when the Orioles loaded the bases with nobody out, and then shut Baltimore off until the eighth.

In the eighth, Dave Skaggs and Elliott Maddox singled and Mark Belanger walked before Ken Singleton hit a grand slam home run to send Brett to the showers and bring on Dyar Miller to pitch the final two innings.

"There were just too many long innings," Garcia said. "Not only did Ken get a little tired but he stiffened up sitting on the bench waiting for our half of the inning to get over. He was throwing so good up until the eighth and we were ahead by a comfortable margin (9-1 before Singleton's blast) so I decided to let him stay in for awhile."

Between the second and eighth innings, the Orioles managed to get one runner on base in each inning, but never got anyone past first as Brett walked only one and gave up four hits, three of which came with two outs.

"It was a good game for a couple of hours, but then..." said Brett, who is now 4-4 with the Angels and 10-8 overall. "Everything turned out just fine."

What made things so wonderful

Has key hit again as Phils win, 1-0

Sizemore haunts the Dodgers

By Gordon Verrell
Staff Writer

PHILADELPHIA—Teddy Sizemore stood right there in his sweaty Philadelphia Phillies T-shirt after Saturday night's game and swore on a stack of autographed pictures that, no, he didn't take any special delight in beating his old team, the Dodgers.

Not much.

It was Sizemore's dramatic single with two out in the ninth inning that snapped a scoreless tie and gave the high-flying Phillies a 1-0 victory over the Dodgers, just as his run-scoring single the night before produced the game-winning RBI in a game the Phils eventually won, 8-3.

"The first time the Dodgers traded me, after my second year with them, yeah, I did get jacked up when I played against them," he admitted. "Maybe too much. But not anymore. Really, I don't think about beating the Dodgers anymore than I do anyone else."

Dodger of Day

REGGIE SMITH doubled and singled in 1-0 loss to Phillies.

The win was the Phillies' 26th in their last 40 games and it kept them a half-game in front of the Cubs in the National League East.

Burt Hooton deserved better. Second in the N.L. with a 2.49 ERA and without much batting support of late, he had restricted the Phillies to four hits before the fatal ninth.

But the Dodgers, who now have dropped three games in a row, managed nothing against Philadelphia's Jim Kaat and Gene Garber, only three times getting a runner as far as second—and no one beyond that.

Greg Luzinski, who hadn't gotten the ball out of the infield in three previous tries against Hooton, singled to open the ninth. A stolen base, an intentional walk and two outs later, the 32-year-old Sizemore appeared at the plate, runners at first and third.

The Dodgers had the option of walking Sizemore, something they did without hesitation in the seventh inning, but they declined.

"No, we did not consider walking him there and getting a lefthanded pinch hitter," explained manager Tommy Lasorda.

So, Sizemore drilled Hooton's first pitch down the leftfield line and the game was over.

"I was guessing," Sizemore said moments later. "Hooton is a good pitcher with good stuff. He doesn't walk guys, he makes you beat him with base hits. . like we did tonight."

In less than a summer, Sizemore has become a team leader here, surprising perhaps since he's taking the place of the popular and talented Dave Cash who preferred the good life—and money—of Montreal to that of Philadelphia.

Carew .383 hitter but no coverboy

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. (AP)—Minnesota's Rod Carew said Saturday he doesn't care if he ever appears on the cover of baseball's leading weekly publication again.

"Hell with The Sporting News," said Carew following the Twins' 6-5 victory over Cleveland. "They want Larry Hisle and me to pose for a cover story and I think that either one of us are good enough on our own merits."

"Where were they (The Sporting News) when I was hitting .500 during the month of June," said Carew, whose .383 batting average is the best in baseball. "I don't need them."

The Twins' first baseman was mad when teammate Butch Wynegar, who was then locked in a long slump, was the subject of a cover story in early July while Carew was hitting over .400.

Hisle, who continues to lead the American League with 87 runs batted in despite sitting out the last week with a sprained ankle, wasn't bothered by Carew's decision.

"People can do whatever they want to," said Hisle. "I've learned that it's part of life."

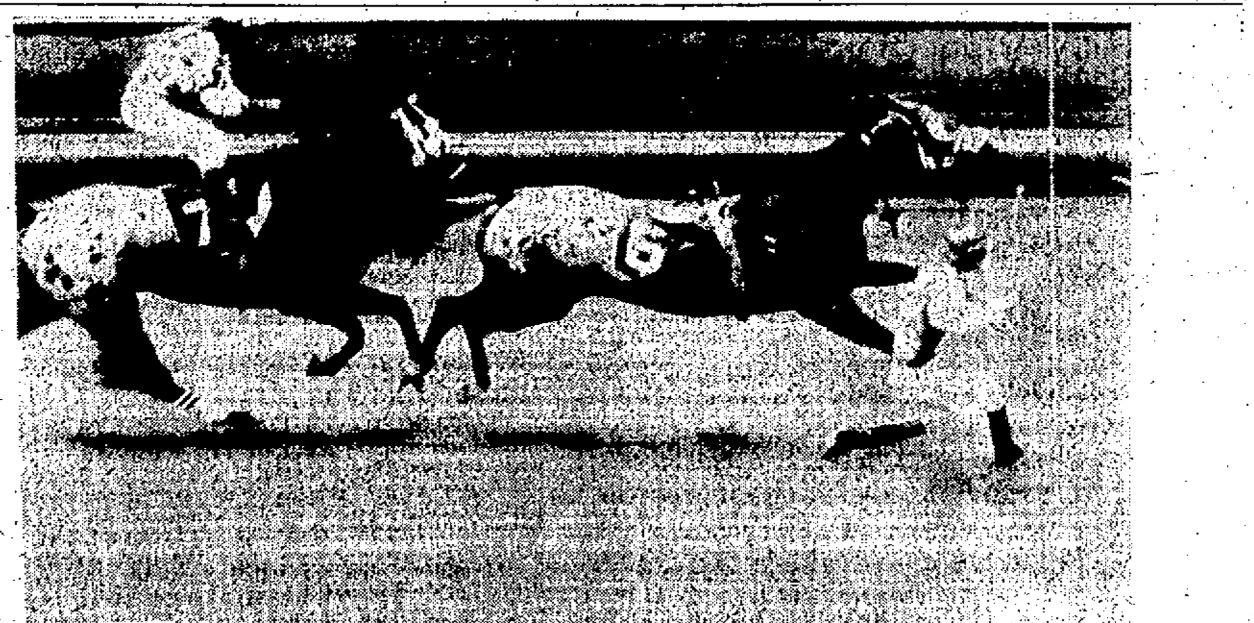
Hisle has never appeared on the cover of The Sporting News, a weekly tabloid devoted mostly to baseball coverage.

The 31-year-old Carew, whose 11-year major league career has been dotted with emotional outbursts, had earlier agreed to be on hand with Hisle Saturday morning to have the color picture taken for the publication.

When the photographer arrived, Carew said he had changed his mind.

"I have the right to change my mind," he explained later. "I don't have to explain my reasons to you guys. I don't tell you how to write your stories."

Carew, who has been beseiged in recent months by the press while he flirted with the .400 batting mark, has been testy on at least two other occasions this season. He attempted to resist talking with local reporters during Minnesota's first home series of the year in April and his uncooperative manner during a three-game Twins series at Kansas City in May also infuriated several Missouri newsmen.



Jockeying for position

Jockey R.G. Bentley appears to have hoofed it home in front of his mount Luna Bonita by a scant whip or boot in a race at River Downs in Cincinnati Saturday. Actually, Bentley fell off his mount when the horse became flustered over something and ducked just before the finish line, unseating her rider. For obvious reasons, the horse was disqualified and placed last.

DODGERS LOSE—

"I've just tried to be consistent, day in and day out," he said. "I'm not a Dave Cash. I'm not going to get 200 hits a year but I am going to give 'em good defense.

"Anyway, the first time I was traded (in 1971 from the Dodgers to the Cardinals) I had to fill some pretty big shoes then, too. Dick Allen's."

He returned to the Dodgers last season, in a trade for Willie Crawford, and through Walter Alston's last season he quietly accepted his role as back-up to Dave Lopes.

But, deep down, he knew he could play regularly, someplace, and when the Phillies lost Cash in the free agent goings-on he had a home.

"The Dodgers were great about it," Sizemore said of the deal that sent him to Philadelphia and catcher John Oates to Southern California.

THE Phillies were good about it, too. They rewarded Sizemore with a five-year contract.

"He's a fiery little guy, with a lot of red-ass in him," is the way Danny Ozark, the Phillies' manager and onetime Dodger coach, speaks of Sizemore. "He usually finds some way to beat you."

The Dodgers looked like they might have found a way to beat Kaat, whom they edged last week in Dodger Stadium, 2-1, hitting him hard, early and often—but right at somebody.

They squandered a double and a single in the first inning and a single and an unusual obstruction call in the third inning when they left two runners on base.

So, it came down to Sizemore and the critical ninth inning.

"There was a time I really wanted to beat the Dodgers," said Sizemore. "Now, they're just like anybody else."

DODGER DOPE: Phillies' shortstop Larry Bowa, on teammate Greg (The Bull) Luzinski: "If he's not the MVP right now, I don't know who is? I don't care what George Foster's done. Anyway, the Reds are 13 or 14 games out. Look at the hits Greg has in the seventh, eighth and ninth innings. It's easy to hit home runs when the score is 8-1, but not so easy to do what he does for us. I don't know where we would be without him in the lineup."...Reggie Smith has hit safely in six games in a row, collecting at least two hits in each game....Don Sutton, winless since July 4, makes his sixth bid for his 11th win today when he opposes the Phils' Steve Carlton in the final game of the series and the road trip (Channel 11, 10:35 a.m.)....Bill Russell's nine-game hitting streak was halted. He was deprived of an infield hit in the third inning when it was ruled that Kaat had obstructed with the runner and was charged with an error....Rookie Kevin Pasley started behind the plate....Rick Monday was back on the bench after his first start in three weeks. He said he was stiff....Steve Yeager may catch today...Monday night's game with the Reds in Dodger Stadium will begin at 5:40 p.m.

Signal Hill latest to pull ISC surprise

A pinch-hit home run by Mike Liebeck and Eric Chiffer's two-run single rallied Signal Hill to a surprising 4-3 victory over the Lakewood Barons in the feature game of the ISC State softball tournament Saturday night at Joe Rodgers Field.

The Barons had held a 3-1 lead going into the last of the seventh. Liebeck led off the inning with a homer while a walk to Jerry Huss and single by Jerry Leininger preceded Chiffer's game-winning hit.

In another game, Bob Aguilar hit his third home run of the tourney as the Lakewood Jets eliminated the Long Beach Post Office, 6-0.

The 14-team tournament has already seen three of the top four seeded teams — the Jets, Barons and Santa Ana, suffer one loss. Vista, the other pre-tourney favorite, plays its first game today.

Morgan rips up Pirates; Cubs ruin Jones' return

Combined News Services

Joe Morgan contends he is still bothered by eye trouble, but you'd have a hard time convincing the Pittsburgh Pirates.

"I should be wearing a contact lens in my right eye. But I can't get used to it," said Morgan, who led Cincinnati to an 8-3 nationally-televised victory over Pittsburgh Saturday.

Morgan, who was the National League's Most Valuable Player last season for the second year in a row, drilled three hits and drove in four runs to help Tom Seaver win his first game in three weeks.

Morgan said he can't wait for weekend games.

"I'm always happy to see Saturday and Sunday come along. I can see the ball so much better," said the Reds' All-Star second baseman after slamming his 16th homer of the year, a two-run blast. "In the daytime I look like the Joe Morgan of old."

He said he has decided to abandon any more attempts to wear the contact lense. "I'll have to make the adjustment in the off-season," he said.

Morgan saw his performance as a shot in the arm for the sagging Reds, who had lost nine out of 10 games to Pittsburgh this year.

"George Foster has been carrying us all by himself," Morgan said of the Reds' slugging sensation who leads the majors with 38 home runs. "It's time for the rest of us to start helping out."

Seaver, plagued by the flu for two weeks, pronounced himself physically fit after his route-going, eight-hit performance.

Pete Rose drilled a bases loaded double to key a four-run second-inning outburst and Johnny Bench belted his 26th homer, a solo shot in the third, as the Reds posted only their eighth victory in their last 28 games.

Now 54-54, the Reds gained a game on the Dodgers and trail by 12½ games in the National League West.

Seaver limited Pittsburgh to just one hit over the first four innings, but was tagged for consecutive solo homers by Al Oliver and

NATIONAL

Bobby Tolan. Bill Robinson homered in the ninth.

Seaver struck out eight and walked one while winning his fourth game in nine starts since joining the Reds June 15th.

While Morgan is doing his best to maintain his form of a year ago, 1976 Cy Young award winner Randy Jones was battered around Saturday by the Chicago Cubs.

Jones, who has missed much of the season with injuries and had been on the disabled list since June 19, gave up eight runs and eight hits in 3 innings as San Diego lost at Chicago, 10-5.

The Cubs, who dropped out of first place in the NL East Friday, remained one-half game behind Philadelphia.

Third place St. Louis lost a chance to gain ground in the East, losing the second game of a doubleheader at Houston, 4-1, after the Cardinals had won the opener, 3-1.

In other games, Atlanta edged Montreal, 3-1, and San Francisco beat New York for the first time in five games at Shea Stadium this season, 7-3.

Jerry Morales drove in four runs with three doubles to power the Cubs.

One of the doubles came in a big six-run, fourth inning when the Cubs sent 11 men to the plate off Jones.

It was the first time since May 27 the Cubs had begun a game no in first place.

Manager Herman Franks remained philisophical.

"Play today, play tomorrow. Falling out of first place. What does it mean?" shrugged the Cub skipper. "They've done this all year — lose one or two, then win tomorrow."

Rookie Tom Dixon hurled a five-hitter for his first major league victory and Cesar Cedeno hit two home runs to drive in all four Astro runs in the second game.

In the opener, Bob Forsch (14-5 and Butch Metzger combined on a five-hitter.

A sixth-inning single by Mike Tyson who stole second and scored on Lou Brock's single broke a scoreless tie.

Willie McCovey and Marc Hill doubled home two runs apiece and Darrell Evans and Jack Clark added solo home runs to spark the Giants.

Phil Niekro (11-13) struck out 1 and outdueled Steve Rogers (12-10 in Atlanta where Rowland Office had three hits for the Braves.

Tale of division leaders: Bosox win, Chisox don't

Combined News Services

As was the case with Fred Lynn and Jim Rice in 1975, a rookie may provide the Boston Red Sox with the margin of victory in the American League East Division race.

His name is Don Aase, and he recorded his third win in as many major league appearances, 2-1 over the bottom-of-the-barrel Oakland A's Saturday afternoon.

The Red Sox thus surged to their ninth win in succession and swelled their lead to two and a half games over Baltimore, which lost to the Angels. Third-place New York, now five out, stumbled again in Seattle, 9-2.

The 22-year-old righthander, a graduate of Savanna High in Anaheim, pitched seven innings, failing to go the distance for the first time since his July 27 promotion to Boston. Crack reliever Bill Campbell made sure that Oakland dropped its eighth in a row by posting his 18th save of the season.

As for Lynn and Rice, they haven't exactly faded from sight. They combined for the winning run in the fifth as Lynn tripled and Rice, rapidly developing into the top run-producing threat in the A.L., singled him home.

After Oakland went ahead 1-0 on Manny Sanguillen's second-inning single, Butch Hobson tagged loser Pablo Torrealba (3-3) for an RBI ace, producing a 1-1 deadlock in the third.

While the sizzling Sox were maintaining their advantage at one and a half games, the other Sox, the White type from Chicago, saw their West Division advantage shaved to a similar size.

It happened at Kansas City, where red-hot George Brett smashed another home run to key the Rouals 6-3 win, they're twelfth win in a row at Royals Stadium.

Standings-wise, the Sox setback allowed second-place Minnesota, a 6-5 victor over Cleveland, to close within a length and a half of the top.

The Royals, humiliated last weekend in Chicago when the then-hot Sox took three of four, are now playing as if they plan to retain the title they gained last year. They trail by just 2½.

Brett connected off reliever Dave Hamilton's first pitch, overcoming a 3-1 Chicago advantgage and marking his seventh homer since July 27.

Starter Wilbur Wood ran into trouble in the stretch inning when Fred Patek singled and Bob Heise walked. Hamilton relieved, but instead of a save, he picked up his fourth loss in six decisions.

The White Sox, who have dropped six of seven, exploded for three runs in the first on Oscar Gamble's two-run double and Jim Spencer's run-producing single.

Brett led off the Royals half of the inning with a triple and scored when shortstop Tim Nordbrook mishandled Hal McRae's grounder.

Seattle socked it to the Yanks behind Ruppert Jones' inside-the-park homer, the first ever in the Kingdome. Mariners Lee Stanton, Bill Stein and Steve Braun also hit four-baggers.

Loser Wayne Garland uncorked a wild pitch with two out in the bottom of the ninth, allowing pinch runner Jerry Terrell to score the winning run for the resurgent Twins.

It was Garland's 13th loss and possibly the low water mark of his disastrous first season with Cleveland, which signed him to a 10-year, $2.3 million contract following last winter's re-entry draft.

Doyle Alexander, another free agent pitcher, also had a rocky outing. The Texas righthander couldn't hold a 4-0, first-inning advantage and lost, 6-5, to Detroit when Ron LeFlore crashed a seventh-inning homer into the upper deck at Tiger Stadium.

LeFlore had doubled leading off the first, extending his hitting streak to 13 games. The win went to Milt Wilcox, 3-0 since being salvaged from Evansville last month.

Toronto has prevailed only four times in its last 15 games, but all have been against Milwaukee. The Blue Jays posted their fourth triumph over the Brewers in a week, 5-3, as Doug Ault had a home run among his three hits.

Cuevas takes Gray out in 2nd round

World Boxing Association welterweight champion Jose Pipino Cuevas made short work of challenger Clyde Gray Saturday night at the Olympic Auditorium, rocking the Canadian in the first round then finishing him off with powerful combinations midway through the second round.

Cuevas, the division's youngest champion ever at 19, was the aggressor from the beginning, and looked as if he might knock Gray out in the opening round. The 30-year-old Gray fought back gamely, but the young champion's speed and power were more than the Canadian could deal with.

The knockout, which came at 1:26 of the second round, marks the third successful title defense for Cuevas, who took the title from Angel Espada last summer.

The triumph was the 24th for the champion from Mexico City, who has lost five fights. The knockout was the 19th for Cuevas.

Gray, a 10-year ring veteran, now has a 56-6-1 record. This was his third and probably last shot at the welterweight title.

Gray, the British Commonwealth champion, had been whipped by Espada in his last title try.

Cuevas, a quiet, deeply-religious young man, became a relentless aggressor from the opening bell against Gray.

Landing quick combinations early in the first round, he buckled Gray's knees with a jolting straight left. Gray staggered, but managed to clutch the champion.

Gray bounced back to score with a couple of good rights early in the second round, but Cuevas caught him squarely with a left uppercut and a few seconds later, Gray fell forward to the canvas.

Cuevas' last loss had come in Los Angeles June 2, 1976 as he dropped a split decision to Andy Price.

But Cuevas, a 5-foot-8½, 148-pounder, came back later in the summer to surprise the boxing world by stopping Espada in two rounds to win the title.

Cuevas got $40,000 plus television money that could equal that sum for the title defense. Gray received $12,500.

In a preliminary bout, Jose Palacios scored a split decision over Armando Muniz in a 10-round welterweight match. Muniz was the No. 3 contender and had been guaranteed a title shot but that chance to fight Cuevas will now probably go to Palacios, who is the former welterweight champion of Mexico.

Feels guilty over Sherry dismissal

Grich shaping up for spring of '78

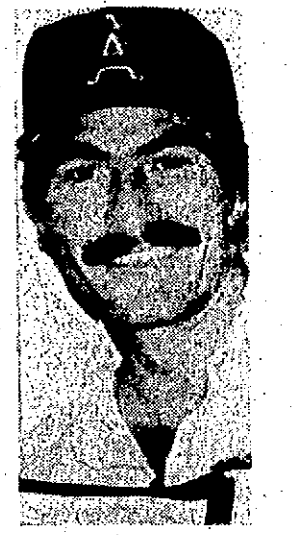
Let's hear about the life of a wealthy, 28-year-old, born-again bachelor who lives in a high-rise, high-priced condominium overlooking Belmont Shore and Naples, one of the beautiful places to live in the world?

"I get up about 9:30, fix myself some breakfast, make a few phone calls, take care of some business, take a walk on the beach about noon. I walk all the way around the bay down to the end of the peninsula, then back.

"Then when I come back I take a swim in the pool for about 20 laps. By then I'm tired. I'll come up and lie on the couch, watch TV or read. I'll have dinner, maybe watch a little more TV, then take another swim. That's it."

Lest your heart bleed for Bobby Grich, consider first that he walks on the beach because he cannot run, but the sand is good for his back, which the surgeons had a go at a month ago. Shortly after most of a lumbar disc was removed from Grich's back, Harry Dalton removed Norm Sherry as manager of the Angels.

The incidents, Grich believes, are directly related.



BOBBY GRICH
Wait 'til next year

THE ONETIME Wilson High superprep arrived back home from Baltimore last spring as one of three free agents for whom Gene Autry mortgaged the old corral. Grich's share was said to exceed $1.5 million for five years, but you can toss out the first one already.

"I feel bad that Mr. Autry can't realize the sort of return he could have realized if it wasn't for this injury," says Grich, who went down in flames June 8 after hitting a 13th-inning homer to beat Toronto.

"I also feel bad for Norm Sherry, because if I could have been strong from the beginning, including spring training, the whole season would have been a different story—and I think Norm Sherry would still be the manager."

Grich was in and out with his bad back through much of spring training, but the ailment goes back farther than that.

"It's been going on for 10 years," he says, moving stiffly about his comfortably furnished abode.

"I remember my second-to-last football game at Wilson. We were playing Redlands in a CIF playoff game at Mt. San Antonio College. I took the ball on an end sweep and a linebacker blindsided me. He hit me high, I went over and he came down right down on top of me—really smashed me.

RICH ROBERTS

"I got up pretty shaken and my back had a pain right away. I thought, 'Aw, it'll be okay.'"

IT STILL isn't okay, although Grich probably would still be playing if he hadn't tried to move an air conditioner into his place last February, shortly before spring training.

"I went to Dooley's and bought an air conditioner," Bobby says. "A glass man was refitting my louvered windows and he wanted to put the glass around the air conditioner, so I said I'd run down and get it out of my truck.

"I opened the tailgate, picked it up and carried it into the elevator, set it down, came up, picked it up again, carried it down the hall and put it in the bedroom. When I got up, I had a pain right away in my back."

It was Feb. 14—"I remember," Grich says, "Valentine's Day"—and he went on to a light workout at Anaheim Stadium hoping to shake it off. But later, when he couldn't participate in the routines of spring, he was placed in traction. For awhile, then, all was well.

> "This is the first summer I haven't played baseball since I was 8 years old. Money isn't all that big a deal. I miss the fun and the excitement, the crowd and the cheers. You can't put a price on that."

GRICH HAD played shortstop through his baseball career until arriving in Baltimore, where the Golden Gloved Mark Belanger resides. So Bobby was moved to second base, which is one reason he was happy to come to the Angels.

"I had my own doubts about playing shortstop after five years at second," Bobby says, "but I convinced myself and a lot of other people that I can."

But in Grich's absence, the Angels have replaced him with Rance Mulliniks, a 21-year-old rookie who, by coincidence, shares the same birthdate of Jan. 15. The Angels seem to be pleased with the job Mulliniks is doing and are pondering where to use Grich next season.

"If they want me to move, I'll move," Bobby says, "but I'm not going to move willingly. He (Mulliniks) has done a good job so far, and that's great. It strengthens our club. But I came out here to play shortstop, and that's what I want to do.

"I prefer short over everything. I really enjoyed the first two months out there. April and May I was in heaven. It's a very exciting position. It's more exciting than second base.

"I played a third of a season—50 games—and made only four errors. I was making some good plays in the hole. If you project that out, a season with 12 errors is the kind of season Mark Belanger had every year he won the Golden Glove."

GRICH ALSO left with a .243 batting average, 19 points below his career mark.

"My average was at .243 the day I told 'em I couldn't play anymore. But I was hitting .270 before the road trip when I was experiencing so much pain and went something like 1-for-20."

Perhaps Robert Anthony Grich's greatest problem is that he has too much time to ponder what might have been this season. The neat scar in the center of his lower back is a reminder.

"This is the first summer I haven't played baseball since I was 8 years old," he says.

The money is of little consolation.

"Money isn't that big a deal. I miss the fun and the excitement, the crowd and the cheers. You can't put a price on that."

So he whiles away the hours walking on the beach, stopping to revive old friendships or to strike up new ones, then returning to his pad to swim, watch TV, heft a few weights in the spare room he has converted into an athletic room, or tentatively swing a weighted bat in front of the full-length mirror, waiting for the spring of '78 to arrive.

He has already written off '77 as his season of re-adjustment.

"It's just one of those things that happened," he says. "Nothing I can do about it now . . . except not lift any more air conditioners."

Rams' Malavasi comes to defense of defense

While there is some intra-team fraternizing, it is generally known that a defensive football player squanders little love on a member of the offense and the other way around.

The defensive people regard the offensive guys as the pampered brats of society. The offensive crowd says the defensive clods are all crazy.

Well, you can sympathize with both sides.

The quarterbacks and wide receivers get all the ink and do all the perfume commercials and become restaurateurs.

The defense gets to do beer commercials and even then they are shown squeezing the can or somebody's head. They are portrayed as weirdos with no pleasures other than breaking arms and legs. Like the offense says, crazy.

RAY MALAVASI has been around the defense for 21 years as a teacher of the art in the colleges and the pros. He spends these afternoons on the greensward at Cal State Fullerton where he serves as defensive coordinator for the Los Angeles Rams.

For that much time around alleged insanity, Malavasi seems to have retained most of his marbles, although you may question that fact watching him at practice. He stands right in the middle of the defensive line where he can study his creatures and when he gets knocked on his Bermuda shorts, he brushes himself off and walks back in.

Ray's wife no doubt thinks her guy works from an easy chair. You see, Malavasi had open heart surgery five weeks before the opening of camp.

Actually, Malavasi says the offense exaggerates, that the defensive guys are really no more than eccentric.

"Take Merlin Olsen," Ray says, "He may have been as good a defensive lineman as ever lived, but he sure as hell wasn't crazy.

"LIKE ALL GREAT football players, Merlin was highly intelligent. A great player has to be intelligent first and dependable second."

At that, Malavasi admits it may be easier to learn the art of defense.

"It is easier for an individual to learn his job," Ray says, "but more difficult to coordinate the entire defense. One guy making a mistake can screw up the whole thing."

This leads to many defensive players becoming overrated by the witnesses in the grandstand and press box, particularly linebackers who are responsible for what little glamor the defense enjoys.

"Defensive blunders are difficult to spot," Malavasi explains. "I have to study the films to find them. Therefore, a defensive player can make one or two good plays and get all the raves even though he was lousy on all the other plays all afternoon."

One might expect to hear whimpering from a defensive coach inasmuch as the cry in professional football is to open up the game to the thrills of offensive maneuvers. Obviously, the only way to do this is to take something away from the defense.

"THEY TOOK AWAY our 'ax' block where we could cut down a receiver going downfield," Malavasi says. "The latest thing to go is the head slap. We can no longer whack a guy on the side of the head and ring his bell.

"But I think we will be just fine. The rules apply to both sides. They won't win you any games."

George Allen, a self-confessed Sunday madman, has devoted his life to defense and once said there is nothing on the face of this earth, including sex, as important as defense. If you have it, Allen preaches, you can win at any game.

Malavasi is asked if this theory is universal among defensive coaches.

"Well," Ray replies, "the offense has got to score some points if you are going to win. But they can't score points until we get them the ball."

Then there is the ancient saying that the best defense is a good offense. Or is it the other way around?

From the quotebook

- JOHNNY CARSON, explaining how the Rams have been doing their part to conserve water: "Joe Namath put a brick in his knee."

- BOB LEMON, on a player with an unusually active personal life: "He's a free-spirited man. He plays almost as well on the field as he does off."

- AMY ALCOTT, on the Pocono Manor Golf Club in Pennsylvania: "It's a very good, sporty course. It would be a very good course to have an affair on. You get into the trees here and nobody will find you."

Working for good of game

Brad Park hockey players' player

By Gary Ellis
Staff Writer

Brad Park is nearly as busy defending hockey as he is, say, protecting Gerry Cheevers.

Defending his Boston Bruin teammate and goalie, Cheevers, is his job and Park ranks as one of a handful of premier defensemen in the National Hockey League.

Defending his livelihood, hockey, is not a necessity, it's nearly a passion.

Unlike other professional sports, where the dollar and agents may eventually bring ruin, or at best, radical change, Park and his fellow NHL Player Association members are working with the owners in an attempt to bring balance and equity to the league.

Clarence Campbell, longtime but now retired NHL commissioner, went on record several weeks ago saying, "Thank God for Alan Eagleson (the Players' Association boss)." Would Pete Rozelle, or Bowie Kuhn, say as much for the president of their players' associations?

THERE ARE several problems facing Park and his peers—lack of television in the United States, high salaries, lower receipts, sports violence and the Montreal Canadiens.

The Canadiens banished Boston in four games during the Stanley Cup championships.

"It took me about two weeks to recover," remembered Park.

The magnificance of the Canadien sweep might be best explained by the Bruins' run for the Cup.

Boston knocked off the Kings in six games and embarrassed Philadelphia in four. In turn, Montreal overwhelmed Boston.

"We had a week off before the Philadelphia series," said Park. "We were really high for them. But our rookies had never been in a Cup finals and it took them a while to adjust. In the fourth game (overtime), our team knew what hockey was about."

Unfortunately, most of the other NHL clubs learned from the Canadiens what hockey was about. You easily could spell hockey M-O-N-T-R-E-A-L C-A-N-A-D-I-E-N-S.

Montreal easily skated through the season, hardly breaking into a sweat. And if you listen to the hockey experts, Montreal will be getting better, not worse.

"The Players Association met in Bermuda recently," noted Park. "We talked about that. Everyone hates to see one team be so dominant. But anything can happen in sports."

Violence is much discussed—in hockey and across the nation. Players are being prosecuted for violence in the arena, and now television networks are exploiting hockey violence.

"The Deadliest Season was as much fiction as I've ever seen in hockey," said Park, who struggled for the proper words to express his intense dislike for the television show. "There's too much friendliness built in hockey to ever do a thing like that."

(The television show depicted a defenseman intentionally killing his best friend, and rival, in an attempt to add "muscle" to his team.)

Park lives by example. Recently, after playing for two hours in the Dewars Cup Sports Celebrity tennis championships in Las Vegas, Park returned to the courts with Rod Gilbert (New York Rangers) and Rogie Vachon (Kings) in a "grudge match."

The match was filled with chit-chat and abounding with laughs.

"I feel like a giant playing with you guys," Park laughed. He's 6-foot-0; Vachon 5-7; Gilbert 5-9.

"I asked Gratton (Gilles, goalie for the N.Y. Rangers) for his summer address," yelled Gilbert. "Know where he's staying? In Malaga, Spain." That tidbit is worth a couple of gasps from the participants.

Then Cheevers casually strolls onto the court.

"How you doin'," the surprised players say.

"I just dropped in to see you," responded Cheevers. More friendly talk; more friendship. It appears Park was not kidding when he speaks of NHL camaraderie.

Then it's time for more hockey talk.

"The players are worried," said Park. "We're trying to hash things out with the owners. The owners want to improve (weak) teams. We want more player movement.

"Salaries are on the way down. A lot of kids graduating from the juniors have gotten a lot of money in the past. Now, maybe the top five or so will get money. The rest must prove themselves."

The meeting in Bermuda also resulted in several other player proposals.

"One recommendation was an unbalanced schedule. We want more games in our division. I think the owners agree. We're prepared to meet with the owners any time to improve hockey in the United States.

"We want to get a television contract. And we have to do more promoting, similar to football and baseball.

"I know our association is in favor of solidifying the sport. We want to make it a great spectator sport."

Now if Park and the association can figure out how to stop Montreal, they may have something going.

Another view of lovable Howard

MIAMI (AP) — His detractors might think that even a few hours a week on television is too much. But the wife who has spent 33 years with Howard Cosell years says he's a considerate, loving man who gets a raw deal from the press.

"Most people would be fortunate to be married to a Howard Cosell," said wife Emmy.

She'll concede that seven years of "intensified athletics" as wife of a controversial network sports commentator has left her fed up with the world of sport.

"If I never see another sporting event in my life other than tennis I will be perfectly content," she said in a telephone interview from her oceanfront home in Westhampton, on New York's Long Island.

Her 56-year-old husband has beeen known to drive common sports fans and critics alike to exasperation with his abrasive opinions and extended explanations of sports trivia.

And Mrs. Cosell, whose given name of Mary gave way to "Emmy" long ago, concedes "there are people who can't stand his presentation.

"But I've seen too much love on the road to believe what I read."

Readers responding to recent newspaper polls in Washington and Miami have ranked Cosell as their least favorite sportscaster.

"It's manipulated by the press," said Mrs. Cosell. "He's not their idea of what a sportscaster should be and they've been fighting with him since the beginning. He doesn't consider himself a sportscaster anyway; he considers himself a journalist."

Cosell is a sentimental, high-strung man, one who "doesn't know how to relax," said his wife.

She said the Cosell viewed by millions on network television is about the same man at home, where he "still has as many opinions. I mean I hear as much as anybody hears who is watching it on television. What you see is what you get. That's Howard Cosell."

Of their enduring marriage, she said: "Ten times a day, every day of our married life, he tells me that he loves me.

"If you have a husband who constantly cares and, even when you're middle-aged and getting a little portly, tells you how darling you look and means it, somehow you survive it."

Waters blocks two punts, Cowboys crush Chargers

Associated Press

DALLAS—Dallas safety Charlie Waters blocked two San Diego punts Saturday night and the alert Cowboys cashed both of them in for touchdowns to destroy the dazed Chargers, 34-14, in a National Football League exhibition.

Waters, who blocked two punts in the NFL playoffs against the Rams last year, vicitimized San Diego's Jeff West twice in the first period. Jay Saldi pounced on the bounding ball in the end zone for the first Cowboy score with less than four minutes elapsed in the game.

Eight minutes later the jittery West tried to get away another punt that the flying Waters again batted down. Benny Barnes picked up the ball on the Charger 22 and romped for the touchdown as Waters jumped to his feet to throw the clearing block.

Butch Johnson shagged a 38-yard scoring bomb from Roger Staubach and quarterback Danny White nailed Drew Pearson with 10-yard and six-yard scoring strikes to complete the Cowboy offensive onslaught.

Tony Dorsett, the million-dollar rookie making his NFL debut, sparkled in the third quarter much to the delight of a Texas Stadium crowd of 59,504. Dorsett rushed seven times for 26 yards and caught a 15-yard pass before he went out in the third quarter with a twisted left knee.

The Chargers, 6-8 last year, started Clint (The Mad Bomber) Longley, who was traded away from the Cowboys last year after two fistfights with Staubach.

The Dallas defense, led by Harvey Martin with two sacks, smothered Longley, who managed only four completions in 18 attempts for 46 yards.

The frustrated Chargers put together a snappy drive late in the second period and former Cowboy Toni Fritsch attempted a chipshot 30-yard field goal. However, the snap was juggled and his line drive effort went under the crossbar.

The exhibition game on a sauna-like 96-degree night also featured the NFL debut of former Heisman Trophy winner Johnny Rodgers from Nebraska who spent two years in the Canadian Football League. Rodgers flashed his talents at wide receiver and with less than three minutes remaining returned a punt for 68 yards and a Charger touchdown.

Atlanta, 3-0

ST. LOUIS—Veteran Nick Mike-Mayer booted a 37-yard field goal in the fourth quarter giving Atlanta a 3-0 victory over St. Louis. Mike-Mayer's kick climaxed only the second march deep into Cardinal territory.

Quarterback Kim McQuilken whipped a six-yard pass to Mike Esposito to launch the drive following a 50-yard field goal try by St. Louis' Jim Bakken which fell short.

Running backs Woody Thompson and Esposito then exchanged carries while advancing the ball to the Cards' 20 before Mike-Mayer's kick split the uprights with 10:35 remaining.

Bakken missed a field goal try from Atlanta's 23 in the final minute of the opening half and Mike-Mayer missed from the St. Louis 42 on a subsequent drive.

Pittsburgh, 28-24

PITTSBURGH—Terry Bradshaw fired three touchdown passes to lead Pittsburgh to a 28-24 victory over Buffalo.

The Steelers trailed 17-14 midway in the fourth quarter when Bradshaw scrambled and lofted a long pass to John Stallwosth, who made a leaping catch at the Bills' 7-yard line as two defenders collided, then glided into the end zone for a 62-yard scoring play.

The first play of the next Steelers series, Bradshaw flicked a short toss to wide receiver Ernie Pough who twisted free and sprinted to the end zone in a play that covered 66 yards.

Miami, 13-7

TAMPA—Veteran quarterback Bob Griese passed for a touchdown and Mike Michel, a rookie from Stanford, kicked two field goals as Miami defeated upstate rival Tampa, 13-7.

Michel's first field goal, a 45-yard boot, came in the opening quarter. Griese's touchdownn pass, of 45 yards to wide receiver Duriel Harris, was in the second quarter. Michel put the game out of reach with a 43-yarder with four minutes left in the game.

The victory started the former Super Bowl champion Dolphins back on the right foot as Miami tries to improve last year's 6-8 record, the first losing mark under Coach Don Shula.

Tampa missed three field goal attempts and a chance to break a 17-game losing streak which dates back to last year's pre-season when the then first-year Bucs beat Atlanta, 17-3, for their only success so far in the NFL.

After George Hunt missed his third field goal, Tampa finally got on the board with 2:21 left in the third quarter. The Bucs drove 80 yards for the touchdown, propelled by a 50-yard pass by from quarterback Mike Boryla to wide receiver Morris Owens.

Fullback Ed Williams, who gained 16 yards on a key carry to the one-yard line, made the final plunge for the score.

New England, 19-3

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J.—John Smith kicked four field goals and rookie Raymond Clayborn returned the second half kickoff 86 yards for a touchdown, leading New England to a 19-3 victory over the New York Giants. Smith, a left-footed, soccer-style kicker from England, connected on boots of 35, 32, 32 and 39 yards, moving the Patriots to a 12-0 halftime lead.

Smith, who kicked 15-of-25 last season for New England, also missed on a 27-yard attempt in the second period. Then Clayborn, New England's No. 1 draft choice from Texas, put the game's first touchdown on the board in the opening moments of the second half. He took Joe Danelo's kickoff at the 14-yard line, shot up the middle of the field before cutting to the left side and going the distance for the score.

The Giants' only points came when Danelo connected on a 36-yard field goal midway through the third period.

Kansas City, 17-0

PONTIAC, Mich.—Detroit held Kansas City for seven plays inside the 5-yard line in the third quarter shortly after Dexter Bussey had run eight yards for the game's first touchdown as the Lions blanked the Chiefs, 17-0.

Detroit's goal-line stand came after Kansas City rookie Mark Bailey scampered 52 yards to the Lions' 5.

On third down, after the Chiefs had been pushed back to the 7 on an illegal procedure penalty, quarterback Mike Nott was trapped attempting to pass but he shoveled the ball to Ed Beckman, who was brought down behind the line of scrimmage.

Lions safety Lem Barney was called for a personal foul after the play, giving K.C. a first down at the Detroit 3. The Chiefs attempted four running plays, but each time were stopped short of the goal line.

Benny Ricardo booted a 35-yard field goal to give the Lions a 3-0 lead in the second quarter. Detriot closed out the scoring when Andy Bolton dove over from the 2-yard line late in the fourth quarter.

Green Bay, 23-20

GREEN BAY—Chester Marcol kicked two 45-yard field goals in the last 1:14, including the game-winner with one second to play, rallying Green Bay to a 23-20 victory over Cincinnati.

Marcol's decisive kick came after the Packers got the ball back when defensive tackle Mike McCoy stripped the ball from rookie quarterback Tom Duniven at the Bengals' 38-yard line with 29 seconds left.

Lynn Dickey passed for four yards to John Brockington and for five yards to Willie Harrell to set up the winning kick.

The Bengals took a 20-17 lead late in the third quarter on 60-yard scoring pass from John Reaves to Billy Brooks. But after Cincinnati interceptions blunted two scoring threats in the fourth quarter, the Packers took over at the Bengal 34 with 3:29 to play.

They marched to position for Marcol's first 45-yarder behind an eight-yard run by Eric Torgelson.

Marcol kicked a 49-yard field goal in the first period, off set when Chris Bahr kicked a 27-yarder for the Bengals on the first play of the second quarter. Dickey, completing 11 of 14 passes for 147 yards, threw scoring strikes of 20 yards to Jessie Green and four yards to Rick McGeorge as the Packers led 17-10 at halftime.

Bengal rookie Mike Voight scored from two yards out midway in the second quarter.

New Orleans, 20-14

CHICAGO—Archie Manning and Bobby Scott each hurled a touchdown pass to offset a 92-yard kickoff return by Tommy Reamon as New Orleans posted a 20-14 victory over Chicago.

Manning, who set out all of the 1976 season with injuries, guided the Saints to a 13-0 halftime lead. Manning hit Tinker Owens with a 32-yard touchdown pass and his passes also set up 41-and 23-yard field goals by Richie Szaro.

Scott completed a 12-yard touchdown pass to Henry Childs in the fourth quarter for what proved to be the winning score in the Saints' 1977 debut.

Immediately after Childs' touchdown pass, Reamon took the ensuing kickoff and raced 92 yards for a touchdown, less than three minutes into the final quarter.

Manning played only in the first half and completed 9 of 14 passes for 170 yards. A 19-yard Manning pass to Tony Galbraith set up Szaro's 41-yard field goal and a 54-yard pass to Larry Burton set up the 23-yard field goal.

The Bears got on the board late in the third quarter on a 13-yard touchdown pass from Bob Avellini to Steve Schubert.

It was no mere exhibition for the happy Vikes

By Al Larson
Staff Writer

If you think Minnesota's win over the Rams was a mere exhibition exercise Saturday night, forget it.

"Don't call these exhibition games. They're pre-season games," Viking coach Bud Grant snapped to a small cluster of newsmen following Minnesota's come-from-behind, 22-17 triumph at the Coliseum.

"We used to play exhibition games in Des Moines (Iowa), Butte (Montana) and other little towns. But now we're playing for $10 and $12 a crack before 60,000 people. I'm sure the Rams knew that too," Grant said while flashing a rare smile in a noisy locker room.

In case you've forgotten, the last time Grant and Co. were seen in Southern California was following Minnesota's Super Bowl loss to the Oakland Raiders. He was scowling that January afternoon.

The only person with a bigger grin on his face was Nate Allen, whose blocked punt and 23-yard return for the game-winning touchdown touched off a wild sideline scene for the Vikings.

"WE HAD A stunt on between Sammy (White) and me," the nine-year veteran cornerback said. "Sammy probably could have blocked it too," Allen acknowledged.

Asked if it took a special talent to pick up a blocked punt or field goal on the dead run, Allen said, "We practice it every day. Luckily the ball took a good hop tonight. I had to wait for it to come up."

With the Rams leading 17-16 and only 1:27 remaining, Minnesota put a fierce rush on rookie punter Gerald Vaught. The 5-11 Allen proved the Rams' nemesis again. Or had you forgotten last year when Allen not only blocked a field goal in the Rams' 10-10 overtime tie in league play but also blocked the field goal in the depressing playoff loss which Bobby Bryant picked up and ran 90 yards for a TD.

The 29-year-old Allen was quick to point out last year was "water under the bridge."

"I don't want to look back to last year. It brings back bad memories," referring to the Vikings' Super Bowl loss to Oakland at the Rose Bowl.

"All we're doing now is looking to get back into the Super Bowl this year," said Allen.

FRAN TARKENTON, who only played the first quarter when the Vikings built a 16-0 lead, said, "I expected to play only a quarter or so tonight. I know how Bud (Grant) thinks. He didn't have a thing to say to me."

Questioned about Joe Namath's crowd-pleasing performance for the Rams, Tarkenton said, "I thought he threw well. It was a great move for him to go to L.A. He knows he has a chance to win. He was in a no-win situation in New York."

Grant was asked to comment on coach Chuck Knox announcing his quarterback intentions early in the week to play Pat Haden for the first half, Namath the third quarter and rookie Vince Ferragamo the final 15 minutes.

"I don't like to be stuck like that," the Viking coach siad. "I like to play all my cards. Sure it hypoes the gate. Joe Willie is the quarterback the fans come to see. But fortunately I don't have to declare who and how long I'm going to play my quarterbacks," Grant said.

Pressed if he had forgotten last January's Super Bowl debacle, Grant said, "We had a great year. You shouldn't write us off because we lost the last game. Don Shula said it best, 'Nothing is final about winning and nothing is fatal about losing.'" before aggravating a knee injury that will be checked today for the possibility of surgery.

The Vikings weren't quite themselves, either. Tarkenton played only a quarter and star running back Chuck Foreman never got into the game after reporting to camp late.

Knox said, "We had a lot of penalties tonight, and generally I was pleased with the way our team came back.

"Obviously, our kicking game still isn't what we want it to be."

ANGELS—

was that Brett had plenty of support from people other than Baylor.

Bobby Bonds started the scoring with a solo home run, his 25th of the year, in the first inning, giving him home runs in four succesive games and seven home runs and 20 runs batted in during the last 17 games.

Ron Jackson added a two-run shot in the fifth to chase former Angel Rudy May, who started for the Orioles and suffered his 10th loss in 22 decisions.

The Angels added a run in the sixth on a double by Gil Flores, who also had two singles, and two in the seventh on run-scoring singles by Dave Chalk and Mario Guerrero.

Baylor also ahd a single in the seventh, scoring the final Angel run on Guerrero's hit, which made him especially happy.

"I've been getting hits lately but it has just been one a game and that doesn't help get the average up," said Baylor, who has become a favorite of the Anaheim Stadium boo birds.

"Bobby (Bonds) and I were talking about that before the game. The key to putting something together is getting that second and third hit."

The key for the Angels putting something together is for them to continue to play like they have the past six days. Garcia sees no reason for them to stop.

He is especially pleased that the Angels bounced back after being swept last week by Boston, 6-5, 3-0 and 1-0, to beat New York two out of three games and win two in a row from Baltimore.

"After a series like last weekend, it either breaks a team or builds its confidence," said the always positive Garcia. "I'm sure it built our confidence.

"Our guys look at a series like that and realize three key hits, one in each game, and we could have swept the team that is in first place in the East. I think that gave them reason to fight back and play like they have."

But the fact the remains the Angels, who are 12-12 under Garcia, are three games under .500 for the year and not only do they trail first place Chicago by 11½, but they are five and a half games behind fourth-place Texas.

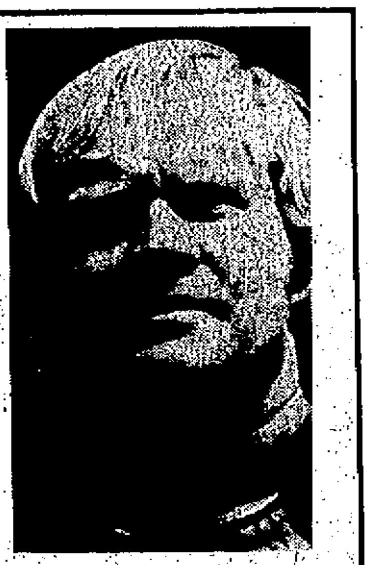
TOM WATSON
Pebble Beach a favorite



JACK NICKLAUS
'Gave him best shot'

Jack eyeing PGA duel with Watson

PEBBLE BEACH (AP)—Jack Nicklaus grinned ruefully.

"I gave him my best shot," he said, "and I'm getting tired of having my best shot not be good enough."

In both the Masters and the British Open, Tom Watson absorbed the best that could be offered by the game's greatest player, absorbed it and responded with something better.

At Augusta, their finish produced one of the greatest of all the legendary Masters. At Turnberry, Scotland, their dramatic, head-to-head confrontation may have been the greatest golf tournament of all time.

Watson, heir apparent to Nicklaus' long-time role as the premier figure in the game, won both those match-ups.

Now they move into Act III.

It's the PGA national championship, the last of the year's Big Four events that will be played this week on the drought-stricken Pebble Beach Golf Links.

For Watson, easily the outstanding player in the game this season, there's the opportunity to become the first man since Ben Hogan in 1953 to win three of the Big Four in a single season.

FOR NICKLAUS, winner of three titles, second on the money list and playing about as well as he ever has, there's the opportunity to interrupt Watson's string of successes and acquire a record-matching fifth PGA title.

There's a matter of pride involved for the history-conscious Nicklaus. He hasn't won in the Big Four events—the ones around which he's built his career—since the 1975 PGA. On only one other occasion has he gone that long without victory in the Masters, U.S. and British Opens and the PGA.

"It's been a pretty good season," Nicklaus said. "I've won three times, had a good Masters, a good British Open. Tom just had better ones. Actually, I've played pretty darn good most of the season."

"Obviously, it's been a tremendous, fantastic season," said Watson, at 27 Nicklaus' junior by 10 years. "I don't think I'll be able to fully appreciate it until the end of the year when I can sit back and reflect a little."

WHILE THERE is no assurance they'll again hook up in a two-man duel, each has a certain affinity for Pebble Beach. Nicklaus has won three Crosbys and the 1972 U.S. Open on that course. He's always ranked it high among his most favorite in the world.

Watson won the first of his six 1977 titles there, in the Crosby. As a student at Stanford, he used to "sneak down on weekends and play Pebble. It's always been one of my favorites."

But it's a different course this time. It's been afflicted by the drought and resultant water-rationing that has disturbed all of Northern California. Only greens and tees have been watered. In the fairways, the parched earth has actually split and cracked. Greens are in good shape, however, and there's deep, tangled rough around the greens.

The course, however, will play much shorter than it's listed 6,806 yards. The dry fairways will provide unusual roll and the pros can expect to be playing their second shots from places they've never seen before.

Although the focus will be on Nicklaus and Watson, neither of them is particularly pointing for the other.

"If I'm playing well, and he's playing well, then there's the possibility that something will develop on Sunday," Nicklaus said. "But I won't be concerned with Tom, or anyone else, until then."

"FOR THE first 3½ rounds, you're playing the course, playing yourself," Watson said. "Then, if you're in a situation like Jack and I were at Turnberry, obviously you're playing the other guy."

But there are 139 others in the field, literally dozens of whom are capable of taking the title.

Among the prime contenders are Ray Floyd and cross-handed putter Bruce Lietzke, both two-time winners this year; defending champion Dave Stockton; always dangerous Tom Weiskopf and Gary Player, and Hubert Green, who interrupted the Nicklaus-Watson confrontations to win the U.S. Open.

Then there's Lee Trevino, who capped his comeback with a victory in the Canadian Open; Hale Irwin; Johnny Miller; 59-shooter Al Geiberger; Ben Crenshaw, trying to fight his way out of a deep, troubling slump, and, of course, Arnold Palmer still seeking the one major title that has eluded him.

ABC-TV will provide national television coverage of portions of the final two rounds Saturday and Sunday.

Report FCC investigating tennis misrepresentation

NEW YORK (AP) — The Federal Communications Commission has begun an investigation into the Heavyweight Championship of Tennis series, focusing on whether the CBS television network deliberately misrepresented the fourth match, FCC sources have told the New York Times.

The Times, reporting in its Sunday editions, said the decision to investigate followed FCC dissatisfaction with a 61 page report on the series. The report was released by CBS last month.

The March 5, 1977 match between Jimmy Connors and Ilie Nastase was billed as "winner-take-all," although it was later learned that Connors was guaranteed $500,000, win or lose, and Nastase, who lost, received $150,000. Viewers of the match were twice told during the broadcast that the match was winner-take-all.

"If it was a hard-nose attempt to get an audience that would be a deliberate misrepresentation," an FCC source is quoted as saying. "If it was just an innocent thing, that's different."

Swedish yacht upsets Gretel II

NEWPORT, R.I. (AP) — Sverige, the computer-designed Swedish 12-meter yacht, upset Australia's Gretel II, and Australia won her fourth and fifth consecutive races Saturday in the elimination series for America's Cup challengers.

Australia's victories came at the expense of Sverige in the morning series and France in the afternoon. The wooden-hulled Gretel II, Australia's 1970 challenger, beat France before lining up against Sverige in the afternoon over a 13.5-mile triangular course in 10-12 knot winds out of the west-southwest.

Australia topped Sverige by 1 minutes, 23 seconds, and beat Baron Marcel Bich's France by 1:45. After beating France by 1:43 in the morning in winds of about eight knots, Gretel II trailed from start to finish in losing to Sverige by 46 seconds.

Pelle Pettersson, at the helm of Sverige, beat Gretel II by 10 seconds at the start and now has won the start in all five of his races. Sverige showed uncharacteristic strength on the first windward leg, extending her margin to 1:16. At the ensuing marks, she led by 1:21, 1:34, 1:51 and 1:48.

Australia, with Noel Robins at the helm, lost the start to France by two seconds but led by 23 at the first mark. The race remained close through the first three legs with Australia leading by 46 seconds, but by the fourth windward mark, Australia had opened up a 1:34 lead.

Gretel II now has a record of 3-2 in the round-robin series. Sverige has won twice and lost three times, and France has yet to win in five races.

Longshot ($28) Del Mar winner

DEL MAR—Proud Birdie, the longest shot in the race, finished strong to win the $27,050 Cabrillo Handicap by a head over favored Copper Mel at Del Mar Saturday.

Proud Birdie, ridden by Gene St. Leon and carrying 114 pounds, went off at 13-to-1 and paid $28, $8.40 and $3.40. Copper Mel, with Laffit Pincay up, returned $3.40 and $2.40. Confederate Yankee, with Chuck Baltazar aboard, paid $3 to show.

Proud Birdie was timed in 1:57⅘ over the Crosby Course, which is 120 feet less than 1¼-miles.

Six horses competed in the handicap event for 3-year-olds and up. Legendario III was fourth, followed by Yu Wipi and Chil the Kite. Exact Duplicate was a late scratch.

Pincay, Don Pierce and Fernando Toro rode two winners apiece Saturday.

Pincay is the meet's leading jockey with 16 victories to 13 for runnerup Darrel McHargue and 11 for Toro.

BAD N BIG, recent winner of Hollywood Park's Cinema Handicap over Preakness runnerup Iron Constitution, will pack a career-high 124 pounds against six rival three-year-olds in today's La Jolla Stakes.

With seven starters, the winner of the mile turf course event, which serves as the final major prelude to the enriched Del Mar Derby on Aug. 21, will earn a check for $19,100.

Out of the mony only once in his two seasons of racing, the consistent Bad n Big will be making his Del Mar debut under jockey Laffit Pincay. Under conditions of the race, Bad n Big, who also captured the El Dorado Handicap on the dirt this summer, will have to spot his rivals 10 pounds each, 124 to 114.

Divisional winners of the Oceanside Handicap on opening day, Pay the Toll and Stone Point, return under new pilots for the La Jolla. Leading rider Darrell McHargue will sub for Fernando Toro on Pay the Toll, while Marco Castaneda replaces Bill Shoemaker on Stone Point.

Trainer Charles Whittingham also entered Pikehall and Yack Yack, runnerup in the Oceanside. Castaneda is also listed on Pikehall, which will race coupled in the wagering with Stone Point, while Jerry Lambert has the call on Yack Yack.

Completing the field for the 37th running of the La Jolla are Windy Dancer with Chuck Baltazar, and Incredibly Lucky with Frank Olivares. The former will be making his stakes debut, while Incredibly Lucky finished third behind Pay the Toll and Pikehall in the first division of the Oceanside.

He's a Pleasure is just that at Alamitos

He's a Pleasure, narrow winner over Shadow Moon Walk in the Vandy's Flash Stakes in his last start, repeated the effort in the $15,000 Sophomore Invitational Handicap at Los Alamitos Race Course Saturday night, running the 400 yards in an excellent 19.88 seconds to establish a stakes record.

With Robert Adair in the saddle, He's a Pleasure was away from the gate cleanly but was outrun through the early stages by Truly Terrific and Native Way while racing on even terms with archrival Shadow Moon Walk.

With less than 50 yards to go, Shadow Moon Walk had the edge but He's a Pleasure responded to Adair's vigorous handling and proved narrowly best on the wire in a head-bobbing photo finish.

Shadwo Moon Walk's runnerup performance kept a string alive that has seen the Top Moon offspring finish first or second in nine consecutive races since the start of the year.

Finishing third was Truly Terrific.

He's a Pleasure returned $7.80 for the win.

DANNY CARDOZA, the defending national quarter horse riding champion, became only the second jockey in Los Alamitos history to win 100 races in a single meeting Saturday night when Hidden Talent carried him to the winner's circle in the sixth race.

Still in quest of Robert Adair's single-season record of 113 victories established during a 79-night meeting in 1971, Cardoza became the first rider to reach the century plateau during a single meeting since 1972.

Adair, the all-time riding king at Los Alamitos with nearly 1,200 wins, put together a string of four consecutive years, from 1969 through 1972, during which he won 100-plus victories.

Cardoza, 27, posted a riding double Saturday night with a $7.60 win in the second race aboard Flying Chickette before clicking with Hidden Talent at $11.20.

Cardoza is 27 wins ahead of runnerup Kenneth Hart for the summer season which ends Aug. 17.

Winning the Whitney

Steve Cauthen rode Nearly on Time to a 4½-length win in the 50th running of the Whitney Handicap Saturday over a sloppy track at Saratoga. Forego finished last in the seven-horse field.

Cauthen wins Whitney; Forego last

SARATOGA SPRINGS, N.Y. (AP) —Nearly On Time, ridden by Steve Cauthen, won the 50th running of the Whitney Handicap Saturday at Saratoga as three-time Horse of the Year Forego finished last in the field of seven.

Longshot American History, ridden by Ruben Hernandez, was second, 4½ lengths behind the winner. Third, another 4¾ lengths back, was last year's Whitney winner, Dancing Gun, with Angel Cordero Jr. up.

Forego, ridden by Bill Shoemaker, carried top weight of 136 pounds—21 pounds more than any other horse and 33 more than the winner. The 7-year-old was 18 lengths behind Nearly On Time at the finish. He got away sixth, immediately began falling back and was never a factor.

Nearly On Time, the only 3-year-old in the field, led through the entire 1⅛ miles and was timed in 1:49⅖ over the sloppy track. The winner, lightweighted at 103, earned $49,545 and paid $8.40, $4.40 and $3.40. American History, the longest shot in the field at 12-1, returned $8.20 and $4.80. Dancing Gun paid $4.60.

The victory was Cauthen's 300th in New York this year, breaking Jorge Velasquez' New York record of 299 established last year.

"Mr. (Leroy) Jolley told me to go for the lead at the break and to keep him going," Cauthen said. "I had to push my horse a bit after the break because Cordero (on Dancing Gun) tried for the lead. But once we straightned out on the backstretch, I was able to take a little hold and he relaxed just fine ... He got a little tired near the end but by that time he had it won."

It was the third straight loss for Forego. He was second in the June 23 Brooklyn Handicap at Belmont, 11½ lengths behind Great Contractor with American History third. Before that he was second by a neck to Quiet Little Table in the July 4 Suburban at Belmont, with Nearly On Time third in that race.

Both of those were run on fast tracks. This one was a mess with the race run in a driving rainstorm. Seven other horses—including Quiet Little Table, Nalees Rialto, Wise Philip and Majestic Light—were scratched, some of them because of the dismal conditions.

"He ran well for the first quarter of a mile," Sheomaker said of Forego, "but he never did seem to get hold of the track. He was trying at all times, but I didn't try to punish him."

It was the first major stakes win for Nearly On Time. Prior to the Whitney he had won $85,423 this year in eight starts with two wins, two seconds (including the Florida Derby) and two thirds (including the Suburban).

ARLINGTON PARK — Regal Gal, a 9-1 shot, wore down Go On Dreaming late in the stretch to win the $113,900 Sheridan Handicap Saturday...Go On Dreaming finished second, 1¼ lengths behind in the 1¼-mile race for fillies and mares...Merry Lady III finished third before a crowd of 23,171 while Dottie's Doll, the 7-10 favorite, finished a distant fifth over the sloppy racetrack...Regal Gal, ridden by Early Fires, needed 2:06⅕ to negotiate the distance under 114 pounds. The winning time was far off the track record of 2:00⅗...The victory was the seventh career stakes triumph for Regal Gal...Regal Gal earned $68,340 and paid $20.80.

MONMOUTH—Affiliate lay back off the pace for six furlongs, then stormed along the rail to capture the 10th running of $100,000 Monmouth Invitational...The 3-year-old colt, carrying 117 pounds and ridden by Miguel Rivera, was well off the pace for much of the 1⅛-mile test. Rivera started Affiliate on his winning move at the 5-16ths pole and he held off longshot Don Sebastian by a length, with 6-5 favorite Iron Constitution another half-length back in third...The victory, worth $65,000, was Affiliate's first career stakes triumph. He paid $8.80.

CALDER—Heavily-favored Gallmore romped to a seven-length victory in the $22,800 Needles Stakes...Lappias finished second, one length ahead of Bif Rose...Fleet Gar was fourth in a field of seven 2-year-olds...The winner, ridden by Jesus Rodriguez, ran six furlongs in 1:11 and paid $3.20.

RIVER DOWNS — Heavy favorite In Rem, off at 1-5 odds, romped to a 2½-length victory in the $20,900 Kellogg Stakes to improve his bid as Ohio's top 2-year-old thoroughbred...The Ohio-bred gelding, originally purchased for $800, captured his fourth straight stakes victory and sixth triumph in a row. The winner went the six furlongs in 1:11⅕ and paid $2.40, the lowest payoff of the year at River Downs...Sweet Sand finished second, Held My Calls third.

Pendleton resumes public deer hunts

Even though fires are burning in many parts of California, Camp Pendleton officials are gambling on a general deer season for the public in September. It means that access to the U.S. Marine Corps Base for the purpose of deer hunting will be permitted for the first time since 1975 when hunting there was cancelled by a fire.

Nearly 100 hunter,s who had received permits from the base for the 1975 hunt, will be given first opportunity of hunting this year. Hunting periods will be limited to weekends in the September 24-Nov. 6 period.

Marine Corps officials have the names of all those who lost their chances to hunt in 1975 and have notified them. This is the equivalent of a contract between the Marine Corps and the hunters, and the Department of Fish and Game doesn't have anything to do with those old applications.

The DFG, however, will conduct a drawing of access permits for 150 or more hunters. To apply applicants must submit their names on postcards together with hunting license numbers and addresses. As many as, but not more than, two names may be included on one card. Hunters must be 16 years of age or older to classify. Applicants who send in more than one card or whose names appear on more than one card will be disqualified.

SEND ALL POSTCARDS to the Department of Fish and Game, License Office, Attn.: Camp Pendleton Access, 1416 Ninth St., Sacramento 95814. Deadline for entries in Sacramento is 5 p.m. Friday, Aug. 26. Cards will be drawn on Aug. 29 and winners will be notified by mail.

Prior to hunting each successful applicant will be required to appear at Camp Pendleton and pass a test on the Hunter Safety regulations. Additionally, the base charges a $5 access fee.

Paul L.V. Campo, director of the Natural Resources office at Camp Pendleton, says that deer on the base are in healthy condition, and he anticipates better hunting on the reservation than in other parts of San Diego County.

Drought and brush and forest fires notwithstanding, the early deer season is on in California. The season opened Saturday and will continue through Sunday, Sept. 18, with a limit of two bucks, forked horn or better. Shooting hours are from one-half hour before sunrise to one-half hour after sunset.

A late word from an official of the Los Padres National Forest at Santa Maria yesterday was that there are no new closures in that forest; camping will be allowed only at sites designated by the Forest Service. Also, campfires will be permitted only at the same places, and smoking is absolutely forbidden except at similar sites or in closed vehicles.

THERE IS A NEW MANAGER at Lake Cuyamaca. He is David Gautereaux, a native of San Diego, who is completing work on his master's degree in ecology at San Diego State University. He has done some previous work at Cuyamaca, and appears to be well suited for the job.

Private plants of trout, totaling 4,500 pounds, were made in the lake through July and plans are to stock more fish this month.

This might be an excellent place for granddads to take the youngsters who were promised "good fishing." Cuyamaca is at an elevation of 5,000 feet and 45 miles east of San Diego. It's about half-way between Highways 8 and 78 and can be reached by traveling south from Julian.

The Helix Irrigation District, which controls the lake, has promised to leave at least 100 surface acres of water in the lake the year 'round. The lake bed was dry for many years and then refilled.

Broodstock of Florida-strain black bass, bluegill, redear sunfish, channel catfish and trout have been planted in the lake. The lake's elevation keeps the water cool enough to support trout life through a summer when many lower lakes are too warm. In fact, lake officials boast that it is the only body of water in San Diego County where trout are planted the year 'round.

There is a store, boat-launching ramp, RV camping for self-contained vehicles only and rental boats. Adult fishing permits are $2.50.

THE ANNUAL "SAC DAY" for sportfishermen will be held Saturday, says Bill Nott, president of the Sportfishing Association of California. This is the day when all sportfishing landings from San Simeon to the Mexican border contribute their day's gross revenues, minus the cost of fuel and crews' wages, to the organization that is leading the battle to conserve and improve ocean sportfishing. Naturally, all landing operators hope for large turnouts of anglers so that their contributions may continue to keep SAC operating.

SAC Day on all sportfishing boats doesn't cost the individual angler a cent more than he would pay for a trip on any other day of the year. The money derived from SAC Day will enable the organization to continue its campaign to aid sportfishermen on all boats.

Twenty-four landings, starting at Morro Bay on the north and continuing to San Diego on the south are now affiliated with SAC. The organization has done much for the landings and, in turn, for the sportfishermen. Probably the constant fight to save anchovies for sportfishermen tops all other projects that SAC has undertaken.

SAC has been assisted in the anchovy fight by many of the game-fishing clubs such as the Southern California Tuna Club, Sportsman's Club of Long Beach, Long Beach Rod and Gun Club, Avalon Tuna Club and the Balboa Angling Club.

Adds another title

Judy Rankin had good reason to smile, holding up the trophy she won Saturday after capturing the European Women's Open by a healthy six strokes to push her 1977 earnings past the $100,000 mark.

Cards 64 to lead by two

Kratzert takes command

By Bob Green
Associated Press

WETHERSFIELD, Conn. — Even though he shot a 64, set a seasonal record for 54 holes, was 17 under par for the tournament and held a two-stroke lead, Bill Kratzert still could find fault with his performance in Saturday's third round of the $210,000 Sammy Davis Jr.-Greater Hartford Open Golf Tournament.

"I was a little too relaxed on those last two par fives," the tour sophomore said. "I just took it for granted I would birdie them."

He didn't.

But he dropped a dramatic, 50-foot birdie putt on the final hole—moments after the national television cameras had ended their coverage for the day — and stretched his lead to two shots over Lee Elder going into today's final round of the chase for a $42,000 first prize.

"It's kind of good to have them chasing me for a change," said Kratzert, who has yet to win an individual tour title in his brief career. "It seems like I'm always chasing the leaders. Now they can chase me."

Kratzert, wearing his trademark dark glasses despite the gray, gloomy skies that threatened thunderstorms, played his third consecutive round without a bogey and finished with a spectacular, seven-under-par 64.

His 54-hole total of 196 was the best this tournament has ever seen for three rounds and was four shots lower than the best previous 54-hole total posted on the tour this year.

Elder, playing in the same threesome with Kratzert, was only one stroke back of Kratzert when the national television cameras cut away, but failed to match Bill's heroics on the final hole and finished two behind at 198. He had a closing 67.

Curtis Strange, a 22-year-old rookie pro and a former national collegiate champion from Wake Forest, shot a 68 and was third at 199. Morris Hatalsky, with a 65, was at 200, equalling the best previous three-round total this year.

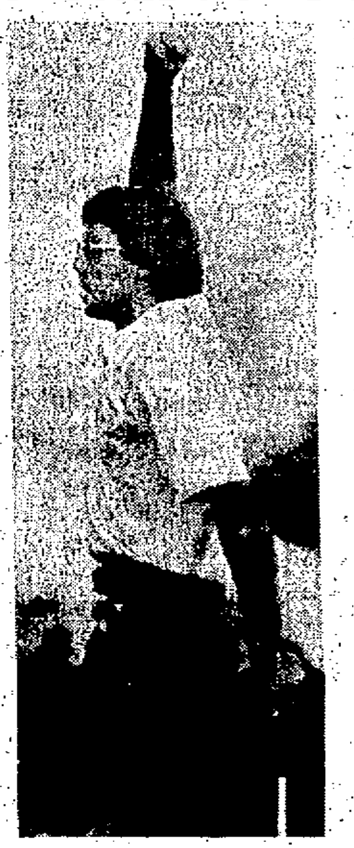
Second-round leader Victor Regalado hit one out of bounds on the second hole and never recovered. He finished with a 72 and was tied at 202 with U. S. Open champ Hubert Green and Terry Diehl. Green matched Kratzert's 64 as the best round of the day.

PGA champ Dave Stockton was 69-206, defending title-holder Rik Massengale 69-208 and Johnny Miller 70-209.

Kratzert, 25, who hooked up with Woody Blackburn to win the National Team championship as a rookie last season, has not made a bogey in the tournament.

His 50-footer found the cup just as a drizzling rain began to fall and his lead went to two.

"Everthing just fell into place this week," said Kratzert, who has had rounds of 66, 66 and 64. "I'm not hitting the ball any better. I'm just making the putts."



BILL Kratzert raises a clenched fist after sinking a 50-foot birdie putt on the 18th hole Saturday that moved the second-year PGA player into a two-stroke lead in the $210,000 Greater Hartford Open.

Champion loses twice, trails in horseshoe final

GREENVILLE, Ohio (AP). — Five-time world horseshoe pitching champion Earl Hohl of Ontario, Canada, suffered two defeats Saturday and fell out of the lead with a 19-3 record in the World Horseshoe Tournament.

Deadlocked in first place with 21-1 marks going into today's finals are defending titlist Carl Steinfeldt of Rochester, N.Y., and Glen Henton of Maquoketa, Iowa.

Rankin leaves no doubt she's the top golfer

SUNNINGDALE, England (AP) — Judy Rankin streaked away in heavy rain Saturday to win the European Women's Open golf title by six strokes and top $100,000 dollars in prize money for the second successive year.

Five birdies on Sunningdale's rain-lashed, 6,174-yard course gave the 32-year-old blonde from Midland, Tex., a final round of 70 and a four-round total of 281. She was four under par for the day and 15 under par for the tournament.

Rankin won a first prize of $15,000 and moved on to $105,248 for the season. In 1976 she became the first woman golfer to win $100,000 in one year.

Nancy Lopez, 20, of Roswell, N.M., playing in her second professional tournament, shot a 71 and finished second at 287. She earned $9,750.

Sally Little of South Africa was third with 289.

Rankin, in a pink pants suit and a wide-brimmed white hat to keep the rain off her spectacles, played steady golf and looked like a winner all day.

"THEY SAY I'm a foul-weather player, and I guess there's something in it," Rankin said.

"My golf is improving. My bad days are not as bad as they used to be and my good days are better. But I find it pretty hard to keep up with Tom Watson (this year's British Open winner)."

She previously won this title at the inaugural tournament in 1974.

Rankin began the final day one stroke ahead of Little and five ahead of Lopez.

The South African soon fell out of the running by making bogeys on three of the first six holes. Lopez came bravely through the bad weather and became Rankin's only real challenger.

But nothing could stop Rankin. At the 450-yard second hole she was 70 yards short with her second shot but chipped up and canned a 12-foot putt for a birdie.

At the third she got another birdie after planting a sand wedge to two feet from the pin.

She hit a five iron to eight feet and rolled in another putt for a birdie at the sixth. A four iron and a 12-foot putt earned another birdie at the eighth.

She reached the turn with a lead of seven strokes and the tournament was virtually over.

As the rain became heavier Lopez's golf got better. She knocked in a 10-foot putt for a birdie at the 15th. She got a bogey at the 16th after driving into a bunker, but came back with putts of 10 and 12 feet for pars at the last two holes.

Lopez finished with a nine-foot putt and a birdie at the last hole.

Little, who led by three strokes after two rounds, saw her chance at the title slip away on the outward nine. But she made three birdies on the way home and grabbed third place from Sandra Post, a Canadian who lives at Boynton Beach, Fla.

Exhausted Solomon no match for Alexander

NORTH CONWAY, N.H. (AP)—Fifth-seeded Harold Solomon, worn out by his victory Friday over No. 1 Jimmy Connors, was beaten, 6-4, 6-1, Saturday by 12th-seeded Australian John Alexander in the semifinals of a $125,000 international tennis tournament.

Alexander advanced to today's final against fourth-seeded Manuel Orantes of Spain, who wore down tired Eddie Dibbs, 6-3, 7-6, in the other semifinal.

In quarterfinal doubles play, Brian Gottfried and Raul Ramirez, the Wimbledon champions, defeated Orantes and John Newcombe, 6-4, 6-3.

Alexander served four aces in the match and generally was sharper than Solomon. He broke Solomon's service in the 10th game of the first set and from then on, he said, "it was easy."

Solomon said he was not sharp after the emotional, grueling 1-6, 6-4, 6-1 upset of Connors, "but that's no excuse. I had a lot of chances to win but I started serving badly for some reason and that was it."

Both Orantes and Dibbs, who had played lengthy matches Thurdsay, complained of Saturday's early match time and said it affected their game.

"I played badly and I was never in the match," Dibbs said, although he managed to come back and win four successive games in the second set after being down, 5-2.

Preakness fillies

Only four fillies have won the Preakness Stakes, the second leg of racing's Triple Crown. The last to do it was Nellie Morse back in 1924.

BIG TIPPERS WANTED!
Hi There? To all you wonderful people who have been asking yourself whatever happened to Bob Trubee? (Cheeseburger Bob, Bobbie Cheese or Mr. Pyramid). Well, I'm alive & well and working as a waiter at the TENDERLOIN RESTRAUNT 4363 Atlantic Ave. Long Beach. Why am I running an ad like this? Well, it's simple, I want a vacation. (I deserve it too.) I normally would never be able to save enough money to take the kind of trip, I would really like to, if you would like to be a big tipper, but cannot make it in, you can mail me your big tip & I'll mail you an IOU for my services as a waiter. Send the Big Tips or any fee you care to: BOB TRUBEE % THE TENDERLOIN 4363 Atlantic Ave. L.B. 90807. My special thanks to the owners Fred & Barbara Groth for letting me run this campaign to send me away. MAKE RESERVATIONS SOON 595-4306 SEE YOU SOON, LOVE BOB.

Lather over 'Soap'

British wonder what the fuss is all about

By Les Brown

© 1977 N.Y. Times News Service

LONDON — The furor in the United States over the forthcoming sex-absorbed television comedy "Soap" is viewed with some amusement by officials of British television, who have long considered the medium in America to be puritanical and, in general, "less adult" than their own.

They maintain that "Soap," with only verbal references to adultery, transvestism and pornography, would have no trouble getting on the air in Britain, where viewers periodically are exposed to nudity and four-letter words.

"It's not something that happens all the time here but only when the context is appropriate," explains Barrie Heads, managing director of international sales for Granada Television, one of Britain's major commercial independents.

'We're much more relaxed than America is about what may be shown or spoken on TV'

"On the whole, we're much more relaxed than America is about what may be shown or spoken on TV. A certain openness about sex is the fabric of English television."

The British Broadcasting Corp., which each year buys a number of programs that play on the American commercial networks, has rejected "Soap," at least for the time being. But this was done essentially for business reasons rather than from any concern about the content of the series, the company's executives say.

Aubrey Singer, controller (chief executive) of BBC-2, the newer of British public television's channels, said he doubted that "Soap" would cause a stir in England. "The sex is done by innuendo rather than straight on. The British might find a vicarious salaciousness in there that actually we're not used to. But no problem otherwise."

ABC-TV, the network that will be introducing "Soap" in September, has ordered some revisions in the first two episodes of the series to tone down some of its bolder aspects. Those are said to include the elimination of a scene of adulterers in bed, their musings about a slang word for fornication and a young girl's command to her lover, "Take your clothes off."

The cuts are being made in response to the condemnation of the series by several religious groups and to objections raised by a few ABC affiliates that have characterized the show as "a dirty joke."

Those in the United States who are apprehensive about "Soap" fear it will usher in a new era of permissiveness in television. The last program to extend the barriers was "All in the Family," which had been adapted from a popular British series, "Till Death Us Do Part." When it was introduced by CBS in 1970, "All in the Family" sparked a controversy not unlike that surrounding "Soap."

But, Heads of Granada points out that when "All in the Family" had its debut in England "the British people wondered what all the fuss was about in America. Our version was much more daring."

"We don't think in terms of permissiveness here," Singer said. "The issue is one of attitude and not of the absolutes of what we will allow. We assume that children are not watching after 9 p.m. and that we can do serious plays and documentaries. When the integrity of the program depends on a show of nudity or the use of profanity we leave it in."

CATHRYN DAMON is one of the stars of the controversial new comedy series "Soap," which ABC plans to introduce on its evening lineup in the fall.

Singer says he usually makes those decisions himself. This is in contrast to the American networks, which maintain large departments of standards and practices for the censorship of objectionable material.

In British commercial television, the ultimate arbiter of what is suitable for airing is the Independent Broadcasting Authority, an agency that might roughly be equated with the Federal Communications Commission in the United States.

Unlike the FCC, the IBA may make program decisions and on a number of occasions has ruled against the inclusion of certain scenes or lines of dialogue.

Many producers in England would like to see a loosening of the American standards to make more British programs acceptable in the United States. British programs frequently are subjected to cuts for the American market and sometimes are rejected for their sexual explicitness.

There is a citizens' movement in Britain to "clean up" sex in television, led by Mary Whitehouse who heads an organization known as the National Listeners and Viewers Association, but the country's television officials do not consider it to represent a sizable portion of the population.

Landon kids restricted in their TV viewing

By Bettelou Peterson
Knight-Ridder Newspapers

"My kids don't watch TV on school nights. Their school has a rule against it but I'd forbid it even if that weren't so. There are a few exceptions — 'National Geographics,' Cousteau specials, and I wanted them to see the Nixon-Frost interviews. I felt they could derive something important from those."

And, oh yes, the speaker's children do get to watch their dad's show, "Little House on the Prairie."

Michael Landon and wife Lynn have seven children — a his, hers and theirs family that ranges in age from 2 to 28. The five youngest, who live at home, follow Landon's strict TV rules, which include very little of the Saturday and Sunday shows TV aims at children.

He finds them an insult to a child's intelligence. "Kids are brighter than adults give them credit for," he said. "They need stimulation but I don't think they need to have meaningful entertainment all the time, either. There's nothing wrong with TV that's just fun. There isn't enough, though."

He believes that "kids should be shown decent people living and working together." Landon can do something about that as star, executive producer, writer and, often, director of NBC's "Little House on the Prairie."

If he has tried anything in the series' three seasons on the air, said Landon, it is to show a loving family. "But we get rapped because the Ingalls family members get along with each other, love each other and are kind to each other. I don't find that unbelievable as some critics have it. Fights don't happen in my house. If it happens in other homes, then something must be wrong."

In the beginning, Landon said, "The network said the show was 'too soft.' It didn't have enough action. I told them there's no other way to do it. When there are only nine people in town (Walnut Grove, the setting for the series), there's a limit to how often you can grab a guy's lapels and yell at him. The conflict has to be resolved without fights."

Except for the 1974 pilot movie, "Little House on the Prairie" rarely has used the Laura Ingalls Wilder books as a source for its dramas. Landon is accustomed to complaints from Wilder readers and has two answers.

"There is material for about half a season's shows in the books," he said. "And a lot of the material just isn't dramatic. There'll be a whole chapter on something like 'Laura sees a cricket.'

"We try to be faithful to the spirit of the books and we do pick up bits and pieces and amplify them."

This coming season, the fourth on the air, another Ingalls daughter, Grace, will be born. "If I was really going to tinker with the story, I'd make that a son. There are so many story directions in which we could move with a boy in the family. But the Ingalls had only girls," Landon said.

Later in the year, said Landon, the Ingalls family will move from Walnut Grove to DeSmet, S.D., as the actual Ingalls family did. "That gives us a chance to do some 'trek' stories and have a change in scenery," said Landon.

The season will end, he said, with a two-part drama also from the books. The oldest Ingalls daughter, Mary, will go blind. The handling of the story, said Landon, has to be entirely fictional. "There is just one line in one of the books, very matter of fact: 'We had a hard winter and Mary went blind.' Mrs. Wilder never mentions it again."

Landon hopes the drama to be found in those simple words can be used constructively. "We want to show how the family is affected and how Mary learns to cope with it."

There will be a new character and a new actor and that brought memories of a real-life drama for Landon. Victor French, who played the rollicking Mr. Edwards for two seasons, has a new ABC series of his own this fall, "Carter Country." A new character will be brought in to continue the friendly relationship of Edwards with Charles Ingalls (Landon).

Playing the part is a newcomer to acting but not to the spotlight. He is Merlin Olson, who retired last season after 15 years as the Los Angeles Rams' star defensive tackle.

"I didn't know Merlin until he came to the office to talk about the part," said Landon. "He did two tests for us. The first was bad but we liked him. The second test was very good."

Landon paused. "I almost cried when I saw it. He resembled Dan Blocker so much and had so much of the quiet, gentle quality."

Blocker, of course, was Landon's costar for 14 years in "Bonanza." He died suddenly in 1972. His death seemed to take the heart not just from the series but from his costars, Landon and Lorne Greene, and the series ended in early 1973.

Singing no mystery to Shaun Cassidy

By Mike Goodkind
Associated Press

Joe of the Hardy Boys launched his singing career in the television series at the most popular teenybopper discotheque in fictional Bayport, Mass.

And Shaun Cassidy, who plays Joe and was already a rock celebrity among teens and subteens overseas, was able to launch his own American singing career at the same time.

"It was the first time I ever sang on the show," says the 18-year-old actor who costars as the younger brother on "The Hardy Boys Mystery Hour."

"The Mystery of the Flying Courier" was first seen on April 10 and featured Joe Hardy's debut at the local disco. The rugby-shirted amateur detective opened talent night with the 1963 rock hit by the Crystals, "Da Do Ron Ron."

Simultaneously, the song was released by Warner Bros.-Curb Records, and when the episode repeats today (7 p.m., Channel 7), viewers will see what has been the No. 1 selling song on the national record charts.

"I really try to keep the two careers separate," said Cassidy. "When I sing on the show, I'm Joe Hardy singing on the show. I'm never Shaun Cassidy singing on the show. What I do in concert is totally different than what I do as Joe Hardy."

In the live performances "it's not as young, a little more sophisticated, the theatricals, the album cuts which I write myself," said Shaun, whose first U.S. hit is a remake of the early '60s rock classic.

The Hardy Boys family mystery show is now filming its second season. And Cassidy, who had a European tour under his belt before he got the television part last spring, conceded the obvious: The almost-weekly tube exposure hasn't hurt his musical aspiration.

"The show has made my career to a great extent," via the exposure, he said.

Cassidy, besides his actress-mother Shirley Jones, has some pretty impressive show business relatives to emulate — his actor father, the late Jack Cassidy, and an older half-brother, David Cassidy, 26, a rock and television series star when he was about Shaun's age.

David "obviously was a big influence on me as my mother and father were," Shaun said.

Unlike David, who aspired to be an actor and wound up on a musical show, Shaun said his ambition was and still is music — either as a performer or maybe some day as a record producer or writer.

Cassidy said he tried out for the Hardy Boys part, thinking it was a one-shot television movie. He said he sought the role after his manager suggested "it might be a good idea for me to get some acting experience if along the long and winding road I'd want to act some more, I'd have some experience under my belt."

"I thought the show might get in the way of the music, but I've found the two have worked together beautifully," said Shaun.

"Creatively it (the show) doesn't help, but it doesn't hurt either. I've thought about putting a piano in my dressing room so I can write songs while I'm waiting around."

While his classmates from Beverly Hills High School go surfing or prepare for college, Cassidy says he works all day on the series, records late at night and is planning to spend weekends making concert appearances.

Yes, he said, he sometimes envies the more traditional lives of some of his fans, "but I've made my choice."

Added Shaun: "A lot of my friends have gone off to college to pursue careers. I just happen to be lucky enough to be pursuing mine now.

"I see show business as a business," said Cassidy, whose active role in shaping the Hardy Boys action is apparent on the set.

In the series, based on the Franklin W. Dixon novels, Joe and Frank Hardy become amateur crime solvers by emulating their father, a private detective who lives in the fictional community of Bayport, Mass.

This evening's repeat, like all others in the series, is an updated version of the Dixon novels, which of course never included such things as disco performing or a femme fatale who's an airline stewardess.

Family diary helps Nielsen set ratings

By Lee Winfrey
Knight Ridder Newspapers

One night last month, Harry Weinheimer answered the telephone at his home in Cherry Hill, N.J. The woman on the line said she worked for the A.C. Nielsen Co. in Chicago.

She wanted to know two things: Did he own a television set? And would he mind keeping a diary that would list the TV shows that he and his family watched during one week?

Weinheimer agreed. Soon after, a Nielsen diary arrived in the mail. The family was asked to check off what programs it watched during the week beginning Thursday, July 14, and ending Wednesday, July 20.

As reward for their labors, the Nielsen company sent along two shiny new quarters

As reward for this labor, the Nielsen company sent along two shiny new quarters stuck in slots on a card. Above those 50 cents was lettered, "Here's a token of our THANKS!"

Thus did Harry Weinheimer, his wife Mary, and their two teen-aged children, son Mark and daughter Dana, become for a week part of the system that determines the Nielsen ratings, the thermometer that shows which TV shows are vigorously alive, and which are on their way to oblivion.

Nielsen uses two approaches to compile its weekly national ratings. Best-known are 1,200 Audimeters. An Audimeter is a machine about the size of a cigar box that is attached to the top of a TV set. It tells whether the set is on or off, and the channel number to which it is tuned.

Supplementing the Audimeters are 2,400 diaries. They don't require any special machinery, just someone like Harry Weinheimer with a pencil or a pen.

Weinheimer faithfully marked the diary for a week and mailed it in on time. He said he didn't falsify anything and believes that his family's diary is at least 90 percent accurate.

"It was impossible to get the kids to sit down together and agree on what cartoons they watched Saturday morning," he told me.

Only one good show suffered in his diary compilations, Weinheimer believes.

"It took me months and months to get the family to watch '60 Minutes,' " he said. "But on this particular Sunday my son insisted on watching 'Nancy Drew.' I didn't insist because I wanted to get out of the house anyway to mow my lawn."

Nielsen uses 1,200 Audimeters and 2,400 diaries to compile its weekly national ratings

Weinheimer was puzzled by two questions in a short list of queries included in the diary. One asked, "Are any women household members aged 18 or over employed outside the home?" The other asked, "Does anyone in your household speak any language other than English?"

A Nielsen spokesman told me that advertisers believe that the viewing habits of working women are different from housewives, and the admen want to know how to reach them. They also believe that working women shop slightly differently, such as buying more convenience foods of the type that are quick to cook.

Nielsen asks about languages used because it has a special supplemental booklet that it mails to families that speak Spanish. It fears that some of them might have trouble with diary instructions that are only written in English.

Personally, I'm glad the Weinheimers took such care to make sure that their diary was accurate. Statistically, in a nation of more than 210 million people, they represented about 60,000 Americans during their week within the Nielsen system.

John Ritter talks of Tex

Actor proud of his late father

By Kay Gardella
New York News

NEW YORK — John Ritter, who is the lucky guy with two girls in ABC's fall comedy series, "Three's Company," pretends to be a homosexual so he can share an apartment with blonde Suzanne Somers (she plays Chrissy Snow) and dark-haired Joyce DeWitt (Janet Wood) without interference from their landlord. He hopes there'll be no interference from the homosexual community, either.

"We're just having fun," says the good-looking actor, whose early years were spent listening to country music from his late dad, Tex Ritter. "We don't want to offend anyone. A gay from New York told a friend of mine we were making fun of homosexuals. That's the last thing we want to do. It's foolish to make jokes about it."

The series, tried out in six episodes at the end of last season, is based on the British comedy "Three." It reaches for laughs with this sexual ploy, so the three can cut financial corners, and share one apartment. Norman Fell and Audrey Lindley play the apartment owners who are taken in by the threesome.

Some suggestion of romance was made in the early episodes. But Ritter thinks pairing off with either girl would be disastrous from the standpoint of the series. "It would then be the old business about two is company, three's a crowd," he said. Nevertheless, the viewers will be titillated with an occasional suggestion or two.

'If it was a choice of a movie or being together, he'd always say: "Let's just stay here and get to know each other".'

The 28-year-old actor, born in Burbank, Calif., remembers his father and family life happily. "My dad necessarily was away a lot singing, but when he was home he always insisted that my brother and I spend as much time with him as possible. If it was a choice between a movie or being together, he'd always say: 'Let's just stay here and get to know each other.'"

Ritter said his dad was more "taciturn" and his mother more "supportive." And, like so many children, he went through a period when he wanted to break away from the family unit, drive a car and have independence. Then he saw James Dean in "East of Eden" (for those who don't recall the film, Dean struggled in vain to communicate with his strict father, portrayed by Raymond Massey). It was a real tear-jerker that moved Ritter to immediate action.

"I went directly to dad, and said: 'I saw "East of Eden" for the third time the other night. I know you're stoic and don't hand out a lot of bouquets as opposed to mom. But I need to know you love me. I'm going at full speed now and I have no pride. I don't want to be like James Dean, I'm going to ask you right out if you love me."

From that moment on John and his dad were fast friends, with no barriers between them. "I was always a secret country-western fan, but I didn't want to appear to be blowing my father's horn among my friends. But when Bob Dylan came out with 'Nashville Skyline' it was the seal of approval. It was then OK to like country-western music. Kids would then say to me: 'Hey, I really like this stuff.'"

Ritter went to school in California — he got his B.A. degree from the University of Southern California — and studied acting with Stella Adler and Harvey Lembeck's comedy workshop. But on holidays he had plenty of chances to go to Nashville, where his dad did most of his recording work, and meet people like Johnny Cash. He speaks glowingly of the country singer, mainly because Cash always took time to shower attention on the two Ritter boys.

JOHN RITTER, Joyce DeWitt and Suzanne Somers are the stars of ABC's "Three's Company" series, which returns to Ch. 7 in reruns Thursday at 9:30 p.m. The comedy series will begin a new season in the fall, airing at 9 p.m. Tuesdays, starting Sept. 13.

Tex Ritter, according to his son, studied law but started singing to earn a living. He was called Woody then, but like a lot of people from Texas he got the name of Tex and it stuck. He wanted John to study law and was disappointed at first when he chose acting. He later became supportive.

John made his debut in "Dan August" starring Burt Reynolds and Norman Fell. And since then he has stacked up numerous television credits including the role of Rev. Fordwick in "The Waltons." He says it's his only regret, now that he's in a regular series, to have to drop that role.

He also has managed to acquire a strong list of stage credits, including "Desire Under the Elms" at the Kennedy Center, "Glass Menagerie," and "Butterflies Are Free," among many others.

He's a relaxed, easy-going guy who's fun to be with and is not affected. He's currently living in Benedict Canyon, in the Hollywood area, with a girl named Nancy Morgan whom he plans to marry. "She's changed my life," he says gratefully. "But marriage for me is an earth-shaking thing to face. But it's the natural thing to do, so it will be our next step."

Ritter is often taken for actor Beau Bridges. No matter how he denies it to autograph hunters, they don't believe him.

It's the memory of his father, and how John speaks of him, that's most moving. He thinks his father's best record was "High Noon," but he also liked "Just Beyond the Moon" and "Hillbilly Heaven."

Said Ritter, "That's where he is, now."

Sweepstakes to publicize series

'It's designed to get 'em to at least sample the shows'

By Jay Sharbutt
AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The old saying, "You couldn't pay me to watch that show," may get the acid test next fall. CBS, to help publicize its new series, will run a $250,000 sweepstakes for viewers then.

"It's designed to get 'em to at least sample the shows," says Louis Dorfsman, the veteran CBS advertising chief who hatched the campaign. "If they get hooked, that's marvelous."

The campaign, costing CBS more than a million, kicks off at the start of the 1977-78 campaign with an 11-page advertisement in the Sept. 17 edition of TV Guide magazine.

In addition to touting the 10 new series on CBS' fall schedule, the ad includes a card viewers are asked to fill out and mail to CBS to be eligible to win cash, goods or both.

The last day for card-mailing is Oct. 21. The winners — no individual can win more than $25,000 — will be announced on Nov. 21.

"What we're doing is asking the reader to watch at least five of the new shows and answer some simple questions we pose about them," said Dorfsman. He was asked for a sample.

"Oh, tough ones," he said in jest. "Like who plays the lead on 'The Betty White Show'?" Other questions will ask viewers what they like about various stars and various new shows, he added.

Must viewers actually observe the offerings to be eligible?

"That's an iffy question," Dorfsman said. "But there's no arm-twisting. What we say is, 'We would like you to watch.' However, they theoretically can send the cards in without watching the shows."

When Dorfsman first unveiled his sweepstakes campaign to CBS affiliates last June, he noted that campaigns similar to it had been run the last 18 months by a number of package goods advertisers.

In those efforts, viewers were asked to watch specific commercials on specific shows, he said, and it resulted in a 17 per cent average rise in ratings for all the programs in which the ads appeared.

And, in a phone chat from New York, he made no bones about CBS' campaign seeking to raise ratings as well as publicize new shows.

Orchid lover

Burr saying it with flowers

By Judson Hand
New York News

NEW YORK — Raymond Burr, who solved hundreds of imaginary crimes while playing Perry Mason and Ironside on TV, sounded more like another fictional detective — Rex Stout's Nero Wolfe, who solved cases for a living but whose real passion was for raising orchids.

"You can raise orchids in your bathroom," Burr said. "They love all the moisture there. One day, I'm going to write a book and tell you exactly how to do it."

Burr is, in fact, one of the country's largest commercial growers of orchids. He has greenhouses on his estate near Hollywood, and he raises them on one of the Fiji Islands, which he owns, too. "I'm in town to promote flowers, not myself as an actor," he said.

Burr stretched like a corpulent cat in the cool of his suite at a Park Avenue hotel. He was a lot stouter than when he played Mason and Ironside on TV, but his voice was exactly the same. He spoke as if he were addressing a jury.

"I'll make personal appearances for the company at flower shows and the like," he said. "I may even make TV commercials for them. I haven't decided, but I'm not doing it just for money. Hah! The company couldn't afford me unless I went down on my fees.

"The fact is, flowers are my passion. I believe that by enabling people to send flowers instantly by telephone, we're helping the country. I hope aesthetically and culturally."

After his smash success, Burr was far less successful in his series "Kingston: Confidential," in which he played the chief investigative reporter for a chain of newspapers.

"I hated to lose that one," he said of the series. "I'd wanted to play a crack journalist for years. The problem was, our stories simply weren't good."

Burr, who over the years has played everything from psychotic killer to Pope John XXIII, is in the market for new roles. In fact, during the conversation he placed a call to NBC,

THE BIBLE Says

J. T. Smith

IS GOD THE AUTHOR OF RELIGIOUS CONFUSION #2

In our article last Sunday we asked the question about God being the author of religious confusion and commented by showing that hundreds of religious groups are today claiming that they are receiving revelation from God. Recently in the IPT Letters to the Editor, I was called a religious bigot because I have been seeking to get people to follow the Bible and it's teaching and reject all the commandments and traditions of men. God is not the author of religious division. Man is!! One person claims miraculous, divine, revelation and has God telling us to recognize the Pope as the head of the church, another tells us that Joseph Smith is to be recognized as the head of the church. WHAT IS TRUTH???

Jesus said, "If ye continue in my word, then are ye my disciples indeed; And ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free" (John 8:31-32). I believe this passage. Again, Jesus said when he was praying to the Father, "Sanctify them through thy truth: thy word is truth." I believe this passage. Jesus also said when he was speaking to his apostles whom he had chosen, "Howbeit when he, the Spirit of truth, is come, he will guide you into all truth: for he shall not speak from himself; but whatsoever he shall hear, that shall he speak: and he will show you things to come" (John 16:13). I believe this passage. I believe that when the Holy Spirit came in Acts 2 He came to guide and direct these same apostles into ALL TRUTH. And if he (the Holy Spirit) did what he came to do, he did guide the apostles into ALL TRUTH. "Oh," someone says, "I can't accept the fact that we have ALL TRUTH." One says, "for Joseph Smith said," or another, "But the Pope says," or still another one says, "but Herbert W. Armstrong said." And so, we see at least a part of our problem. If you asked these same people, "Do you believe the Bible is the inspired, infallible Word of God"? I am sure they would say "yes." But how can we say we believe the Bible, and at the very same time DENY what is said. Jesus said the Holy Spirit would guide the apostles into ALL TRUTH. He didn't say ALL Truth PLUS the Book of Mormon. He didn't say All Truth PLUS the Catholic Catacism. He didn't say All Truth PLUS modern day revelation. He Said ALL TRUTH—Period. I believe it. I believe the Bibles contains "all things that pertain to life and godliness" just like Peter said. (2 Peter 1:3).

EIGHT IS ENOUGH (7), 8 p.m. — All kind of problems abound in the return of this popular comedy/drama series as Joannie is being "blackmailed" after crumpling a fender, Tommy is caught after breaking a church window, and Elizabeth "accidentally" accepts three dates to the junior prom.

DROUGHT (28) & (50), 9 p.m. — The current severe water shortage — and its effect on the western United States — is documented in this program which examines the ways in which agriculture, industry and private individuals are coping with the worst drought in U.S. history.

Q. We hear that Jackie Onassis has picked out as her next husband little King Hussein of Jordan and that eventually she will be known as Jacqueline, Queen of Jordan. How true is that rumor?—Anne Alexander, Los Angeles.

A. At this point not true at all. King Hussein recently lost his wife in a helicopter crash and is probably in the market for another wife. But Queen Jackie of Jordan seems unlikely in his future.

JACKIE ONASSIS

JORDAN'S KING HUSSEIN

Q. Recently I saw "A Bridge Too Far" with Robert Redford, Sean Connery and Michael Caine. It was about a parachute jump by Allied troops in World War II. Was the operation a success or not? I never did find out.—David Lyons, Tucson, Ariz.

A. "Operation Market Garden" was a military operation designed by the late Field Marshal Bernard Montgomery. Its objective was to capture the Rhine Bridge at Arnhem, behind German lines in Holland. It proved a fiasco. More than 10,000 men of the British First Airborne Division landed at Arnhem, but less than 2000 were rescued. Despite this disaster, Montgomery had the gall to describe it as 90 percent successful. Military historians now view it as a classic example of muddled planning, ineptitude and incredible blunders.

Q. Are there any top Jimmy Carter aides in the White House who earn less as federal employees than they did in private life?—William Endicott, Atlanta, Ga.

A. Two who come quickly to mind are Robert J. Lipshutz, counsel to the President, and Jack H. Watson Jr., secretary of the Carter Cabinet. Both are lawyers from Atlanta and are paid $56,000 per year by the government. In their Atlanta law practices, each earned from $70,000 to $83,000 in 1976.

Q. In April, Red Adair capped an oil well blowout in the North Sea. How much was Adair paid for the capping job and who paid him?—N. Williamson, Houston, Tex.

A. Paul "Red" Adair was paid nearly $1 million for his work by the Phillips Norway Group, six oil companies that own the well.

"RED" ADAIR

Q. Actress Pat Neal, once madly in love with the late Gary Cooper, married British writer Roald Dahl. They have a daughter, Tessa. Isn't she pregnant by a married man who refuses to marry her?—K.L., Manhattan Beach, Cal.

A. Tessa Dahl, 20, daughter of actress Pat Neal and writer Roald Dahl, lives in London with Julian Holloway, 32, son of Stanley Holloway of "My Fair Lady" fame. Julian is married to actress Zena Walker, 42. Whether he can divorce her in time to marry Tessa Dahl is problematical.

Q. They say that whenever actor Rex Harrison moves into a house he insists upon flying his own flag above it. Any truth?—Millie Kennedy, Oakland, Cal.

A. When Harrison occupied his villa at Portofino, Italy, he would order the Flag of St. George to be flown as a sign that he was in residence.

Q. Now that Björn Borg has won Wimbledon for the second straight year, will he marry his Romanian girlfriend, Mariana Simionescu, or will they continue to live together?—F.R., Syracuse, N.Y.

A. They have no immediate plans to marry, but if they stay together much longer, marriage seems inevitable.

MARIANA SIMIONESCU AND BOYFRIEND BJORN BORG

Q. The Charlotte Observer recently reported that part of evangelist Billy Graham's organization—the World Evangelism and Christian Education Fund of Dallas—has amassed more than $20 million in the last seven years. Why has this been kept a secret?—F.V., Charlotte, N.C.

A. The fund's existence has been shielded from public view in that Graham has not volunteered information about it. One reason is that admission of large holdings by a charitable or religious organization tends to discourage contributions from the public. Boys Town in Lincoln, Neb., found itself in a similar situation some years ago, when the considerable extent of its riches was revealed.

Q. Valerie Perrine, who used to dance topless in Las Vegas, made a big hit in the movie "Lenny." She also has a part in the movie "Superman." But I hear she is giving it all up to marry Adnan Khashoggi, the fixer-agent for Lockheed and Northrop Aircraft. Is that true?—D.E., Hollywood.

A. Playgirl Valerie, 33, in London to film "Superman," was seen dating a 22-year-old named Dodi Fayed. He is Adnan Khashoggi's nephew and the son of Mohammed Al Fayed, one of the wealthiest men in the Middle East, who owns a reported $25 million in British stocks. Khashoggi does not know Perrine—at least not at this writing.

VALERIE PERRINE

Q. Who were the men most responsible for preventing Richard Nixon from going to trial for his obstruction of justice in the Watergate scandal?—D. L., Silver Spring, Md.

A. Probably Gen. Alexander Haig, who pointed out the pardon options to then Vice President Gerald Ford; Special Prosecutor Leon Jaworski, who was determined to have Nixon resign because he knew he was guilty but felt it would take too long to get him a fair trial; and finally President Gerald Ford, who pardoned Nixon, thereby preventing the final resolution of Nixon's guilt or innocence.

Keeping Up... With Youth

PRINCE CHARLES OF BRITAIN

LUXEMBOURG, PRINCESS MARIE-ASTRID

Guessing Game

For some months now Prince Charles, 28, heir to the British throne, has been having a field day with the press. At various times they have announced his impending engagement to, among others, Lady Jane Wellesley, daughter of the Duke of Wellington; Davina Sheffield, a strikingly beautiful blonde; and Princess Caroline of Monaco, daughter of the former Grace Kelly and Prince Rainier.

Latest—and apparently the favorite—in the guessing game is Princess Marie-Astrid, daughter of the Duke and Duchess of Luxembourg. She was recently at Cambridge, brushing up on her English. The English newspapers insist she will convert from Roman Catholicism to Protestantism and marry Charles before the year is out.

For his part, the Prince answers all queries about his love life with a variety of gags, continues to date beauties. The betting odds, however, seem to be on the 23-year-old Princess, even though in June Buckingham Palace announced through a spokesman: "There is no truth at all in the report that there is to be an announcement of an engagement of the Prince of Wales to Princess Marie-Astrid of Luxembourg."

Whether Charles marries Marie-Astrid or not, she should know a sampling of British women considers her the most attractive female in European royalty.

Kids Get Action on Consumers' Complaints

For the past two years, students from the St. Paul (Minn.) Open School have been running a Consumer Action Service to help adults victimized by negligence and fraud. The project is part of an unusual course for ages 12 to 18.

Working directly with local merchants and such agencies as the Better Business Bureau, the students have successfully settled 70 percent of the more than 75 complaints referred to them, says teacher Joe Nathan, who originated the program.

In one case, a woman whose apartment was damaged by water was helped to obtain $425 from the local Housing Authority after her two prior requests had been denied. When another St. Paul resident was overcharged for repairs on her auto transmission, the youths got the service station to reduce the bill by 30 percent.

Nathan says the program is aimed at combining community service with basic communications skills. In class, students learn how to write a clear, forceful business letter; how to make inquiries and get results on the telephone; how to read insurance contracts and apartment leases.

The practical experience of solving consumers' complaints "has helped students see why reading, writing, math and speaking are important," says Nathan.

Here are some of the students' tips on how to be prepared for potential consumer problems:

1. Get and keep receipts for everything you buy.
2. Understand everything in contracts before signing.
3. Get all agreements in writing.
4. Know where you can turn for help: Better Business Bureau, small claims court, state attorney general's office, newspaper and TV "action lines."

The students have put these and other tips into a booklet called "Consumer Action Service: How You Can Do It." To get a copy, send $1 to: Consumer Action Service, St. Paul Open School, 97 E. Central Ave., St. Paul, Minn. 55101.

Girls and Math Anxiety

Why is there such a large discrepancy between males and females who study math?

Why is it that girls are discouraged to excel in math and science, especially when they do as well as boys in those subjects until the seventh grade?

At Stanford University several weeks ago, a group of more than 400 junior and senior high school girls along with parents and teachers listened to a panel of women who have succeeded in mathematics, science, engineering and medicine.

They were told that by junior high school girls are indoctrinated with such messages as "mathematics is masculine . . . women do not need math . . . boys are better at math"—none of which is true.

John Ernest, a mathematician at the University of California at Santa Barbara, explained that boys don't necessarily like math more than girls. But when math becomes optional, more males than females choose it because they are realistically aware of its use in career possibilities.

Social attitudes and sex-role stereotyping prevent too many girls from taking four years of math before college.

Lucy Sells, a sociologist who made a study at the University of California at Berkeley, found that in the entering class of 1973, about 57 percent of the men had taken four years of high school math. Only 8 percent of the women had done so. Thus 92 percent of the women in this class were ineligible to take calculus or intermediate level statistics courses and were subsequently relegated to five fields: the humanities, music, social work, elementary education, guidance and counseling.

According to Lucy Sells, high school math is the "critical filter" in the job market.

The Stanford panelists pointed out that women who avoid math in high school limit their choice of career not only in science and technology, but also in business, banking and accounting. Moreover, it adversely affects their self-image and self-esteem. The world is changing rapidly, the panelists asserted, and students without training in basic computation and the use of numbers and symbols will end up as the true "illiterates" in contemporary American society.

The Shadow of the Mafia Over Our Government

by Jack Anderson

WASHINGTON, D.C.

Federal lawmen tell us that a disturbing number of Congressmen maintain backdoor contacts with underworld figures. The racket bosses can provide the campaign cash and political muscle so important to a Congressional career. This has created an unholy alliance between those who make and those who break the laws.

Even more alarming, the crime czars are drooling over the vast U.S. treasury and scheming how to get their hands on some of the federal greenery. There is evidence, for example, that they have corrupted federal officials to obtain fraudulent government loans.

Gangsters also need political protection simply to survive. "Organized crime can't exist," one top lawman told us tersely, "without corruption at all levels of government." Another explained that the mob "thrives on its ability to neutralize effective government." Our underworld sources don't disagree. "Big crime couldn't flourish without politicians," one said.

The Mafia has come a long way since Ignazio Saietta, alias Lupo the Wolf, preyed on defenseless food peddlers and cobblers 70 years ago in New York City's "Little Italy."

Today, the Mafia controls an underworld empire that rakes in at least $48 billion a year, of which more than half is untaxed profits. The organization has also invested in a host of legitimate enterprises, ranging from hotels to construction companies. By one authoritative estimate, the crime syndicate may own as many as 10,000 bona fide firms, with an annual take of $12 billion.

The federal heat on organized crime, meanwhile, has subsided. A General Accounting Office investigation recently found the "war on organized crime faltering." The federal strike forces, which were formed to coordinate the efforts of law enforcement agencies, are under fire. Some task forces have been manned by inexperienced attorneys; some have abused the constitutional rights of their victims. This has given the politicians the excuse they needed to bear down on the strike forces. Most politically appointed U.S. attorneys, for example, have been unyielding in their opposition to strike forces. Result: the "federal work against organized crime," according to the GAO, "is not planned, organized or directed efficiently."

Albert DeFalco (above left) confers with lawyer after being convicted of extorting $36,000 from illegal aliens in return for promoting bills to delay deportation. DeFalco was an aide to Congressman Henry Helstoski (right), who was voted out of office last year. The New Jersey Democrat continues to proclaim his innocence in the matter, which was investigated by a federal grand jury in 1974. But he admits he asked racketeer Frank Peroff to check the backgrounds of several potential government witnesses in Chile who he thought would testify against him.

The strike forces relied upon hidden microphones and wiretaps for 80 percent of their information on mob activities. But this eavesdropping has now been drastically curbed in the name of civil liberties. The outcry against federal snooping was led in the 1960's by Rep. Cornelius Gallagher (D., N.J.). His stirring defense of the right of privacy, in fact, made him one of the leading contenders to be Lyndon Johnson's running mate in 1964.

Not long afterward, Gallagher's name came up unexpectedly in wiretaps of New Jersey gangster Joe Zicarelli's telephone conversations. It developed that Gallagher was close to the mob and once figured in a scheme to prevent the deportation of a Mafia mobster. Viewed in this light, Gallagher's crusade may have been intended to protect the privacy of New Jersey's racket bosses. Thus exposed, he ended up in prison in 1972.

Convicted as tax evader

To get convictions, the task forces require easy access to gangsters' tax returns. The big-time criminals, of course, must hide their illicit income. Thus they become tax evaders; often it has taken tax investigations to put racketeers behind bars.

But suddenly in 1973, the IRS began dismantling the machinery it had been using against mobsters. Then-Commissioner Donald Alexander quietly transferred resources from the special enforcement programs to civil audit work. In June 1975 the IRS stopped asking taxpayers whether they maintained secret foreign bank accounts, with criminal penalties that made a dishonest answer highly risky. (It restored the question late in 1976, following Congressional pressure.) Then the IRS discontinued its quarterly reports on criminal tax enforcement activities. Finally, the IRS killed an effective program designed to trip up narcotics traffickers. President Carter promised to renew the program but cut its funding instead.

In a lengthy interview, Assistant Commissioner S.B. Wolfe told us the IRS is not soft on criminals. He said the agency has fewer than 2500 special agents to cover the entire country. "If there is so much interest in fighting organized crime," he demanded, "then why aren't more funds provided?" He also stated the IRS is hampered by court decisions that make it unlawful to treat organized criminals differently from other taxpayers.

Whatever the rationalization, the federal authorities seem to have lost their enthusiasm for investigating organized crime. The GAO found that, almost invariably, racketeers received "no sentence or sentences of less than two years."

At the same time, the cutthroats who run the mob are becoming more cozy with the politicians who run the nation. The individual politician may not really feel compromised by his association with the friendly local racketeer. For the modern mobster, after all, usually invests his ill-gotten gains in legitimate enterprises. He poses as a businessman or union leader. He dresses in suits of conservative cut and color. He dismisses the whispers about his underworld connections as unfounded rumors or the unfortunate follies of his misspent youth. "I don't claim to be a saint," he will tell his political friends roguishly. But he will assure them that he has gone legitimate. Often, he is as respected in his community as the local high school principal.

Sen. Barry Goldwater (R., Ariz.) does not deny his friendship with the late underworld chieftain Gus Greenbaum, who was dispatched by mob executioners. The Senator attended the funeral. Goldwater's name has also been associated with other mob figures. In the tradition of the West, he judged them by their conduct toward him, not by their whispered reputations. No one who knows Goldwater believes he is in league with the mob. Yet there he was, a former candidate for President, chumming around with underworld hoods.

Boyhood chum went bad

Even a Watergate hero, House Judiciary Chairman Peter Rodino (D., N.J.), is on friendly terms with mobster Richard Boiardo. The Congressman explains that he grew up with Boiardo on the streets of Newark. Yet perhaps Rodino, with jurisdiction over the Justice Department, should cut off an old friend who went bad.

Then there is a curious case of Rep. Henry Helstoski (D., N.J.), who was narrowly voted out of Congress last year. In 1974, a federal grand jury began investigating charges that he had collected fees from illegal aliens in return for introducing private bills to delay their deportation. His former aide, Albert DeFalco, was convicted of shaking down the aliens for $36,000, but Helstoski has continued to proclaim his innocence.

We learned, however, of a mysterious meeting between the crewcut Congressman and a racketeer named Frank Peroff. Helstoski was accompanied by his blonde secretary, Kathy Dunn, who later confirmed his account of the meeting.

The rendezvous was arranged at Washington's Dulles Airport, where three people can get lost in the crowd.

Former New Jersey Rep. Cornelius Gallagher (l) was a crusader against the use of wiretapping by government investigators. But he was pegged as a mob crony after his name came up in a tap on the phone of gangster Joe Zicarelli (r). Gallagher once helped stop deportation of a mobster; he was jailed in 1972.

Helstoski asked Peroff to fly to Chile to check the backgrounds of several government witnesses who might testify against him. Peroff said it would cost $50,000. The price, replied Helstoski, was too high. But he asked for a second meeting.

We wondered why a Congressman would ask a gangster to handle an investigation for him. Helstoski said he wanted only to learn the truth. But Peroff told a different story. He said the Congressman wanted him to bribe Chilean officials to fabricate shady pasts for the government witnesses. The gangster said they also discussed murdering the key witness, a Chilean named Oswaldo Aguirre.

The crime kingpins have friends not only on Capitol Hill but in the government compounds below. A Justice Department memo in our possession outlines the classic case of Thomas Regan, who until recently was an obscure, $32,000-a-year district director of the Small Business Administration, with offices in Richmond, Va.

Sold himself out

According to the memo, Regan got into financial deals over his head and wound up $500,000 in debt. He got a little relief after he helped steer government loans to two companies in which a friend had a large stake. The grateful friend lent Regan $8500, which was never repaid.

The friend also brought Regan to Las Vegas on Feb. 4, 1973, to meet his cousin, Sam Calabrese, who was linked to the Mafia's notorious Gambino family. Accompanying Calabrese was Sanford Rafsky, identified in the memo as the "new Meyer Lansky." The aging Lansky had been the Miami mob's financial whiz.

Reputed Mafia boss Richard Boiardo grew up on streets of Newark, N.J., with Rep. Peter Rodino, who headed House investigation into Watergate.

When organized crime chieftain Gus Greenbaum died at hands of mobsters, Sen. Barry Goldwater (R., Ariz.) was one of mourners at his funeral.

Over charcoaled steaks at the Aladdin Hotel, the men spoke jovially of Calabrese's voracious appetite. He stands 5-feet-6 and weighs 350 pounds. The discussion eventually got around to financial problems. Before they finished their brandy and cigars, they had agreed to use Regan to secure government loans for undeserving clients.

Loans from Uncle Sam

The first applicant, an associate of Rafsky's, was carefully coached by Regan. Regan even typed the application, omitting a conviction for negotiating stolen checks. This loan was rejected, but it was a dry run for four successful loans, each for $350,000, each fraudulent. Regan also issued a series of fraudulent lease guarantees to the Dunn International Corporation to induce them to construct buildings for the four sham companies which had received the loans. All four loans, of course, defaulted; the Small Business Administration also had to pay the guarantees.

Regan, meanwhile, took up residence on a $335,000 Virginia horse farm financed by his mobster friends. A government colleague, Milton Maddox, became suspicious and on Sept. 12, 1973, he walked into the U.S. Attorney's office in Richmond with a batch of loan files. These raised enough questions to cause Assistant U.S. Attorney David Lowe to order an FBI investigation. Strike Force 18, an elite unit specializing in complex financial crimes, was assigned to the case.

It was only a matter of time before the group was nailed on charges of racketeering, conspiracy, bribery and fraud. All are now serving lengthy prison sentences, except Rafsky who received a reduced sentence for his testimony. He is now serving time in a secret location under provisions of the Witness Protection Act.

Capitol controlled?

Does organized crime, meanwhile, have enough political clout to affect legislation? "One wonders about things on Capitol Hill," a top Justice Department official commented. He wondered, for example, whether the mob is behind bills that would restrict investigators' access to banking and tax records. "It would be a legitimate rhetorical question to ask," he said.

Can organized crime be put out of business? Not likely, as long as Americans patronize the mob by placing bets, buying drugs, reading pornography, paying prostitutes and the like. Warns the General Accounting Office: "Consumer demand for organized crime's goods and services provides billions of dollars of income each year." ■

"Vantage is solving a lot of my problems about smoking."

"You see, I really enjoy smoking. To me, it's a pleasure. But it was no pleasure hearing all the things being said against high-tar cigarettes.

"Of course, I used to kid myself a lot about giving up the taste of my old high-tar cigarette for one of those new low-tar brands. But every one I tried left my taste unsatisfied.

"Then someone offered me a Vantage. Sure I'd read about them. But I thought they were like all the others. I was wrong.

"Vantage was right. It satisfied like my old brand. Yet it had nearly half the tar.

PARADE'S SPECIAL

INTELLIGENCE REPORT

by LLOYD SHEARER

BECAUSE OF VOLUME OF MAIL RECEIVED, PARADE REGRETS IT CANNOT ANSWER QUERIES ABOUT THIS COLUMN.

STEREOTYPE Is there really such a personality as "the poor, little rich kid"?

At a recent meeting of the American Psychiatric Association, psychiatrists discussed a group of insecure, intolerant, unhappy "little monsters." They agreed that the children of the super-rich often find life a burden, that they are unable to cope with the slightest frustrations, that they are incapable of setting realistic goals for themselves, let alone attaining them. They also experience difficulty in making friends and establishing rapport with other youngsters.

One psychiatrist described 15 offspring of various millionaires and pointed out that their problems frequently resemble those of very poor children who suffer from parental absence. The poor children may react aggressively and sometimes unlawfully under such circumstances; the very rich behave tyrannically but because of their money and position are more readily accepted by society.

MUSHROOM CURE Mushrooms --those edible fungi loved by many and feared by some --may prove beneficial to millions of alcoholics.

For many years it's been known that the delicious mushroom Coprinus atramentarius doesn't mix well with alcohol. If someone drinks even four days after eating the mushroom, he or she can develop such unpleasant side effects as, flushing, dizziness, headache, nausea and vomiting. The combination is never fatal, however.

Now a team of Swedish and American scientists has discovered the basic anti-alcohol substance in this mushroom. Once coprin, as they are calling the substance, passes the required tests for safety, they hope it will become an effective medication for alcohol addiction.

RUSSIAN REWARD According to the German newspaper Bild, the Soviet Union is offering $4 million to any pilot who delivers one of West Germany's Phantom jets to the Communist East.

Gen. Paul-Albert Scherer, chief of West Germany's counterespionage service, recently told a parliamentary committee in Bonn that the Soviets have been especially interested for years in the American-built Phantom's German-equipped radar.

Several months ago a Soviet pilot defected to Japan with a MIG-25.

JIMMY IN WAX

Jimmy Carter has made it. A statue of his smiling face and lithe figure stands prominently in Madame Tussaud's famous wax museum in London.

But Richard Nixon is gone. So, too, are wax replicas of Gerald Ford, Sammy Davis Jr. and Jackie Onassis, plus John Glenn and some other heroes of yesteryear.

Nixon's replica used to stand with Mao's and Brezhnev's, but since Watergate it's been banished to the warehouse.

According to Ian Hanson, chief sculptor at Madame Tussaud's, some of the most popular Americans on exhibition in wax and fiberglass--in addition to Jimmy Carter--are Muhammad Ali, John F. Kennedy, Marilyn Monroe, Humphrey Bogart and Telly Savalas.

It costs Hanson and his assistants about $2500 to duplicate and dress a celebrity in wax. Frequently he or an assistant writes to a subject and asks if he or she would donate an old suit or costume. President Truman sent one well-worn suit. But the Shah of Iran shipped a resplendent uniform complete with medals, sashes, badges and sword.

NEW STATUS SYMBOL

The tremendous, constantly increasing wealth of the oil-exporting Persian Gulf countries has created a new status symbol--the large international airport.

Although the United Arab Emirates have a population of under a million, they boast two airports for large planes and another under construction. In addition, three smaller airports serve national flights, with two more in the planning stages.

NO MORE BEARDS

Argentina will no longer let anyone hide behind a beard. All future Argentine passports must carry the picture of a clean-shaven face. This rule is designed to make the search for guerrillas easier. Orthodox Jews have complained about the regulation, but it still stands fast.

TRICKS OF THE TRADE

One of the most popular smuggling stratagems is to swallow the illegal material.

Several weeks ago Dr. Maurice Fainsinger of Framingham, Mass., revealed the case of a young narcotics smuggler who swallowed 180 small latex bags of cocaine in Colombia to get them by customs inspectors in New England.

But one of the bags ruptured, and the 19-year-old smuggler was rushed to the emergency room of a Massachusetts hospital. He was in a stupor. An abdominal X-ray quickly revealed the bags.

For the next 10 days the youth was given a variety of emetics and purgatives to rid himself of the bags. Urine tests for cocaine were positive, showing that one of the bags had leaked and overdosed his system.

In reporting the episode in the Journal of the American Medical Association, Dr. Fainsinger pointed out that swallowing of gem stones by mine workers in Africa had led to regular use of X-rays at the mines for detection.

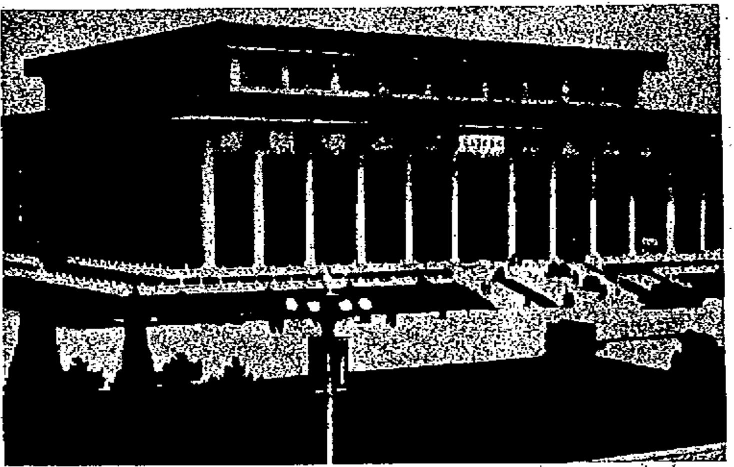
Where many packages have been swallowed, says Fainsinger, the abnormal gas distribution around the packages becomes quickly apparent on an X-ray.

NEW CORPORATE CENTER

Athens, Greece, is rapidly replacing Beirut, Lebanon, as an international business center.

A survey by the Hellenic-American Chamber of Commerce shows 250 multinational companies now located in Athens and using that city as regional headquarters. More than 130 of these are U.S. firms.

For years Beirut was a thriving banking and commercial center, but corporations that evacuated the city owing to the recent civil war may never return there.



SOMETHING FOR CYRUS VANCE TO SEE: PEKING'S NEW HALL WHERE MAO IS ENSHRINED

MAO MAUSOLEUM

When Secretary of State Cyrus Vance and his party reach Peking later this month, they undoubtedly will visit the Chinese capital's newest landmark--the memorial hall that houses the mausoleum of Chairman Mao Tse-tung.

Work was started on Nov. 24, 1976, and completed in six months on May 24, 1977. An estimated 700,000 Chinese performed the labor, and it now stands majestically in Tien An Men Square. It is an imposing structure 105 meters square and 33.6 meters high.

Most of the construction was done in winter by workers laboring day and night. Building materials and equipment came from all sections of China.

As of a few weeks ago, Chinese artists were hard at work sculpturing a statue of Mao, decorating the interior of the memorial hall, and installing the crystal sarcophagus.

The word in Peking is that Chairman Hua Kuo-feng wants everything ready for the arrival of Vance, his assistants, and the group of accompanying American journalists.

CHANGE OF HEART

From Unterpfaffenhofen, West Germany, comes the story of a robber who succumbed to his victim's logic.

According to the police, the robber entered a fabric shop, pointed his gun at the owner and demanded the money in the register.

The owner, a kindly man of 63, quickly complied. He opened his till and held up the $80 it contained. "Take it," he said. "Take it." Then he quickly asked, "But do you really think it's worth it?"

The robber thought for a moment. "I'm sorry," he mumbled. Whereupon he ran out of the store, mounted his bicycle and raced off.

READ AND WRITE

Almost 8000 young Americans are killed each year in accidents involving alcohol and driving. Another 40,000 are disfigured.

When your teenager reaches the stage where his or her world might include drinking or driving, or partying with those who do, it's time for a serious talk.

The National Highway Traffic Safety Administration has put together a booklet which has helped others in talking to teenagers about driving and drinking.

A free copy of "How To Talk to Your Teenager About Drinking and Driving" is available from the Consumer Information Center, Dept. 515E, Pueblo, Col., 81009. Just send a postcard with your name and address; allow 4-6 weeks for delivery.

HOLDS DENTURES FIRM WITHOUT DAILY "FIXINGS"
Snug Cushions hold dentures comfortably tight for weeks

No more "fixings" every morning with messy powders or creams. Even if dentures need "fixing" after every meal, here's important news. Snug cushions restore dentures' holding power so dentures stay comfortably tight for weeks. Snug, the soft, effective temporary aid, forms a "comfort bond" between dentures and gums. Sticks to dentures, not to gums. Rinse, scrub or soak Snug fresh and clean. Easy to remove, but won't wash off or flake away. So, end daily "fixings"! Use Snug to hold dentures comfortably tight for weeks.

MY FAVORITE JOKES

by JOEY RUSSELL

EDITOR'S NOTE: Joey Russell is a comedian for all age groups. For years he's performed in top nightclubs and had his own TV show for children, "Happy the Clown." He is also a popular toastmaster and a director of Connecticut's Orange National Bank.

"Although banking is a serious business," says Russell, "there is a lighter side to it. Like the time our senior loan officer went bananas when he heard the junior loan officer saying on the phone, 'No . . . no . . . yes . . . yes . . . no.' He asked, 'What did you say "yes" to?' 'Don't worry,' replied the junior officer. 'I said "yes" only when he asked me if I was still listening.' "

Here are some of Joey's favorites:

A minister and his wife were discussing two men mentioned in the local news. "Yes," said the minister, "I knew them both as boys. One was a handsome fellow but sort of a wise guy; the other a steady, hard worker. The wise guy was left behind in the race of life, but the hard worker—well, he just died and left a million dollars to his widow. It's a good moral: Work hard and steady."

"Yes, it is," his wife said with a smile. "I heard today that Mr. Wise Guy is going to marry the widow."

A businessman retired after 40 years of catching the 7:05 train. That first morning in retirement, his wife, as usual, placed his breakfast plate in front of him. When he said he wished she would not turn his fried eggs over—he did not like them that way, never had—she said, "But, dear, why didn't you ever tell me?"

"Because I never had time before," he replied.

A teenager getting ready for a summer trip yelled, "I'm out to find adventure, beautiful women, love, excitement—and don't anyone try to stop me!"

"Who's trying to stop you?" said his father. "Take me along!"

Little Benjy had bought grandma a book for her birthday and wanted to make an inscription. He didn't know what to write, but he remembered that his dad had a book with an inscription in it. So, you can just imagine grandma's surprise when she opened her present—a Bible—and found the following neatly inscribed: "To grandma, with the compliments of the author."

A teacher asked her Sunday school class to tell the story of Creation. A little girl stood up and said: "First God created Adam. Then He looked at him and said, 'Oh, my, I can do better than that.' So He created Eve."

This is a little poem I use at conventions:

My daughter has her Master's
My son, his Ph.D.
But father is the only one
Who has a J-O-B.

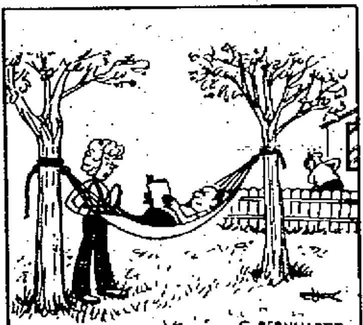
The gent walked up to a Las Vegas dice table and laid down a $1000 bet. He shook the dice, but as he threw them a third cube fell from his sleeve.

The stick man was calm. He handed back two dice, pocketed the third, and solemnly said, "OK, roll 'em again—your point is 15."



"Aren't you going to plant anything else this year besides yourself?"

New Medical Procedure

Umbilical Cords Provide Grafts for Arteries

by Lawrence Galton

In a New Jersey hospital a few months ago, a 26-year-old man faced loss of a leg after an accident that had grossly damaged a major leg artery. Today he has full use of his leg. And for the first time in years, a 65-year-old man and a 72-year-old woman are free of crippling from blockage of leg arteries by atherosclerosis so severe that he could take only half a dozen steps without agonizing pain, she suffered pain even at rest, and both were threatened with gangrene.

The three are among many helped by grafts of blood vessels taken from umbilical cords which, during pregnancy, had been lifelines between mothers and their fetuses.

Previously unused, routinely discarded with the cord after birth, umbilical vessels now hold out hope for many thousands of victims of severe atherosclerotic blockage of leg and other arteries.

Blood vessel disease, one of the most common and serious of afflictions, can cause great pain and suffering and sometimes can be fatal. And efforts to find replacements for diseased vessels go back many years.

More than a century ago, rubber tubing was tried and failed. Subsequently, tubes made of many materials—glass, silver, aluminum, even parachute cloth—were investigated unsuccessfully.

Weaker vessels

Much more recently, vessels made of Dacron and other synthetic materials and bovine grafts (vessels taken from cattle) have been more helpful. But they have limitations: synthetics sometimes encourage blood clot formation and bacterial overgrowth; bovine grafts are not available in the small diameters often needed and sometimes become inflamed and blow out.

At present, the standard replacement for diseased leg arteries and bypass of blocked coronary arteries feeding the heart is a section of saphenous vein taken from the patient's own leg. But here, too, limitations. Saphenous veins are not always available, sometimes themselves being diseased or having been removed because of varicosities. Even when a vein is available, its removal is in itself an operation, adding a second to the needed surgical replacement or bypass of a diseased artery and lengthening the total procedure for patients who are often elderly and highly debilitated.

Now, umbilical veins, when properly treated, appear to be free of such drawbacks and to have additional values that make them almost ideal.

It was almost fortuitously that the idea of using them occurred to Dr. Irving I. Dardik, a young vascular surgeon at Englewood (N. J.) Hospital.

In the middle of one night in 1971, he was called for an emergency. A year before he had used a bovine graft to save the leg of an elderly woman. But now a clot had blocked the graft.

The umbilical cord, lifeline from mother to child, has now become the route to health for many adults with crippling leg artery diseases. A new method of grafting chemically toughened umbilical veins has an 80 percent success rate.

Dardik had to operate again. While doing so, he couldn't help but think, as he had many times before, about what an ideal graft should be like: available right off the shelf, with no tendency to arouse the body to reject it, with resistance to clotting and infection, strong enough not to blow out, able to resist kinking across joints.

Striking resemblance

At that point in the operation, he reached the graft, opened it, and was suddenly struck by the look of the blood plasma around the clot. It reminded him of what he had seen many times during his internship days while delivering babies. It looked very much like the gelatinous material within the umbilical cord.

Why not, he wondered, use umbilical blood vessels for grafts. They'd be long enough, running as long as four feet. They had strength, could take pressure and a lot of twisting and banging around; they did for babies, some of whom are even born with knots in the cord, despite which the vessels stay open and deliver blood.

Over the next 18 months, Irving Dardik and his brother Herbert, also a vascular surgeon at Englewood Hospital and assistant professor of surgery at Albert Einstein College of Medicine, New York, collected discarded umbilical cords and found a way to preserve them with alcohol and chemicals. They also developed a method for separating the three vessels of a cord—one vein and two arteries—from the cord and each other.

But when they tried implanting the vessels in baboons, they failed. The vessels developed blowout areas and were rejected as well. Obviously, they couldn't be used "as is." Perhaps tanning might help. It did—after several years of work during which the Dardiks tried various tanning agents used in the leather industry before finding a remarkably effective one, glutaraldehyde.

Not only could the chemical toughen an umbilical vein and make it more durable; it also produced changes on the vein surface that prevented rejection. Happily, too, glutaraldehyde is not just a tanning agent but also an antibacterial agent—and, in fact, is often used for the latter purpose in hospitals. That meant less chance of infection.

Tailored to size

And with the tanning treatment, the Dardiks discovered, an umbilical vein could be made remarkably adaptable. Normally, it's eight millimeters in diameter at its largest section and one millimeter at its smallest. But during processing, glass or teflon rods of various diameters could be inserted in a vein to actually change the vein diameter to any size needed.

When a treated, modified umbilical vein was placed in baboons, the results were dramatic. It produced no inflammation or rejection, stayed free of blowout areas, remained open and effective.

Earliest trials in human patients were in those with the most advanced leg artery disease. All had evidence of gangrene. In some, saphenous veins had been removed previously; in others, they were useless. With umbilical vein grafts, the leg could be saved, amputation avoided, improvement obtained in more than 60 percent.

In another series of 20 patients with severe leg artery disease, 19 responded. More recently, the Dardik brothers have reported on bypasses of diseased leg arteries in 131 patients, with a mean age of 69, almost three-fourths of them with diabetes and half with major heart disease, all in danger of losing a leg. The success rate: above 80 percent.

From head to toe

The grafts have been used successfully to bypass diseased arteries all the way down to the foot and have even held up across the knee. In some cases, because of disease affecting not only leg arteries but nearby ones as well, new blood flow has been brought in by joining two lengths of umbilical vein to form a graft running all the way from the axillary artery under the collarbone and tunneled under the skin, to the foot.

Umbilical cord veins are now being tested in other procedures, including upper extremity grafts. Their use in bypassing clogged coronary arteries, is under study at several medical centers.

What is particularly gratifying to the Dardiks is that umbilical vein grafts provide valuable use for vessels that previously have been just thrown away. And, they note, new mothers are delighted to see the cord that meant life to their babies now meaning a new, useful life for many people at the other end of the age spectrum. ■

Next good thing: the day they arrive. All at once. Opening the package. Deciding which one to play first.

Then a bunch of good things happen. With a big fresh collection of your favorite music and performers to play again and again. To lift your spirits when they need lifting. To match your mood when you're feeling great.

Go ahead: Choose 11 albums. For only $1.00, plus shipping and handling. By joining the Columbia Record & Tape Club now.

An important message from Art Linkletter

Dear Friend,

This special, parchment-bound booklet is your invitation to apply for:

THE NATIONAL HOME HOSPITAL PLAN. National Home is currently paying over $50,000,000.00 a year (under both individual and group insurance plans) to families like yours.

Now, you too can collect every single day from the very first day of any covered hospitalization. And your benefits never run out. No matter how old you are...YOU AND YOUR FAMILY QUALIFY TO COLLECT CASH BENEFITS.

Our checks are made out direct to you or anyone you choose. In other words, YOU CONTROL this money. It can help pay those bills your basic group plans may not pay: doctor fees, lab tests, x-rays, nursing, outside specialists, prescriptions, etc. And you receive cash benefits regardless of any other plans you may have, including Medicare and Workmen's Compensation, and Blue Cross.

Hospital costs alone have DOUBLED since 1968. The American Hospital Association says so and reminds us that recently over 36 million Americans landed in the hospital for just one year. Nobody knows whose turn will be next.

That's why you need the National Home Hospital Plan. I urge you to apply for it today, at rates that are easy to afford.

Sincerely,

Art Linkletter

Member, Board of Directors with a financial interest in the company

P.S. After you've detached and mailed the brief application form, keep your booklet. It's a handsome, easy-to-read summary of National Home Protection.

The waiting's almost over. A new football year is about to bust wide open. And SI's scouts are finding out now what's different about this year's teams.

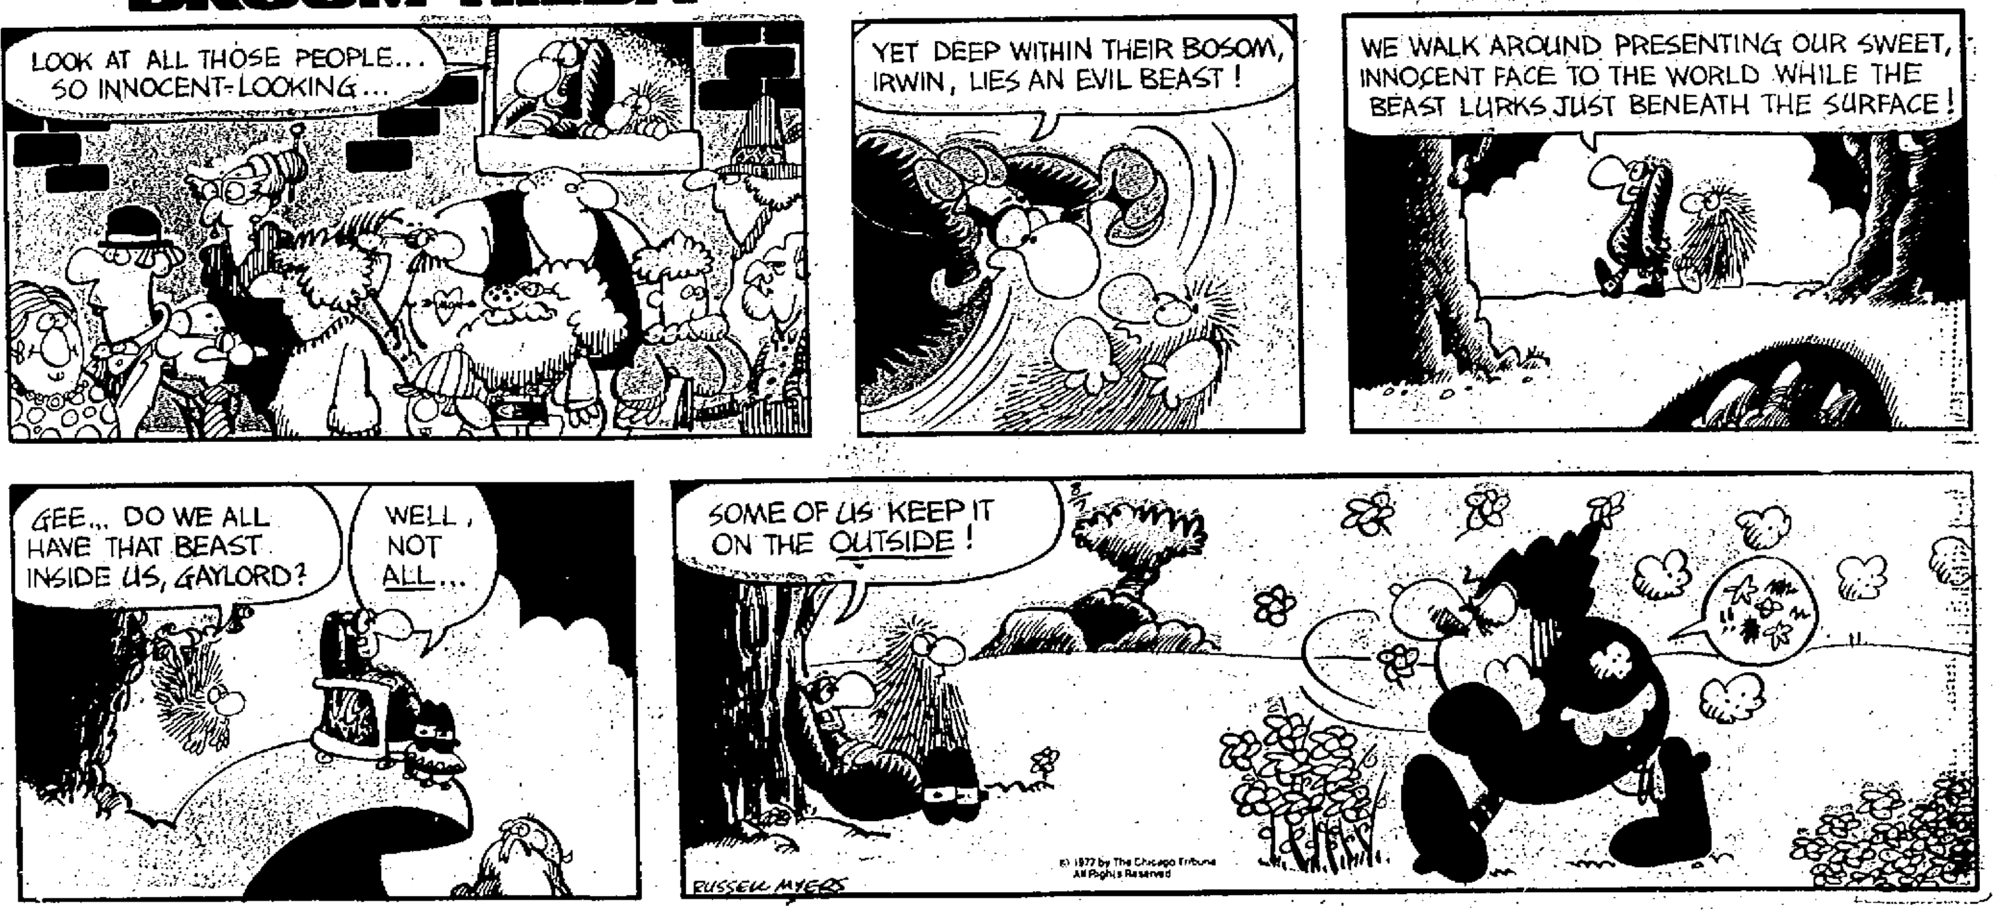
BROOM-HILDA

by Russell Myers



LOOK AT ALL THOSE PEOPLE... SO INNOCENT-LOOKING...
YET DEEP WITHIN THEIR BOSOM, IRWIN, LIES AN EVIL BEAST!
WE WALK AROUND PRESENTING OUR SWEET, INNOCENT FACE TO THE WORLD WHILE THE BEAST LURKS JUST BENEATH THE SURFACE!
GEE... DO WE ALL HAVE THAT BEAST INSIDE US, GAYLORD?
WELL, NOT ALL...
SOME OF US KEEP IT ON THE OUTSIDE!

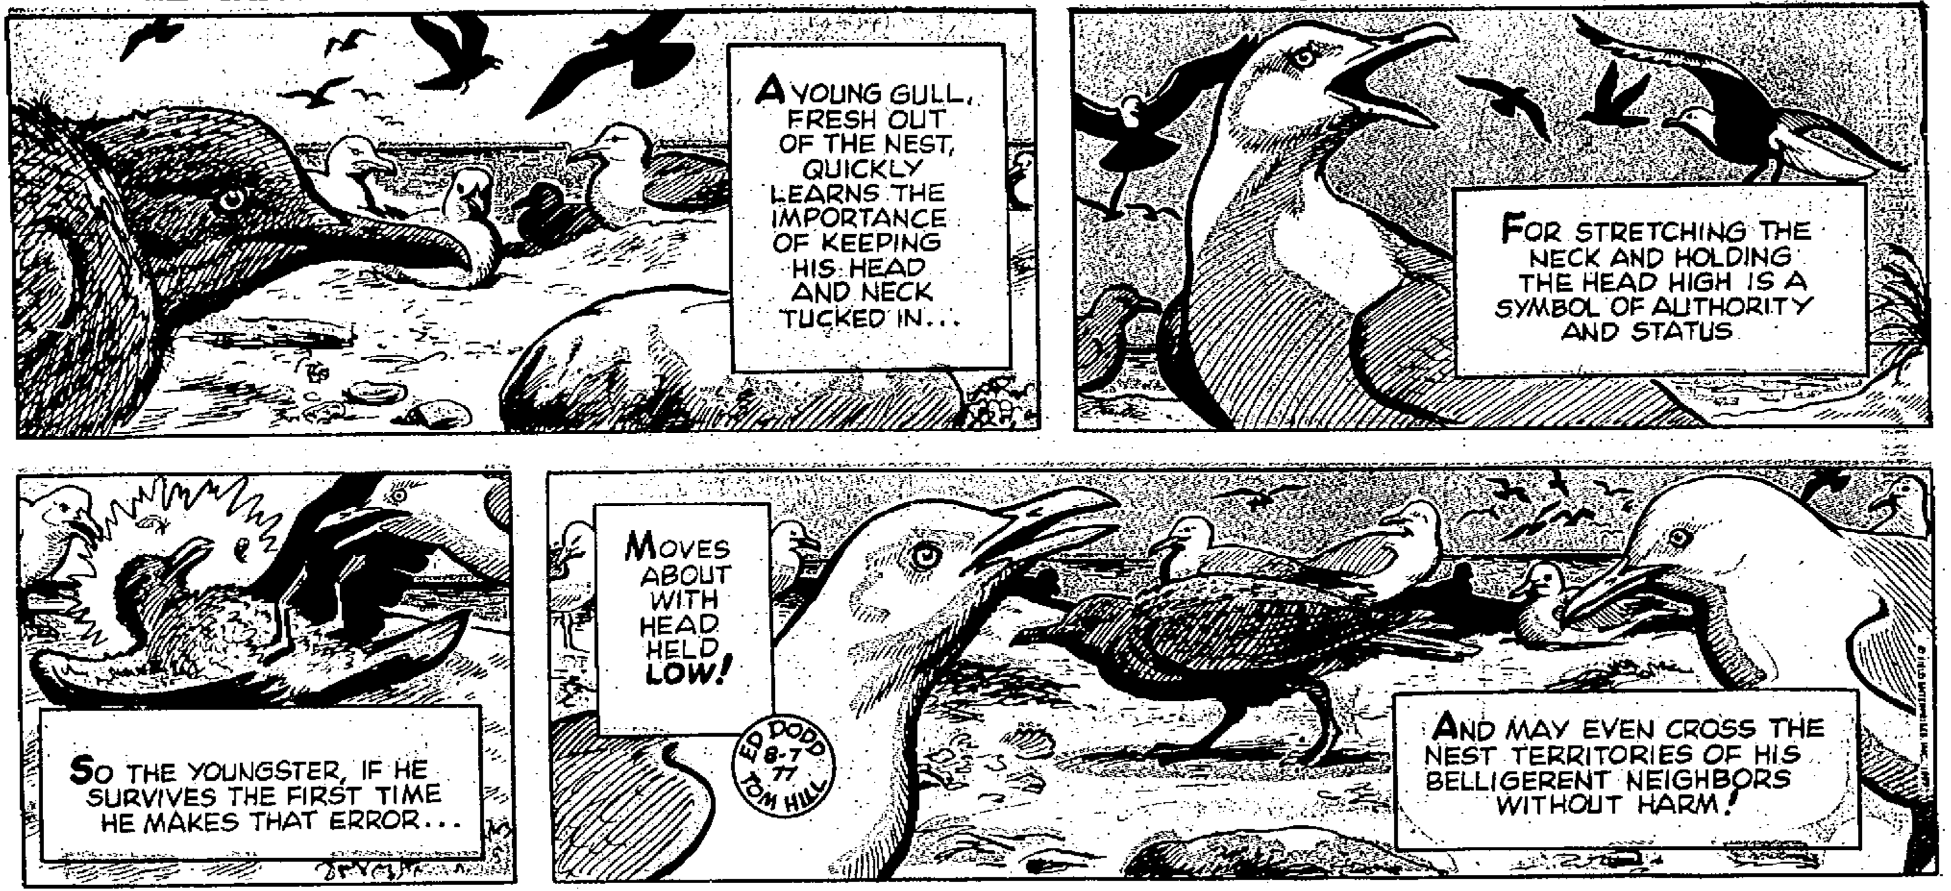
by Ed Dodd and Tom Hill



A YOUNG GULL, FRESH OUT OF THE NEST, QUICKLY LEARNS THE IMPORTANCE OF KEEPING HIS HEAD AND NECK TUCKED IN...
FOR STRETCHING THE NECK AND HOLDING THE HEAD HIGH IS A SYMBOL OF AUTHORITY AND STATUS
SO THE YOUNGSTER, IF HE SURVIVES THE FIRST TIME HE MAKES THAT ERROR...
MOVES ABOUT WITH HEAD HELD LOW!

the AMAZING SPIDER-MAN®

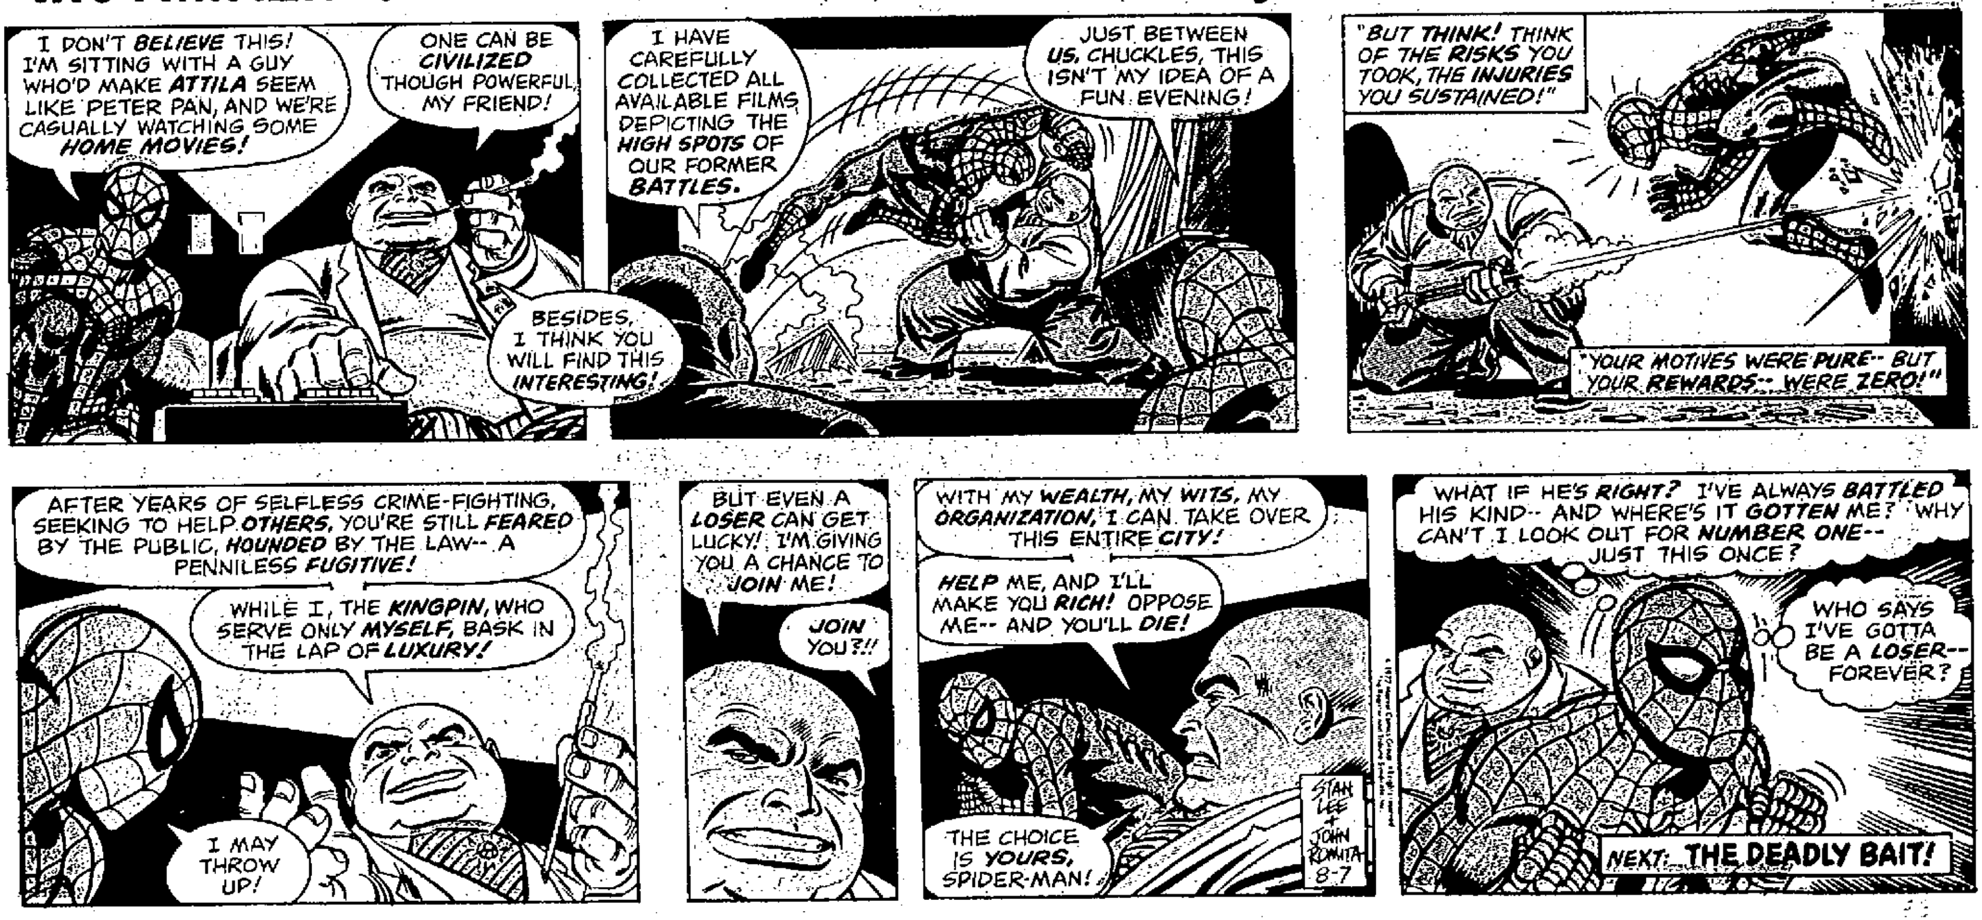
By Stan Lee and John Romita



I DON'T BELIEVE THIS! I'M SITTING WITH A GUY WHO'D MAKE ATTILA SEEM LIKE PETER PAN, AND WE'RE CASUALLY WATCHING SOME HOME MOVIES!
ONE CAN BE CIVILIZED THOUGH POWERFUL, MY FRIEND!
BESIDES, I THINK YOU WILL FIND THIS INTERESTING!
I HAVE CAREFULLY COLLECTED ALL AVAILABLE FILMS DEPICTING THE HIGH SPOTS OF OUR FORMER BATTLES.
JUST BETWEEN US, CHUCKLES, THIS ISN'T MY IDEA OF A FUN EVENING!
"BUT THINK! THINK OF THE RISKS YOU TOOK, THE INJURIES YOU SUSTAINED!"
"YOUR MOTIVES WERE PURE-- BUT YOUR REWARDS-- WERE ZERO!"
AFTER YEARS OF SELFLESS CRIME-FIGHTING, SEEKING TO HELP OTHERS, YOU'RE STILL FEARED BY THE PUBLIC, HOUNDED BY THE LAW-- A PENNILESS FUGITIVE!
WHILE I, THE KINGPIN, WHO SERVE ONLY MYSELF, BASK IN THE LAP OF LUXURY!
I MAY THROW UP!
BUT EVEN A LOSER CAN GET LUCKY! I'M GIVING YOU A CHANCE TO JOIN ME!
JOIN YOU?!!
WITH MY WEALTH, MY WITS, MY ORGANIZATION, I CAN TAKE OVER THIS ENTIRE CITY!
HELP ME, AND I'LL MAKE YOU RICH! OPPOSE ME-- AND YOU'LL DIE!
THE CHOICE IS YOURS, SPIDER-MAN!
STAN LEE + JOHN ROMITA 8-7
WHAT IF HE'S RIGHT? I'VE ALWAYS BATTLED HIS KIND-- AND WHERE'S IT GOTTEN ME? WHY CAN'T I LOOK OUT FOR NUMBER ONE-- JUST THIS ONCE?
WHO SAYS I'VE GOTTA BE A LOSER-- FOREVER?
NEXT: THE DEADLY BAIT!
